Live Wire Project

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of state for Education and Employment what discussions she has had with British Rail regarding its involvement in the live wire project. [31907]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 10 June 1996]: There have been no discussions with British Rail about its involvement in the live wire project.

Wakefield Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what funding is to be made available to the Wakefield training and enterprise council for (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97; and what specific funding was allotted to particular services or activities. [32260]

Mr. Paice: The funds made available to Wakefield training and enterprise council—TEC—by the Department were: 1994–95, £13,125,523; 1995–96, £11,144,458 (subject to audit); and in 1996–97 funding available is expected to be £9,173,455. TEC budgets can, and often do, change in the year. The funding was allotted to particular services and activities as set out in the following tables:

[1] The figure quoted is for training for work fees. Additional funding was made available for allowances paid to those in training.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the visit of a Minister from her Department to the area covered by the Wakefield TEC to discuss advice and promises of help to reduce the unemployed in the travel to work areas of Castleford and Pontefract, Wakefield and Dewsbury. [32262]

Mr. Paice: I visited the area covered by Wakefield training and enterprise council on the morning of 2 November 1995. Part of the morning included a visit to Pontefract prospect corner, one of Wakefield TEC's advice centres. I met members of staff of prospect corner and Wakefield TEC, toured the site and met some of those who have used the prospect corner facilities. Other sources of advice and help for unemployed people in the area covered by Wakefield TEC include the training for work programme run by the TEC and the range of services provided by the Employment Service, although I was not able to visit these on this occasion.

Schools (Skills Audit)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she determined that the skills audit being conducted under the chairmanship of the Cabinet Office would be able to consider the performance of schools in providing individuals with basic qualifications for employment. [32158]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 10 June 1996]: A report on the work of the skills audit will be published later this week. Schools' performance and the skills levels being attained by young people are always under scrutiny.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for education and Employment on how many occasions (a) she and (b) her ministerial colleagues have met the Deputy Prime Minister to discuss the skills audit. [32154]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 10 June 1996]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and the Deputy Prime Minister have worked closely on the audit since it was announced in the last competitiveness White Paper.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action is being taken to screen beef imports from the Irish Republic against BSE. [22818]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 26 March 1996]: Under European law, imports of beef from third countries and other member states are subject to harmonised EC animal and public health rules designed to protect against a wide range of potential health hazards.

In addition, the Beef (Emergency Control) Order 1996, as amended, prohibits the sale for human consumption of all meat derived from bovines which, at the time of slaughter, were more than 30 months old. This measure applies to all bovines slaughtered after the commencement of the order, whether in the United Kingdom or overseas, other than those slaughtered in third countries listed in the schedule to the No. 2 amendment order, where the Government are satisfied we can import beef. The Irish Republic is not included in this schedule.

As regards bovines less than 30 months of age, there are currently no EC rules in place regarding BSE which apply to beef produced in member states from such animals. We are keeping this the position under review.

Scottish Beef

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if imported beef is subject to the same level of tests and controls as Scottish produced beef. [24243]

Mrs. Browning: Under European law, imports of beef from third countries and other member states are subject to harmonised animal and public health rules designed to protect against a wide range of potential health hazards.

So far as BSE controls are concerned, the Beef (Emergency Control) Order 1996, as amended, prohibits the sale for human consumption of all meat derived from bovines which, at the time of slaughter, were more than 30 months old. This measure applies to all bovines slaughtered after the commencement of the order, whether in the United Kingdom or overseas, other than those slaughtered in third countries listed in the schedule to the No. 2 amendment order where the Government are satisfied we can import beef. This exemption does not include any countries where there have been cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

The controls applying to Scottish produced beef under the Specified Bovine Material Order 1996 do not however, apply to imported beef from third countries or other member states, although a number of countries with BSE have introduced controls requiring the removal of specified bovine offals. We are keeping the position under review.

Farm Employees (Compensation)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received in respect of the percentage of the compensation to farmers for culling cattle which will be paid in wages to the employees of farmers. [30753]

Mr. Baldry: I have received no such representations.

Cattle Culling

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the operation of the 30-month cattle slaughter scheme as it effects farmers in Buckinghamshire. [31150]

Mr. Baldry: The scheme is running at full throughput at present, given the limited rendering capacity to deal with carcases of animals slaughtered. I am aware that the geographic coverage of abattoirs operating under the scheme is not ideal in every area, including Buckinghamshire. Farmers in Buckinghamshire should use their nearest available approved collection centres to present animals under the scheme.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the cost of the proposed slaughter of the additional cattle proposed for slaughter in the week ended 18 May [31250]

Mr. Baldry: A total of 15,932 animals were slaughtered under the over 30 months scheme in the week ended 19 May. The cost of slaughtering them amounts to £1.4 million. It is not possible to calculate the cost of purchase of the animals since we do not yet have details of the weight and type of all the individual animals.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will add Baniells Meats, Milton Keynes, Buckinghamshire and Much Meat at Witney, Oxfordshire, to the list of approved abattoirs for the 30-month cattle slaughter scheme; and if he will make a statement. [31151]

Mr. Baldry: I have no plans at present to add to the existing list of abattoirs operating under the scheme. Those already operating are taking the maximum throughput possible that can be absorbed by the rendering facilities and cold storage facilities currently available.

Beef Exports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what powers the EU has cited in imposing a worldwide ban on exports of British beef. [31812]

Mrs. Browning: Commission decision 96/239/EEC on emergency measures to protect against bovine spongiform encephalopathy, which imposed a ban on the export of cattle, beef and other bovine material and products, cites article 10(4) of Council directive 90/425/EEC, concerning veterinary and zootechnical checks applicable in intra-Community trade in certain live animals and products with a view to the completion of the internal market, and article 9(4) of Council directive 89/6672/EEC, concerning veterinary checks in intra-Community trade with a view to the completion of the internal market, as the powers under which the decision is made.

Fisheries Council

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Fisheries Council held in Luxembourg on 10 June; and if he will make a statement. [32746]

Mr. Baldry: I represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of the Fisheries Council in Luxembourg on 10 June.

The Council had an initial exchange of views about the principles and objectives for the next series of measures designed to bring all member states' fishing fleets into better balance with available fish stocks. I made it clear that the UK could not agree to the possibility of further reductions in the UK fleet until there is satisfactory progress towards sorting out the problem of quota hoppers. I also drew attention to the inconsistencies in the scientific advice underlying the Commission's thinking, for example in their assessment of Irish sea stocks and the lack of any proposed reduction in industrial fishing. I stressed that the approach had to be credible and command the confidence of the industry whose livelihoods are at stake. Significant further technical work will be needed before decisions can be taken. Other member states also had difficulty with the Commission's ideas and supported our view that any measures must be seen to be necessary, fair and workable. Discussion will be resumed at the next meeting of the Council in October.

The Council agreed unanimously that the Community should at the earliest opportunity sign the United Nations agreement on straddling stocks and highly migratory fish species. It is designed to ensure international co-operation in the long term conservation and sustainable use of these fish stocks. I indicated the UK's strong support for such international measures.

The Council agreed by qualified majority, with the United Kingdom and Ireland voting against, the allocation between members states of the 1996 quotas for redfish under the North-East Atlantic Fisheries Commission NEAFC, and North-West Atlantic Fisheries Organisation, NAFO. Despite its lack of track record in the newly regulated NEAFC fishery, the UK was allocated a quota of 44 tonnes.

The Council unanimously agreed a short term arrangement so that no more than 3,000 tonnes of the 43,000 tone sprat total allowable catch for the Skaggerak and Kattegat could be fished using 16mm meshes for the remainder of 1996. This restriction is designed to limit the by-catch of juvenile herring.

The Commission reported the latest scientific advice on North sea herring. This indicates that catch reductions of 50 per cent. are necessary during the current year in order to avoid closing the fishery next year. I outlined the UK's view that early action is essential to prevent a stock collapse and to avoid a complete closure. I supported quota cuts for North sea herring this year subject to the juvenile herring by-catch in other fisheries, including industrial fisheries, being reduced in parallel; the same proportionate cut applying to both the northern and southern North sea herring stocks; and the cut in herring quotas being applied equitably to all members states. This approach secured support from a number of other members states and the Commission will be having urgent discussions with Norway before making specific proposals for action to protect the herring stocks.

The UK expressed its continuing concern about the market for farmed salmon and asked the Commission to continue to monitor the position very carefully over the summer.

Bats

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has been able to confirm rabies in the bat in East Sussex which died on 3 June; and if he will make a statement. [32745]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Tests carried out by the central veterinary laboratory have now confirmed that a bat which died in East Sussex on 3 June had rabies. The type is European Bat Lyssa Virus type II. Two people who handled and were bitten by the bat have received post-exposure treatment. A third possible contact is being followed up. No confirmed cases have previously been found in bats in Great Britain. MAFF has carried out a survey of the area where the bat was found and believe it to be an isolated individual from across the English channel. As a precaution we are arranging to monitor the local bat population for a period.

In addition a notice under the Rabies (Control) Order 1974 has been served on a premises restricting movement of other bats there and requiring cleansing and disinfection.

Collection Centres

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 22 May, Official Report, columns 211–13, if all the listed markets and assembly points now approved as collection centres, as defined in Council directive 64/432, have been observed by his Department operating in accordance with the directive; and if he will list the designated veterinarians appointed to supervise such collection centres and the collection centres for which each is responsible. [31784]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 7 June 1996]: The majority of collection centres referred to in the answer of 22 May have not yet been observed operating in accordance with Council directive 64/432/EEC. This is because many of them were approved following the European Commission decision banning exports of bovine animals from the United Kingdom. All of the approved collection centres were inspected by Ministry staff prior to approval to ensure they met the standards for approval.

It is our policy not to provide the names of the official veterinarians responsible for supervising approved collection centres. The withholding of such information is provided for under category 4, paragraph (g) of the exemptions in the code of practice on access to Government information.

Fishery Projects

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much Pesca funding is available to fishery projects in England in 1996–97; how much was paid in 1995–96; and if he will list those projects funded and the amount each project received. [32162]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 10 June 1996]: Under the Pesca community initiative, funds of 18.5 mecu—£15.5 million—have been allocated to fishing dependent areas in England for the period 1995–99. Pesca aid is available under the financial instrument for fisheries guidance, for specific fisheries measures to assist the fisheries industry to restructure. Aid is also available under the European regional development fund for measures to develop businesses and under the European social fund for employment training. An indicative breakdown of the funds for the period 1995–99 is shown in the table. The table also shows the national back-up funding which will be required.

In addition to this, a further 5.88 mecu—£4.79 million—has been awarded to the United Kingdom from the European Commission's community initiative reserve, but details of its allocation are awaited from the Commission.

Pesca was launched in England on 14 February and the scheme is now open to applications. Local working groups, including regional partners and local fisheries organisations, have been set up to determine local strategies and priorities for the use of funds. No grants have yet been awarded but decisions on the first round of applications are expected soon.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 1 May, Official Report, columns 564–65, what were the EU destinations of the cattle exported for (a) breeding or further fattening and (b) slaughter from Northern Ireland in 1995. [31205]

Mr. Ancram: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is set out in the table:

Republic of Ireland	192	1,150
Belgium	539	—
France	1,359	—

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Exports Ban

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs by what legislative provision the EU has power to ban United Kingdom exports to third countries; and when that provision came into force. [31762]

Mr. David Davis: Export of goods from the UK to third countries is principally governed by the EC's common commercial policy. That policy is based on article 113 of the EC treaty, and is given effect in a range of measures, including the common rules for exports. However, certain export prohibitions might, depending on the goods in question or the aim of the prohibition, be based on other articles of the treaty, or on powers in subordinate legislation adopted under those articles. Exercise of these powers is subject to the principle of proportionality.

Visitor Visas

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the number of visitor applications made, (b) the number of visas granted and (c) the number of illegal overstays from the visas issued in respect of each British embassy in the last available year. [32210]

Mr. Hanley: In view of the amount of detail needed to answer this question, I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many applications for visitor visas have been rejected by the entry clearance officers in Pakistan in the last year; and how many were rejected in the year before the removal of the right of appeal. [32182]

Mr. Hanley: Entry clearance officers in Pakistan refused 12,218 visit visa applications in 1995. In 1992, the year prior to the removal of appeals against visit visa refusals, the number was 11,012.

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of the applications for visitor visas rejected by the high commission in Pakistan in the past year were (a) fathers and (b) mothers of people resident in the United Kingdom. [32184]

Mr. Hanley: This information is not readily available at post and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people intending to apply for visitor visas in the past year were informed by the high commission in Pakistan that they should not make a formal application because they would have no chance of success. [32191]

Mr. Hanley: An entry clearance officer may advise an applicant to withdraw his/her visa application only if it is unlikely to succeed. In 1995, 13,717 applicants were so advised at the high commission in Islamabad.

Nuclear Test Ban Treaty

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the draft text of the comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty agreed by the United Nations conference on disarmament on 28 May. [32049]

Mr. David Davis: A copy of the draft comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty, tabled by the chairman of the negotiations on 28 May, has been placed in the Library of the House.

Land Mines

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's timetable for the elimination of the use of land mines worldwide. [30908]

Mr. David Davis: We will press for the earliest possible international agreement on a total world-wide ban on anti-personnel land mines.

EU Council

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those EU decisions requiring unanimity which are on the agenda of EU Council meetings over the next three months. [31959]

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion, expressed as a percentage and in numbers of EU Council measures requiring unanimity have been opposed by the Government because of their non-co-operation strategy when they would otherwise have supported them; and if he will list these measures. [32290]

Mr Davis: The decisions blocked between the Prime Minister's statement on 21 May and 7 June are set out in my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's answer to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) today. The majority of those decisions have been blocked as a consequence of the non-co-operation policy, and the UK stands ready to agree them as soon as a framework is in place for lifting the beef export ban.

Burma

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Burma about forced labour. [32355]

Mr. Hanley: The United Kingdom has had no ministerial contact with the ruling military regime in Burma, the State Law and Order Restoration Council.

Officials have consistently expressed our concern about the use of forced labour in Burma, both in international forums and directly to the SLORC. We shall continue to do so.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Buckley Hall Prison

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number and types of incidents reported to the Prison Service since 1 March in relation to Buckley Hall prison. [30679]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 12 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number and types of incidents reported to the Prison Service since 1 March in relation to Buckley Hall prison.

The requested information is given in the following table:

	Number
Assaults	5
Concerted indiscipline	1
Drugs	12
Escape	1
Fire	5
Miscellaneous	1
Recapture/surrender	14
Temporary release failure	5
Total	44

Prison Escapes

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are unlawfully at large having failed to return from authorised leave at each male category C prison. [30806]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 12 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners who are unlawfully at large having failed to return from authorised leave at each male category C prison.

The information is not available in the form requested however, between 1 April 1995 and 31 March 1996, 271 prisoners failed to return to male category C prisons after being temporarily released on licence. In the same period, 1,458 prisoners who were unlawfully at large were recaptured or surrendered themselves.

The figures are not directly comparable because those prisoners who were recaptured or who surrendered between 1 April 1995 and 31 March 1996 include those released during that period and before.

The 1,458 figure includes all prisoners who were unlawfully at large from any prison for any reason, including temporary release failures, absconds from open prisons and escapees.

Also, recaptured prisoners sometimes use different names on return to custody and are often taken back into custody in a part of the country different from their destination when granted temporary release from prison.

Following changes to the Prison Rules in April 1995, the new scheme for release on temporary licence introduced tighter controls including a stringent risk assessment. Since the introduction of the new scheme, the number of prisoners who have failed to return has fallen by 75 per cent. Since August 1995, the Prisoners (Return to Custody) Act makes it a criminal offence for any person to remain unlawfully at large following the expiry of the temporary release licence.

The Act also gives the police increased powers to enter and search premises without a warrant in order to recapture those unlawfully at large. These provisions were designed to ensure that prisoners do not abuse the trust placed in them when granted a period of temporary release on licence.

Recruitment

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spent in recruiting staff to his Department and its executive agencies during the 1994–95 and 1995-96 financial years; and how many staff were recruited in each of these years. [31391]

Mr. Howard: Excluding the Prison Service and recruitment undertaken locally within the main Home Office, apart from the immigration and nationality directorate, the Home Office spent £824,829 in 1994–95 on the recruitment of 939 staff. In 1995–96, the Home Office spent £1,059,426 on the recruitment of 1,172 staff. These figures exclude staff costs. Figures for the Prison Service and recruitment undertaken locally within the main Home Office, apart from the immigration and nationality directorate, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Fires

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was, for each fire authority in England and Wales the number of (a) fires and (b) injuries and fatalities sustained in fires on residential, holiday and touring caravan sites in the years 1990 to 1995 inclusive; [31857]

(2) what was the number of (a) fires and (b) injuries and fatalities sustained in fires in each fire authority in Scotland on residential, holiday and touring caravan sites in the years 1990 to 1995. [31856]

Mr. Sackville: The readily available information for England and Wales and Scotland is given in the first table, with 1993 data for each fire authority given in the second table. Data for each separate fire authority for each year could be produced only at disproportionate cost. Data for 1994 and 1995 are not yet available.

British Citizens

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many British citizens with right of abode in the United Kingdom are currently living in (a) the European Union, (b) Commonwealth countries, (c) the United States of America, (d) Switzerland and (e) the rest of the world outside the United Kingdom. [32027]

Mr. Kirkhope: There were 420,000 British citizens resident in other countries now in the European Union and 19,000 resident in Switzerland on 1 January 1993. Later data, and the other information requested, are not available.

Constitutional Unit

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the creation of the new constitutional unit in his office and list its responsibilities. [32265]

Mr. Howard: The constitutional unit was set up as part of the reorganisation of the Home Office which followed its senior management review. It is responsible for advice on the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, elections, human rights and royal and constitutional issues.

TREASURY

Census (Welsh Language)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will ensure that the census in the year 2001 includes questions relating to the number of people in Wales who understand the Welsh language. [31307]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The census offices expect to include questions in the 2001 census in Wales on whether respondents understand, speak, read and write Welsh. This would provide additional information to the questions asked in the 1991 census which covered speaking, reading, and writing Welsh, but not understanding Welsh.

Self-assessment

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what reports he has received of difficulties experienced by the Inland Revenue in respect of self-assessment income tax returns in the pilot areas operating this scheme. [31423]

Mr. Jack: A prototype of the self-assessment tax return has been used in a trial in Leicester involving 5,000 taxpayers. Results of that trial are currently being evaluated and a report will be published later in the year. I understand that this will suggest that the results are in line with Inland Revenue expectations of taxpayer behaviour. Feedback from the trial did inform the continuing consultation on the self-assessment tax return and a number of changes were made to the return as a result of live trial experiences.

Exchange Rates

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the movement each month in 1996 of the pound against (a) the US dollar and (b) the German mark. [31931]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Figures for monthly averages in 1996 of sterling's exchange rate against the dollar and the deutschmark are as follows:

	£/$	£/DM
January 1996	1.53	2.24
February 1996	1.54	2.25
March 1996	1.53	2.26
April 1996	1.52	2.28
May 1996	1.51	2.32

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received regarding re-entry into the European exchange rate mechanism at existing parities with particular reference to the effect on exports; and if he will make a statement. [31933]

Mrs. Knight: None. The UK will not rejoin the European exchange rate mechanism during this Parliament, and there is no question of us ever rejoining a rigid, old-style exchange rate mechanism.

Nationalised Industries

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total amount of public funds invested in the nationalised industries since 1966 in 1996 prices. [31926]

Mr. Waldegrave: The total amount of capital expenditure by public corporations, which include the nationalised industries, from 1966–67 to 1994–95 was £358 billion at 1994–95 prices. Of that, £135 billion was financed by capital grants or net lending from the general government sector. No separate information on the nationalised industries is held for the earlier part of this period.

Civil Servants (Duties Abroad)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor the Exchequer how much his Department spent during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 on sending civil servants accompanying Ministers from his Department on official duties abroad. [32412]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Expenditure on travel and subsistence overseas in the two years is included in the published running costs.

Information Technology

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the readiness of his Department's information technology projects for the start of income tax self-assessment in April 1997. [31782]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 7 June 1996]: The information technology system for self-assessment is being developed in the form of a number of related tranches. Their readiness to perform the task of delivering self-assessment will be assessed on a continuing basis as software testing is undertaken during the remainder of this year and the early part of 1987.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the likely cost overrun on the information technology projects associated with the move to income tax self-assessment; and if he will make a statement. [31791]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 7 June 1996]: The Inland Revenue is keeping costs to completion of the information technology projects under continuous review. These costs remain within budget.

Insider Dealing

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to amend legislation in relation to the offence of insider dealing; and if he will make a statement. [32058]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 10 June 1996]: I have no proposals to amend part V of the Criminal Justice Act 1993. An order will be made shortly under section 64(2) of that Act to update the lists of regulated markets in the Insider Dealing (Securities and Regulated Markets) Order 1994.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which grant-maintained schools have hosted "Going GM" open days at the request of the Department; how many invitations have been issued to each; how many people have attended each; what has been the cost of each; and how many further such open days it is planned to hold. [28608]

Mrs. Gillan: GM schools "open days" have given head teachers and governors from local authority schools opportunities to see how GM schools are run and to discuss the implications of GM status with staff and governors. Since March 1994 the Department has supported 26 such open days, with a further six scheduled to take place this term. We do not hold information on the number of invitations sent. An average of 14 delegates attend each of the days held so far. Costs vary, because schools make their own arrangements. The average cost so far, where a claim has been submitted, is some £430 for staff costs, including preparation for the day, and some £540 for other costs such as administered and catering. The average cost per head is some £70. We are reviewing the range of activities undertaken to provide information about the GM programme, taking account of the forthcoming White Paper on extending self-government for schools.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the criteria for the nomination and selection of members of training and enterprise councils; and if she will make a statement. [32477]

Mr. Paice: Training and enterprise councils are private companies. The appointment of directors to TEC boards is determined by the members of the company acting in accordance with the company's articles of association and the eligibility conditions set by the TEC's contract with Government. It is for each TEC to decide on its own membership in accordance with the TEC National Council's "Framework for the Local Accountability of TECs" which has as its first principle clarity and openness in the selection of well-qualified and trained board members.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Overseas Development Assistance

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of the overseas development assistance budget is spent on projects and programmes which are primarily designed to meet the objective of the promotion of democracy and good governance. [32470]

Mr. Hanley: ODA bilateral assistance in 1994–95 totalled £1,120 million. Our policy information marker system covered £624.5 million, of which £164.3 million or 26 per cent. was spent on projects and programmes where good government was either a principal or significant objective. We are not able to disaggregate our multilateral contributions to identify expenditure on good government.

Mrs. Kudirat Abiola

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received about the likely motive for the murder of Chief Abiola's wife, Mrs. Kudirat Abiola, on 4 June. [32513]

Mr. Hanley: We have received no reports about the likely motive. We welcome the Nigerian Government's undertaking to investigate the circumstances of Mrs. Abiola's death promptly and to bring those responsible to justice.

ENVIRONMENT

Recruitment

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much his Department spent in recruiting staff to his Department and its executive agencies during the 1994–95 and 1995–96 financial years; and how many staff were recruited in each of these years. [31393]

Sir Paul Beresford: In 1994–95 and 1995–96 the number of permanent staff recruited to the central Department and executive agencies, and the cost of that recruitment was as follows:

Year	Numbers recruited	Cost £000
Central Department
1994–95	37	216
1995–96	17	51
Executive agencies[1]
1995–96	129	173
HSE
1995–96	154	145

[1] Excluding the Health and Safety Executive (HSE).

Women (Promotion)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures her Department has implemented during the last 12 months to encourage the promotion of women into senior positions with his Department and its executive agencies; and what progress her Department has made in encouraging the promotion of women over the last five years. [31543]

Sir Paul Beresford: Specific action increasing opportunities for women over the last 12 months includes the issue of guidance to remind staff about the Department's policy on sexual harassment and their rights and responsibilities; detailed analysis of a new internal advertising scheme for job vacancies to ensure that it operates fairly; and the preparation of a leaflet on equal opportunities publicising the Department's policy. Items of particular relevance to women cover flexible working and coping with caring responsibilities; plans to reimburse additional expenses for the care of elderly and infirm dependents when the normal working routine is broken; and as a follow-up to a departmental review and staff attitude survey, a study is being undertaken to consider to what extent long hours working impacts on staff and how it might be reduced.

Most of the above initiatives were taken under the Department's action plan for women published in 1993. Many others have been in place since then or earlier. They include:

(a) a range of equal opportunities training for staff including senior management and women-only developmental training;

(b) flexible and part-time working arrangements;

(c) career breaks with a keeping in touch scheme;

(d) workplace nursery and holiday play scheme arrangements, and provision of reimbursement of additional child care costs incurred when normal working routines are broken;

(e) raising awareness through membership of Business in the Community's Opportunity 2000 campaign and the Parents at Work organisation;

(f) the appointment of equal opportunity liaison officers in each directorate to help promote equal opportunities in the workplace and reflect local needs;

(g) ensuring that wherever possible a woman serves on promotion and selection panels and that these panels take account of equal opportunities issues;

(h) monitoring success rate by gender applies to all stages of recruitment and promotion boards, annual performance and promotability markings, performance pay and bonuses, internal postings and part-time working. Any significant disparities between the success rates of men and women are investigated with a view to making improvements to procedures;

Progress on all equal opportunities measures is reported to the Department's management board annually and the results of the continuous monitoring are made available to all staff. The percentage of women in the Department has increased from 34 per cent. in 1991 to 42 per cent. in April 1996. Currently, 23 per cent. of staff in the top three grades are women exceeding the existing civil service-wide benchmark of 15 per cent.

Coal Industry (Accidents)

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he has had with the Health and Safety Executive regarding the substantial increase in major accidents in the deep coal mining industry for 1995–96. [31930]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. The mines inspectorate of HSE conducts an investigation into all major accidents in the coal industry.

While there has been an increase in serious accidents, the overall trend in reported accidents, including fatalities, continues on a downward trend. Every effort must be made to reduce accidents further, but the UK deep coal mining industry remains one of the safest in the world.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to inquire into the management of safety in the deep coal mining industry following the increases in major accident figures in 1995–96. [31929]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. I am satisfied that the mines inspectorate of HSE give proper priority to ensuring the effective management of safety in the deep coal mining industry.

While there has been an increase in serious accidents, the overall trend in reported accidents, including fatalities, continues on a downward trend. Every effort must be made to reduce accidents further but the UK deep coal mining industry remains one of the safest in the world.

Housing and Council Tax Benefits

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to make the payment of housing benefit and council tax benefit in the areas of local authority work to be subject to compulsory competitive tendering. [31972]

Sir Paul Beresford: Our proposals for changes to the framework for compulsory competitive tendering for professional services includes a proposal to raise the percentage of financial services work which must be exposed to competition from 35 per cent. to 65 per cent., and limit the availability of exemptions from CCT for authorities which cannot meet that requirement without exposing benefits work to competition. The legal definition of financial services work includes benefits work and relevant authorities may well choose to expose this work to competition in order to meet their competition requirements.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has in the event of private sector management of the payment of housing and council tax benefits to ensure (a) confidentiality of claimant information and (b) adequate training in the processing of claims. [31973]

Sir Paul Beresford: Statutory guidance on the conduct of compulsory competitive tendering—DOE circular 5/96—advises that it is for local authorities to specify the work to be done and the standards which must be met. Within this framework, it is for relevant local authorities to ensure that the confidentiality of claimant information is properly protected and that staff who are processing claims have appropriate training.

Further guidance in relation to housing and council tax benefit is contained within DSS circular HB/CTB A2/95.

Private Sector

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment where the private sector has competed for public sector work in the last five years, what percentage of work it has won. [31974]

Sir Paul Beresford: Latest available figures from the November 1995 survey by the Local Government Management Board show that the private sector held 25 per cent. of contracts, by value, tendered by local authorities under the Local Government Act 1988. The Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy figures for 1994–95 for work tendered under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 show the private sector holding 56 per cent. of contracts, by value.

Voluntary Contracting Out

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has made to the conclusion of the report of the Business Services Association in respect of voluntary contracting out, a copy of which has been sent to him. [31975]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Secretary of State agrees with the Business Services Association that many local authorities have failed to secure for their electorates and taxpayers the benefits of private sector provision of public sector services. Voluntary contracting out is one way of securing such benefits. It is pleasing to note that the director general of the Business Services Association has welcomed our proposals for changes to the framework for compulsory competitive tendering of professional services, which we announced on 21 May.

Asbestos

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many tonnes of asbestos has been imported into the United Kingdom in each year since 1970. [32031]

Mr. Clappison: This information is not available in the required form. However, it is estimated that imports of asbestos peaked in 1973 at around 195,000 tonnes, and have since declined to around 11,000 tonnes per annum. Imports of blue and brown asbestos ceased in 1972 and 1980 respectively.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many prosecutions have been made since 1970 for breach of asbestos regulations. [32035]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information is readily available only since 1 April 1986. The latest year for which information is available is 1994–95. The number of informations laid under asbestos regulations by inspectors in HSE's field operations directorate since 1 April 1986 is shown in the table:

Regulations	Informations laid from 1986/87 to 1994/95
Asbestos Regulations 1969[1]	35
Asbestos (Licensing) Regulations 1983	133
Asbestos (Prohibitions) Regulations 1985[2]	nil
Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1987	269
Asbestos (Prohibitions) Regulations 1992	nil

[1] Revoked from 1 March 1988
[2] Revoked from 1 January 1993.

Details of proceedings taken by other enforcing authorities under the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 are not readily available.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the research which he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the development of knowledge of the hazardous properties of asbestos. [32033]

Mr. Clappison: The hazardous properties of asbestos are well known and have been extensively researched by my Department. The results of that work and work commissioned by others are well documented in the scientific literature. Recently, the Department of the Environment has been researching the risks to health from exposure to asbestos in the non-workplace environment. The results of this research will be published early next year. Information on DOE's research programme is published biannually in "Research Report, DOE Science". In addition, the Helath and Safety Executive continues its programme of research into the hazards of asbestos and other fibrous materials in the workplace. Information on HSE's research programme is given in its publication "Mainstream Research Market 1996–97". HSE will also shortly publish a review of the toxicology of fibrous materials.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many approvals the Health and Safety Executive has withdrawn for respiratory protective equipment associated with asbestos work since January 1990. [32028]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. However, since July 1995, new respiratory protective equipment has not required the Health and Safety Executive's approval.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money the Health and Safety Executive has spent on researching measures to prevent exposure to asbestos at the workplace for each year since 1986. [31989]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is not readily available in a disaggregated form. The Health and Safety Executive sponsors a wide-ranging programme of research to underpin its enforcement, technical standard-setting and policy work. Some of this addresses measures to prevent exposure to asbestos specifically, but other parts of it cover more general aspects of exposure control that nevertheless have an impact on controlling exposure to asbestos.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much asbestos is currently estimated to exist in United Kingdom buildings. [31991]

Mr. Clappison: This information is not available in the required form. However, the Department of the Environment has commissioned research to estimate the amount of asbestos in homes. The results of this research will be published early next year.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many notifications of asbestos work have been recorded by the Health and Safety Executive for each year since 1986. [31993]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Health and Safety Executive does not maintain a central record of notifications received by its area offices under the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1987 or under the conditions of licences granted under the Asbestos (Licensing) Regulations 1983. However, a telephone survey of HSE area offices undertaken in December 1995 produced the following figures:

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many tonnes of asbestos roof tiles were imported into the United Kingdom in each year since 1990. [32030]

Mr. Clappison: This information is not available in the required form. However, it is estimated that around 40 per cent. of the asbestos currently imported into the United Kingdom is used for producing asbestos cement, and this cement is largely used for roofing products and slates.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which asbestos products are currently used in building materials. [32034]

Mr. Clappison: White asbestos may be used in building materials apart from those products specified in the schedule to the Asbestos (Prohibitions) Regulations 1992 (SI 3067). In practice, the main current use of asbestos is in asbestos cement roofing products and cladding. The use of blue and brown asbestos was banned in 1986 and this ban was extended to all other forms of amphibole asbestos in 1993.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money has been provided by the Health and Safety Executive for campaign work aimed at raising (a) employee and (b) public awareness of the dangers of asbestos for each year since 1990. [31990]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Health and Safety Executive's campaign on raising awareness of the risks from asbestos is aimed at both employees and employers, and so expenditure on campaigns aimed at employees only cannot be distinguished. The expenditure on publicity campaigns addressed to both employers and employees is shown in the table:

Year	Employers and employees £
1990–91	nil
1991–92	nil
1992–93	nil
1993–94	nil
1994–95	469,700
1995–96	2,000
1996–97 (to date)	5,500

This does not include internal staff costs, such as action by HSE inspectors. Further expenditure on raising awareness of asbestos amongst employers and employees will be incurred this year during the second phase of HSE's campaign "Good Health is Good Business".

The Health and Safety Executive is not responsible for raising public awareness of the dangers of asbestos, and has therefore incurred no expenditure in this respect. The Department of the Environment published a leaflet for the public on asbestos in housing in 1991 and is currently preparing a revised version of this guidance.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in what year (a) blue and (b) brown asbestos was prohibited from being used as a construction industry material. [32007]

Mr. Clappison: The marketing and use of blue and brown asbestos, and materials containing those minerals, was prohibited under the Asbestos (Prohibition) Regulations 1985 (SI 910) which came into force on 1 January 1986.

Rents

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the annual average rent increase for (i) developing housing associations, (ii) council and (iii) private tenants since 1988. [32039]

Mr. Clappison: The available information is that council rents increased at an average annual rate of 10.7 per cent. per annum between April 1988 and April 1995, and private rents by an average of 15 per cent. per annum between 1988 and 1994–95. These increases make no allowance for changes in the mix of property quality and type over the period.

The estimate for private tenants is from the family expenditure survey and, like all estimates from sample surveys, is subject to sampling variability.

Information is not available centrally on rent increases by developing housing associations for periods prior to March 1993.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times the director general of the Health and Safety Executive has met members of the deregulation unit during (a) 1994, (b) 1995 and (c) 1996. [31988]

Sir Paul Beresford: The current director general of the Health and Safety Executive, Miss Jenny Bacon, took up post in July 1995. Since then she has met members of the Cabinet Office deregulation unit—CODU—on two occasions. She has also been to two other meetings where members of CODU have been present. Information about meetings prior to this is not available.

Respiratory Protective Equipment

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many research projects the Health and Safety Executive has funded in the past five years which analysed the effectiveness of respiratory protective equipment. [31992]

Sir Paul Beresofrd: Ten.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which respiratory protective equipment has been identified to give less protection than claimed by the manufacturer in research projects funded by the Health and Safety Executive in the last five years. [32008]

Sir Paul Beresford: Research projects funded by the Health and Safety Executive in the last five years have examined the field performance of respiratory protective equipment, including full-facepiece powered respirators, compared with their performance in laboratory-based tests. The HSE is not aware that manufacturers claim that respiratory protective equipment will always meet in practice the standard of protection that can be achieved in laboratory tests, so it is not possible to say from the HSE's research which respirators given less protection than that claimed.

The HSE has for some time advised users of respirators that they should not rely on laboratory-derived information alone when choosing appropriate respiratory protective equipment.

Health and Safety Commission

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many consultation documents the Health and Safety Commission has published for public consultation in each year since 1988. [32029]

Sir Paul Beresford: The figures requested are set out in the table:

Calendar year	Number of Consultation documents
1989	15
1990	8
1992	13
1993	16
1994	13
1995	16
1996	10

Housing Associations

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies his Department has undertaken to evaluate the comparative efficiency of tenant-managed housing associations. [31984]

Mr. Clappison: Ten case studies comparing tenant management organisations with locally matched social housing managed by local authorities and housing associations were carried out between 1991 and 1994. A report, "Tenants in Control: an evaluation of tenant led housing management organisations", was published last September. A copy is available in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on investments by housing associations in derivatives. [31985]

Mr. Clappison: Housing associations are allowed to use derivatives only in order to reduce risk and, in particular, the risk of interest rates fluctuating. Each derivative transaction must match a corresponding identified risk. Speculation is not permitted. Guidance on investment in derivatives by housing associations is set out in Housing Corporation circular 11/95.

Working Times

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the circumstances in which a 12-hour working shift would be considered a risk to health and safety. [32032]

Sir Paul Beresford: Employers are required to carry out assessments to identify the risks to the health and safety of their employees, including any which might result from working hours. There is no definitive list of circumstances where working 12 hours shifts might be considered a risk to health and safety, but employers might consider factors such as the nature of the work, its physical or mental demands, the level of concentration required and whether it is safety critical.

Rents

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the annual average rent increase for non-developing housing association tenants in each year since 1988 in (a) cash and (b) real terms. [32040]

Mr. Clappison: This information is not held centrally.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what estimate he has made of the number of new black and minority ethnic construction firms or consultancies which (a) have been able to start up and (b) develop further, from the projects that have been funded in inner-city areas; [31962]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of black and minority ethnic construction firms or consultancies which the banks have assisted in (i) the last financial year and (ii) in the last five years; [31963]

(3) how many black and minority ethnic construction firms or consultancies, as defined by the Commission of Racial Equality, are on the approved contractors list of local authorities in London. [31964]

Mr. Clappison: No data are available centrally to answer these questions.

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many black and minority ethnic construction firms or consultancies (i) are currently and (ii) are planned to be engaged in capital projects under (a) round 1 single regeneration budget challenge fund projects in London and (b) round 2 single regeneration budget challenge fund projects in London. [31965]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is not available. Partnerships are required in the grant offer letter not to discriminate unlawfully against any person on the grounds of sex or race.

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken to ensure that black and minority ethnic businesses are able to compete successfully as part of the single regeneration budget challenge fund programme in London and the regions. [31966]

Sir Paul Beresford: The SRB challenge fund bidding guidance clearly states that bids for funding must be supported by partnerships representing all those with a key interest, including ethnic minority communities. Challenge fund objectives also address the need to involve ethnic minorities; these include enhancing the employment prospects, education and skills of local people, particularly the young and those at a disadvantage, promoting equality of opportunity and promoting initiatives of benefit to ethnic minorities.

Over a third of successful SRB challenge fund schemes in the first two bidding rounds are specifically targeted at ethnic minorities. In addition, over 60 per cent. of successful round 2 schemes will include outputs for which ethnic minorities are intended beneficiaries.

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps are being taken to monitor the success of local authority equal opportunities policies, with particular reference to the awarding of contracts for capital projects under the single regeneration budget challenge fund programme in London and in the regions. [31967]

Sir Paul Beresford: No formal monitoring of equal opportunities policies is carried out. Local authorities are required to comply with the law relating to equal opportunities. In the specific case of the SRB challenge fund, all successful partnerships are made aware of the need to comply with this law in the grant offer letter and are directed to the codes of practice issued by the Commission for Racial Equality and the Equal Opportunities Commission for further advice.

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of the single regeneration budget—SRB—challenge fund (a) has been paid to and (b) is planned to be paid to black and minority ethnic construction firms or consultancies in (i) round 1 SRB challenge fund year by year in London and (ii) round 2 SRB challenge fund year by year in London. [31968]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is not available.

Thamesmead Town Ltd.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many properties have been sold to tenants of Thamesmead Town Ltd. who had the preserved right to buy. [32455]

Mr. Clappison: Thamesmead Town Ltd. has sold 860 residential properties and 11 garages to tenants who had the preserved right to buy.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many properties have been sold by Thamesmead Town Ltd. since the company took over from the London residuary body; and what was the figure for capital receipts for each year. [32456]

Mr. Clappison: The number of properties sold by Thamesmead Town since the company took over from the London residuary body is as follows:

	Number
Residential land sales	11
Industrial land sales	2
Right to buy units sold	860
Garages sold	12
Equity share property sold	1
Void property sold	1

Capital receipts for each year were:

1990–91: £1,546,000

1991–92: £876,000

1993–94: £3,165,000

1995–96: £768,000

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of public subsidy Thamesmead Town Ltd. has received either in cash or reliefs, allowances or benefits in kind since its creation. [32457]

Mr. Clappison: Since its creation, Thamesmead Town Ltd. has received the following public subsidy:

Outside Toilets

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many residential properties (a) in England and (b) in the local authority area of Manchester and Trafford still depend on outside toilets. [32515]

Mr. Clappison: Figures for the number of residential properties with outside toilets are not available at local authority level. The census does, however, give figures for households. These will be slightly higher because a property can contain more than one household. The 1991 census found 78,640 households living in dwellings with no inside WC. Of these, 911 households lived in Manchester and 180 in Trafford.

Merseyside Property Development Fund

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the Merseyside property development fund to commence operation; what are the main aims of the fund; and how much is being invested in the fund by each of its partners. [31824]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 7 June 1996]: The proposal for a Merseyside property development fund is being developed by English Partnerships in discussion with other objective 1 partners. The objective of the fund would be to encourage greater private sector investment in the Merseyside property market.

The applicant is exploring appropriate structures and financing mechanisms. It is envisaged that there will be funding from EP, objective 1 European regional development fund, and the private sector. Due to the complex nature of the proposals, it is difficult to forecast when the fund will be operational.

TRANSPORT

Port of Tyne Authority

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ask those who made written representations in respect of the proposed privatisation of the Port of Tyne authority if it has any objections to these being placed in the Library. [31311]

Mr. Norris: I understand that the Port of Tyne authority has already asked those who made representation whether they have any objection to the details being so deposited.

Highway Improvement Schemes

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the cost evaluation techniques used by his Department for major highway on-line improvement schemes with particular reference to the range of costs associated with the maintenance of traffic flows; and what reliability tests are applied to these evaluations. [32037]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Llew Smith, dated 12 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question concerning the cost evaluation techniques used for major on-line improvement schemes.

The Agency uses similar economic evaluation techniques for all the schemes in the Road Programme whether they be a bypass on a new alignment or an on-line widening. This involves the assessment of all the capital and maintenance costs of the scheme and the benefits to road users in reduced congestion and accident savings over a 30 year period. All these costs and benefits are discounted to a common price base and present value year to give a Net Present Value for the scheme.

Traffic forecasts for such a long period into the future are naturally subject to uncertainty because of the effects of factors such as the price of fuel and the future economic performance of the country (in terms of GDP) for which assumptions have to be made. The Department of Transport has, for some time, recognised this uncertainty and publishes "high growth" and "low growth" national traffic forecasts, representing the range of what is likely to happen. These forecasts are incorporated into the Department of Transport's COBA (Cost Benefit Analysis) computer program which is used to assess the day to day benefits in terms of time saving, fuel savings and accident reductions. The enclosed booklet "GETTING THE BEST ROADS FOR OUR MONEY" describes the basic principles.

The cost of delays and accidents during construction and maintenance works over a 30 year period are assessed using the Department of Transport's QUADRO (Queues And Delays at Roadwork) computer program. This program assesses the cost of delays in terms of increased fuel cost, vehicle occupants' time and accidents. It can take account of different traffic management arrangements, e.g. number of lanes closed, length etc. including the availability of a suitable diversion route.

All appraisals are scrutinised by Departmental or Agency staff as agreed by the Department.

The parameters and values used in the computer programs are based on research and updated when necessary. The Highways Agency's Research Programme includes projects which have the objective of improving network safety and efficiency by reducing delay and accidents at roadworks. In the current financial year the following projects may produce benefits in this area:-

Study of Accidents and Incidents at Roadwork

This study will update the current information about the causes, types and frequencies of accidents and incidents at roadwork and may identify improvements to the techniques used.

Merging Traffic at Roadwork

This research will provide information about possible ways of improving the capacity at merge points resulting from lane closures.

If this work produces information that could affect the calculations in QUADRO or COBA the results will be passed to the Department's Central Transport Group for incorporation into the computer programs.

London Underground

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guarantees against the failure of the power supply to London Underground his Department has required, and from which parties, following the tendering exercise. [31977]

Mr. Norris: None. This is an operational matter and any such guarantees will be a matter for discussion in due course between London Underground and the preferred bidder for its Power PFI project.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if staff members' pensions will be restored to their original value in the event of a failure of a contractor to meet the standards required by London Transport in supplying electrical power to the underground and that contract being returned to London Underground; [31979]

(2) if staff pensions will be preserved when transferred to companies bidding for the power supply to London Underground. [31978]

Mr. Norris: I understand that London Underground will require the chosen contractor under its Power PFI project to offer the staff who will transfer to him pension arrangements which are broadly comparable with the existing London Transport pension scheme. In the event that a contractor defaulted and the relevant staff transferred back to London Underground until a new contract could be let, it is likely that they would temporarily rejoin the LT pension scheme.

Swedish Minelayer

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how the Marine Safety Agency determined the ownership of the former Swedish minelayer MUL 16. [32209]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Rupert Allason, dated 12 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your question about the ownership of the former Swedish minelayer MUL 16.

The ownership of MUL 16 has not been determined by the Marine Safety Agency (MSA). In my letter to you of 16 February I explained that the Registrar General of Seamen and Shipping was awaiting a number of documents, including proof of ownership before proceeding with the registration of this vessel. The necessary information has not been obtained to enable the ownership of MUL 16 to be determined in accordance with the Merchant Shipping (Registration of Ships) Regulations 1993, as amended.

Glasgow Vehicle Registration Office

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what basis the appeal board in the recent trawl for executive officers in the Glasgow vehicle registration office turned down candidates on appeal when those candidates had shown that the information given to the original sift panel was incorrect and produced additional information to support their applications. [32439]

Mr. Norris: The original sift board had already taken a balanced view of the inconsistencies that it had identified between certain comments on some of the trawl application forms and the wider evidence available to it for reviewing at least three years' annual staff reports and the attendance records of all applicants.

The letter sent to unsuccessful candidates failed to make this clear. These should have explained that, given the high level of competition—15 candidates for two vacancies—only applicants with the strongest claim had been shortlisted for interview. Unfortunately, would-be appellants were instead led to believe that recent comments of their line manager on their application forms had been paramount in deciding not to call them for interview.

The appeals board considered appeals from eight applicants, but in all but one case there was no significant new information which the original sift board had not already taken into account. The original shortlist of applicants to be interviewed increased from five to six.

Subsequently, at a meeting sought by officials of the Civil and Public Services Association on 3 June, the procedures of the sift and appeals board were explained to the satisfaction of those present. Exceptionally, it was agreed to increase the number of candidates to be interviewed for the two vacancies from six to eight, and a detailed letter of explanation was sent to the CPSA national official for distribution to his members at Glasgow vehicle registration office.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria were used by the sift panel in the recent trawl for executive officers in the Glasgow vehicle registration office. [32440]

Mr. Norris: The sift panel considered 15 applications for the two executive officer vacancies at Glasgow vehicle registration office. It reviewed the information on the trawl application forms against the evidence of the applicants' annual staff reports and attendance report to establish those whose skills and personal qualities best matched the job descriptions in the trawl notice. The shortlist of five applicants originally selected for interview included two established executive officers from outside the VRO, as well as three administrative officers from within seeking to fill the vacancies on promotion.

Deaf Drivers

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps the Driving Standards Agency has taken to ensure that deaf candidates are not at a disadvantage when undertaking the practical part of the driving test. [32404]

Mr. Norris: The DSA has well-established procedures to assist deaf or hard-of-hearing candidates to take the driving test. The test application form invites persons with special needs, such as hearing difficulties, to draw this to the attention of the booking office when making an appointment, and the booking office will arrange for more time to be allocated in which to conduct the test. This allows examiners extra time to explain the test procedures, either using printed materials or by the candidate lip-reading.

Safety Advisers

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what training is given to safety advisers in his Department and in each of his Department's agencies. [32437]

Mr. Norris: Staff advising on health and safety matters study for certificates of competence issued either by the National Examination Board in Occupational Safety and Health or by the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents.

Driving Examiners

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of the Driving Standards Agency training package for new entrant driving examiners. [32341]

Mr. Norris: I have arranged for a copy of the briefing package given to all new driving examiners when starting their training to be placed in the Library today.

M25

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if plans to widen the M25 motorway between junctions 12 and 15 will be subject to a public inquiry. [32281]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 12 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about a public inquiry into the recently published proposals for widening the M25 between Junctions 12 and 15.

The period for comment on the Environmental Statement ends on 3 July. All the comments received will be taken into consideration before the Secretary of State for Transport make his decision on the way forward. This scheme would be constructed entirely within the existing highway boundary. There are no statutory orders and therefore no statutory requirement for a public inquiry.

Light Dues

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if light dues are levied on European Community vessels in British waters. [32472]

Mr. Norris: Yes.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was raised by the light dues system from (a) commercial vessels over 20 tons, (b) pleasure craft over 20 tons, (c) tugs over 10 m in length, and (d) fishing vessels over 10 m in length in each of the last five years; and what is his estimate for the next financial year. [32530]

Mr. Norris: The information is as follows:

(a) £45,524,904

(b) £30,013

(c) £131,040

(d) £1,177,260

1995–96

Provisional figures pending preparation of final accounts

1996–97

Estimated

(a) £63,000,000

(b) Nil

(c) £110,000

(d) £1,000,000

First Aiders

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether employees of his Department or agencies within his responsibility who volunteer to carry out first aid duties are remunerated. [32438]

Mr. Norris: No, with the exception of first aiders in the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency who receive a small allowance on satisfactory completion of first aid training.

Aviation Safety (Turkey)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice he sought from the Civil Aviation Authority on safety matters before granting a permit to Monarch Airlines Ltd. to wet-lease a TriStar aircraft registered in Antigua for a flight from the United Kingdom to Turkey on 19 May. [32279]

Mr. Norris: None.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he had with the Civil Aviation Authority over granting a waiver to Monarch Airlines Ltd. to lease a TriStar aircraft registered in Antigua for a flight from the United Kingdom to Turkey on 19 May under article 8.3 of European Council legislation 2407/92; and if such a waiver was granted. [32280]

Mr. Norris: None. A waiver was granted for the flight.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the effectiveness of the civil aviation authority in Turkey. [32278]

Mr. Norris: None. Turkey is now a signatory to the joint aviation authorities arrangements and has committed itself to the implementation of all joint aviation requirements. These are generally more stringent than the minimum standards of the International Civil Aviation Organisation. Turkey's national aviation authority will be assessed by the joint aviation authorities as part of the procedures for full membership. If any shortcomings are identified they will be addressed.

Commercial Vehicles (Disabled People)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to ensure that vans and other commercial vehicles adapted to carry people with disabilities for their own personal use do not attract insurance premiums at rates applying to commercial vehicles. [32235]

Mr. Norris: The setting of insurance premiums is a commercial matter for the insurance industry. When the appropriate provisions come into force, the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 will prevent insurance companies from practising gratuitous discrimination by charging disabled people unjustifiable additional premiums. My Department is not aware of any cases of insurance companies charging disabled people business rates of insurance for converted commercial vehicles which are only used privately.

PTC Grades Pay Bill

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide the estimated outturn of the Public Service and Tax Commerce Union grades base pay bill for this financial year. [32441]

Mr. Norris: The estimated outturn for the PTC grades base pay bill in the central transport group for the current financial year is not yet known as pay negotiations for the 1996–97 PTC pay settlement are still in progress. The estimated outturn excluding the pay settlement is £14.5 million.

Vehicle Registration Offices (Lighting)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action has been taken to remedy the lighting deficiencies at the vehicle registration offices in the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's Scotland and North area. [32436]

Mr. Norris: The lighting deficiencies in the Scotland and North vehicle registration offices have been identified. A plan of action has been drawn up which will enable all deficiencies to be rectified by the end of October 1996.

Traffic Area Office (Cardiff)

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the role played by the traffic area office in Cardiff in the field of road safety and environmental protection in south Wales; and if he will make a statement. [32351]

Mr. Norris: I refer to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Sutton and Cheam (Lady Olga Maitland) on 10 June, Official Report, column 30. The contribution to road safety and environmental protection of any one traffic area office cannot be separately assessed.

Driving Standards Agency

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what health and safety training is undertaken by (a) senior driving examiners, (b) supervising driving examiners, (c) assistant chief driving examiners, (d) deputy chief driving examiners and (e) chief driving examiners as part of their supervisory training; [32338]

(2) what subsequent (a) assessments and (b) reviews have been conducted by the Driving Standards Agency on their health and safety risk assessments of the driving examiner grade; [32342]

(3) what large goods vehicles, passenger carrying vehicles and motor cycle testing duties were included in the risk assessment carried out for the driving examiner grade; [32331]

(4) if he will place in the Library a copy of the first draft of the risk assessment for the driving examiner grade; [32332]

(5) if he will list the driving test centres that have been closed (a) permanently and (b) temporarily over the last 12 months as a result of health and safety problems; and which driving test centres are currently being considered for closure; [32344]

(6) if the risk assessment for driving examiners included assaults on staff; [32401]

(7) how many recorded assaults there have been in each of the last three years on driving examiners; and how many driving test candidates have been prosecuted for such assaults in the same period; [32345]

(8) what measures are taken by the Driving Standards Agency to protect driving examiners from injury; [32340]

(9) if he will list for the last three years the dates of the health and safety inspections carried out at the Driving Standards Agency training centre at Cardington; [32348]

(10) if he will list the dates when the Driving Standards Agency health and safety committee has met over the last 12 months; [32443]

(11) on what basis it was decided not to provide first aid training for driving examiners; [32444]

(12) how many inspections of premises occupied by the Driving Standards Agency have been made to ascertain the presence of radon gas; [32339]

(13) which driving test centres in the Midlands and Eastern areas have had health and safety inspections carried out in the last two years; [32347]

(14) how many fax machines have been stolen from driving test centres, from which centres they were stolen; if they were insured; and if they were security marked; [32346]

(15) if he will list by location the driving test centres where the staffing complement has been increased to meet the demand for driving tests prior to the introduction for the theory test. [32442]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Driving Standards Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Laraine Manley to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 12 June 1996:

PQS RE: DSA'S HEALTH AND SAFETY PROCEDURES

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent questions about the Agency's Health and Safety procedures, staffing complements and security at driving test centres.

Health and safety guidance to all Agency staff is implemented primarily by Health & Safety Advice Notes. These are drafted in consultation with the managers concerned and Trades Unions. The last three Senior Driving Examiner refresher courses, conducted during 1994 and 1995, included a unit given by the DSA Health Safety & Working Environment Unit, and this will continue with future such courses.

The original driving test risk assessment focused on car tests only, as these account for most of the Agency's testing activities. An assessment was carried out during 1993/94 and the results were promulgated in May 1994.

Since then the following risk assessments have been conducted:

(a) risks arising from the wearing of motorcycle radios on test was undertaken in September 1995 and resulted in guidance being issued in November 1995.

(b) risks to driving examiners arising from vehicle pollution was undertaken in autumn 1995 and resulted in guidance being issued in January 1996.

(c) a Female Driving Examiner Breast Trauma risk assessment is currently subject to consultation with the Trade Unions.

(d) a large goods vehicle/passenger carrying vehicle risk assessment was completed in May 1996 and a draft report will be sent shortly to the Trade Unions for comment.

(e) a motorcycle testing risk assessment will commence shortly.

The report of the driving test risk assessment was placed in the House of Commons Library in February 1996. Like any important document, a Health & Safety assessment report requires quality assurance and consultation with interested parties before its findings can be considered robust. I think it would be misleading to interested parties to publish preliminary drafts of such a report.

32344

The following driving test centres have been closed as a result of health and safety problems during the last 2 years:

(a) Permanently: Chaddesden (in Derby); Bounds Green (in London).

(b) Temporarily: Cardiff East; South Norwood Road (in London).

There are no further closures planned at this time.

The original driving test risk assessment, issued in May 1994, did not include reference to assaults on staff. The Agency has developed an Assaults Policy separately. Advice about assaults was issued to all staff in February 1995 following consultation with Trade Unions.

DSA does not have a record of prosecutions or convictions of candidates over the last three years. Since February 1995 there have been 14 physical and 103 verbal assaults report.

Driving Standards Agency takes all reasonably practicable measures to protect Driving Examiners from injury by the following methods:

(a) providing an Agency Health and Safety at Work Policy.

(b) control of local Health and Safety matters by senior staff.

(c) providing written Health and Safety advice in the form of a Health, Safety and Working Environment manual for each location.

(d) empowering Driving Examiners to cancel or terminate tests if vehicles presented are in a dangerous condition.

(e) undertaking and making available risk assessments for working practices, associated risks and premises.

(f) training all new entrant driving examiners in a safe system of work and including Health & Safety modules in refresher training.

(g) ensuring adequate supervision.

(h) ensuring that new arrivals to all locations are briefed on emergency procedures and local risk control measures on their first day in that location by their line managers.

(i) visits from the Health and Safety Unit.

Formal Health and safety inspections were carried out by the Health, Safety and Working Environment Unit in November 1993, October 1994 and July 1995. Members of this Unit visit Cardington each month and carry out informal inspection.

32443

The Driving Standards Agency Health and Safety Committee has not managed to meet over the last 12 months owing to difficulties findings a date that suited the Trades Union representatives.

32444

Following consideration about first aid training for staff at driving test centres, it was decided that each centre would have one first aid appointed person, retrained every three years, but there was no need for cover during temporary absences.

32339

The Agency does not consider that such inspections are necessary.

32347

The Driving Standards Agency Health, Safety and Working Environment Unit have visited 17 driving test centres in the Midlands and Eastern Area; 3 have been visited twice. The Agency's Midlands and Eastern Area management have carried out 12 Health and Safety visits during the last 2 years.

Fax machines were introduced into driving test centres in May 1995. Since that time, 18 machines have been reported stolen, from the following offices—Coventry, Crawley, Eastbourne, Gosforth, Grimbsy, Inverurie, Keighley, Kidderminster (twice), Neath, Norwood, Rotherham (twice), Wallasey and Washwood Heath (three times).

In keeping with general Government policy these machines were not insured. Nor were they security marked. The Agency, however, did keep a record of the serial numbers and these details were passed to the police when the thefts were discovered.

DSA is currently considering options for improving general security at driving test centres.

The surge in demand for driving tests prior to the introduction of the theory test is expected to be a temporary phenomenon, so the Agency has not altered its formal staffing complements per test centre. It has, however, increased its examiner workforce in the face of this increase in demand for tests. Over the last 5 months 97 contract examiners have been allocated to centres to conduct practical driving tests, and these will be joined by another 135 shortly. These are employed on a contractual basis and will be used as and when required to increase test capacity. The Agency will be closely monitoring the position to ensure that we have sufficient flexibility to increase capacity further if required.

I attach a list which shows, by area, the allocation of these extra staff to each test centre.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many people were nominated by the Local Government Management Board to serve as temporary lay members of the London North industrial tribunal between 14 November 1994 and 24 October 1995; [32017]

(2) how many people who were nominated by the Local Government Management Board to serve as temporary lay members of the London North industrial tribunal between 14 November 1994 and 24 October 1995 were subsequently appointed. [32018]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Organisations were not asked to nominate candidates for temporary appointment to the London North industrial tribunal in November 1994. Instead, temporary members were chosen from suitable applicants who had been put forward in 1992 but not selected. In 1992, five candidates nominated by the London Government Management Board were considered suitable but were nevertheless not appointed as lay members because other candidates were better qualified. All five were considered for temporary appointment to London North in November 1994 and four were subsequently appointed.

Lower Vickers Street, Miles Platting

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the draft order was published relating to the closure of Lower Vickers street in Miles Platting; what plans he has to order a public inquiry; and if he will make a statement on the timetable or implementing the order. [32550]

Mr. Norris: The draft order was published on 11 December 1995 and a public inquiry has been arranged for 3 September 1996. We expect that the inspector will make the report six to eight weeks after the inquiry. If he recommends that the Secretary of State should make the order, a decision letter could be published within four to six weeks, and the order made about two weeks later. The roads in question could then be closed at any time during the period of planning consent granted by the local authority to the developer concerned.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Inward Investment

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of inward investment in 1995 was due to the acquisition, takeover or merger of a United Kingdom company by overseas investors. [31370]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 7 June 1996]: In 1995, acquisitions, takeovers and mergers accounted for around 25 per cent. of foreign direct and portfolio investment into the UK, based on UK balance of payments data.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) pursuant to his answer of 28 March, Official Report, column 733, how much his Department estimated it would have cost to provide the information requested; [31451]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 22 March, Official Report column 366, how much his Department estimated it would have cost to provide the information requested. [31445]

Mr. John M. Taylor: More than £450, the current threshold above which answers are deemed to incur disproportionate cost.

Women (Promotion)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures his Department has implemented during the last 12 months to encourage the promotion of women into senior positions with his Department and its executive agencies; and what progress his Department has made in encouraging the promotion of women over the last five years. [31535]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Promotions to the senior civil service of the DTI in the past year have been minimal because of staff reductions following the implementation of the Department's senior management review. Of the four promotions that did take place, two were women.

In other grades, under both centrally managed promotion boards that operated before September 1994 and the promotion to post system now in operation, all staff involved in selection decisions have been trained in selection techniques and in avoiding discrimination. Also, all internally advertised posts offering promotion are open to part-timers unless the post is clearly unsuitable for part-time work. In the first year of the new promotion procedures, female applicants were more likely than male applicants to be selected for promotion. Over the past five years, 3.7 per cent. of female staff outside the senior civil service have been promoted compared to 3.4 per cent. of male staff.

I have asked the chief executive of DTI agencies to respond direct to the hon. Member in respect of the second part of the question.

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 12 June 1996:

I have been asked to reply to the second part of your question on behalf of the Radiocommunications Agency.

To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures his Department has implemented during the last 12 months to encourage the promotion of women into senior positions with his Department and its Executive Agencies and what progress his Department has made in encouraging the promotion of women over the last five years.

The Agency received delegated responsibility for equal opportunity matters from DTI in October 1994. As part of the Agency's first programme of action on equal opportunities all members of the Agency central promotion board for engineering and technical grade staff took part in a one day refresher seminar on interviewing techniques with special emphasis on equal opportunity issues and best practice.

Since September 1994 promotion in the administration group has been by promotion to specific (advertised) posts. Each individual promotion board is chaired by a representative of the Agency's personnel directorate who have had training in selection and interviewing techniques, which cover equal opportunities and best practice to avoid discrimination. The Agency also has a pool of line managers who have received similar training and who act as an independent members on each individual promotion board.

From its monitoring, the Agency has identified the relative under representation in the Agency of women in Grades EO—SEO when compared to DTI centrally. Examination of the possible reasons for this relative under representation forms part of the Agency's 1996 programme for action on equal opportunities.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 12 June 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about the promotion of women in The Insolvency Service.

Mr. John Taylor MP has replied to you, on behalf of the President of the Board of Trade, with regard to employees in the DTI. Promotion of women into senior positions within The Insolvency Service is included in Mr. Taylor's reply.

Until 1994, the majority of staff were selected for promotion through DTI managed promotion boards. In August 1994, responsibility for promotion up to Grade 6 level was delegated to The Insolvency Service. It is a requirement of the delegation that at least one member of staff involved in selection decisions is suitably trained and certificated. The Service's training for promotion panel members covers equal opportunities issues and best practice to avoid discrimination. All posts advertised on promotion are open to people on a career break, maternity leave and part-timers, unless the post is considered to be unsuitable for part-time work.

Monitoring of the first year since delegation shows that female applicants were marginally more likely than male applicants to be selected for promotion. During the past five years, 5.6% of female staff have been promoted compared to 5.2% of male staff.

Letter from Zélie Armstrong to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 12 June 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about promotion of women.

The first part of your question will be answered centrally by the Department. On the second part, this Agency's policy is consistent with that followed by the Department in that all staff have always had an equal opportunity to apply for all vacancies for which they are eligible.

Letter from Paul Hartnack to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 12 June 1996:

I am replying in relation to the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade about the promotion of women into senior positions in the Department of Trade and Industry and its executive agencies.

The senior management of the Patent Office includes one woman, the Assistant Registrar of Trade Marks. Most of the other senior positions in the Patent Office are held by professional patent examiners, the grades of Principal Examiner and Superintending Examiner being broadly equivalent to Grade 5 in the general civil service. Promotion to these grades is by internal advertisement followed by interview and appointment is on merit. Over the last 12 months, due to retirement, nine vacancies at Principal Examiner and above have arisen, two of which have been filled by women. Of the 32 staff who applied for these vacancies, four were women.

The Patent Office belongs to Opportunity 2000 in its own right and steps it has taken to encourage women to undertake careers in the Office include sponsorship of two women at Cardiff and Southampton universities who are studying science subjects.

Letter from John S. Holden to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 12 June 1996:

I have been asked by the President of the Board of Trade to respond to your parliamentary question 95/2453 concerning the promotion of women into senior positions within Companies House.

As an Executive Agency within the DTI, we generally follow initiatives implemented within the Department. However, you might wish to know we received delegated responsibility for Equal Opportunities in September 1994. We have appointed an Equal Opportunities Officer, who happens to be a woman, and have issued our own Equal Opportunities Policy. We have also progressed an extensive programme of training for all managers and staff which is aimed at promoting a much better understanding of Equal Opportunities issues.

Within the director-level team of five persons in the Companies House organisation, two posts are occupied by women. Within our senior management group which comprises a further ten people, three further posts are also occupied by women.

To encourage career development and promotion opportunities for women within all grades at Companies House, we have extensively promoted opportunities for job-sharing, part-time and other flexible working patterns. For certain grades there are also opportunities for evening work.

We have a number of women employees who have taken advantage of our career break facility and during the main school holidays we have for some years provided children's crèche facilities.

Laboratory of the Government Chemist

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the contract which was assumed in the bid by the consortium which purchased the Laboratory of the Government Chemist. [33018]

Mr. Ian Taylor: In the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Hall Green (Mr. Hargreaves) on 2 April 1996, Official Report, columns 149–50, regarding the sale of the Laboratory of the Government Chemist, I stated that, in the event the purchaser was not awarded a contract which was assumed in the bid, there would be (a) payment of the purchaser of £300,000 to forestall consequential redundancies and to enable it to develop alternative business streams, and (b) an indemnity for the cost of any such redundancies up to a maximum sum of £500,000. Details of this contingent liability were notified separately to Parliament by way of a departmental minute, which was laid before the House on 1 April.

This contingent liability matured on 22 May as LGC was not awarded the contract: the sum of £300,000 was paid to LGC on 3 June from voted provision on class IV, vote 1. The purchaser will also be able to call on the redundancy indemnity, although a number of conditions apply to this indemnity including (a) the requirement for the redundancies to be related directly or indirectly to the loss of the specific contract, (b) the sum being capped at the lesser of £500,000 or the aggregate of the payments up to the first 18 relevant redundancies, and (c) its expiry after 12 months.

Information Society and Development Conference

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what conclusions emerged from the information society and development conference held in Midrand, South Africa, on 13 to 15 May. [33017]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The information society and development ministerial conference, the aim of which was to consider how developing countries could be integrated into the emerging global information society, was attended by 40 countries and 18 international organisations. I led the United Kingdom's delegation to the conference, which included senior representatives of UK companies in the information and communication sector. UK companies also participated in the exhibition which ran alongside the conference.

The conclusions agreed at the conference endorsed the core principles agreed at the G7 conference on the information society in February 1995, which included promoting dynamic competition, encouraging private investment, defining an adaptable regulatory framework and providing open access to networks. The conference also identified a number of key policy issues. I have placed a copy of the chair's conclusions in the Library of the House, as well as a copy of the formal intervention I made at the ministerial session.

I welcome the conclusions of the conference, which set out a clear path for the extension of super-highways to developing countries and establish a common way forward in promoting the information society. Also important is the conference's recognition that the private sector has the primary role in creating the global information society and its commitment to fostering partnerships between the public and private sector. This will encourage projects to be realistic, building on existing applications available in the private sector to meet the needs of developing and developed countries alike. I am convinced that what should follow this conference is practical implementation of technology, not a further round of Government-led pilot projects.

The global information society offers tremendous and exiting opportunities for all countries but the attitude of Government is crucial. Countries cannot expect the information society to develop if they do not welcome and safeguard investments or do not enforce protection of intellectual property rights. Governments who want their countries to join the information society should not persist with putting barriers in place.

HEALTH

Cardiac Surgery, Bristol

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department received from Professor English about neo-natal cardiac surgery at Bristol royal infirmary during 1992; and what action was taken in response. [31255]

Mr. Horam: The only representation from Sir Terence English about the neonatal cardiac surgery service at Bristol royal infirmary was a telephone call to the medical secretary of the supra-regional services advisory group in which Sir Terence expressed reservations about the continued designation of the Bristol unit, one of 10 designated units then providing the service. The SRSAG met in July 1992 to consider, inter alia, the continued designation of neonatal and infant cardiac surgery as a supra-regional service. As Sir Terence was not present, his views were conveyed to the meeting by the medical secretary. In the event, the advisory group decided to de-designate the service as a whole.

Prosthetic and Wheelchair Services

Mr. Mellor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he proposes to take in response to the National Prosthetic and Wheelchair Services report. [31483]

Mr. Bowis: The two groups have produced reports which we have seen and shall take into account as we develop policies in these areas. We recently announced extension to our wheelchair policies in respect of powered indoor/outdoor wheelchairs and of a voucher scheme.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what considerations led to the decision to allocate funding for indoor/outdoor wheelchairs on a basis other than the estimated number of disabled people requiring such wheelchairs in each health authority. [31934]

Mr. Bowis: Of the options available, we considered allocation on the basis of total resident populations most equitable. We recognise, however, that the relative number of severely disabled people might be higher in one area than another. In guidance issued to the national health service—HSG(96)34, copies of which are available in the Library—we have therefore asked health authorities to consider setting up consortia where this will help address varying needs. Future years' allocation will be made in the light of experience gained at local level.

Mental Illness

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 13 March, Official Report, column 621, what progress is being made in developing outcome scales to assess the health and social functioning of mentally ill people; what the indicators will be; and how assessments will relate to treatment received. [31937]

Mr. Bowis: The development of outcome scales to assess the health and social functioning of mentally ill people, which the Department has been undertaking with the Royal College of Psychiatrists, is nearing completion.

The outcome scales have now been approved for use with non-elderly adults and the national health service executive priorities and planning guidance for 1997–98 requires health authorities to make progress with information systems to support their introduction.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the results of the south London survey into the met and unmet health and social care needs in the community among mentally ill people will be available. [31942]

Mr. Bowis: The results of the survey being conducted by the Medical Research Council at its unit at the Institute of Psychiatry will be published later this year and will be promulgated through the medical literature.

Learning Disabilities

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Lidington) on 19 December, Official Report, columns 1143–44, when the report evaluating the comparative benefits of different communities in meeting the needs of people with learning difficulties will be published; to whom it will be distributed; and when he expects further action to be taken in respect of the report's conclusions. [32013]

Mr. Bowis: The first phase of the evaluation was completed by the end of May as planned. I am currently considering the report and shall make a statement shortly.

Smoking-related Diseases

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the annual cost to the national health service of smoking-related diseases for each year from 1990, and give this figure as a percentage of the overall annual health care budget; and if he will make a statement. [31900]

Mr. Horam: Treatment costs to the national health service are not available on a year by year basis. Based on 1990 figures, the Health Education Authority's report, "The Smoking Epidemic—A Prescription for Change", estimated that the annual cost to the NHS of treatment smoking-related diseases is £610 million.

The national health service's total gross expenditure in 1990–91 was £23,654 million.

Mental Health Services (Staffordshire)

Mr. Brian Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what transport facilities are to be provided for patients who will have to travel from Tamworth to Burton following the transfer of mental health services; [32011]

(2) what assessment he has made of Premier Health NHStrust's proposals to close mental health services in Tamworth; and if he will establish an urgent independent audit of the trust's accounts; [32010]

(3) what representations he has received on Premier Health NHS trust's proposal to transfer mental health services from the George Bryan centre in Tamworth to the Margaret Stanhope centre in Burton; and if he will make a statement. [32012]

Mr. Bowis: No decision has yet been made about changes to services provided by Premier Health national health service trust. Proposals for change, including associated transport arrangements, are currently the subject of a public consultation exercise which closes on 3 July 1996. The annual accounts of all NHS trusts are subject to an independent audit.

Civil Servants (Compulsory Directors)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those companies which have civil servants from his Department as directors and all the occasions in which those companies have been found guilty of any civil or criminal offence in the last eight years. [32285]

Mr. Horam: Civil servants are permitted to undertake and be paid for work outside official time—for example, directorships—if there is no conflict of interest. Staff who disclose relevant interests do so on the understanding that the declaration, like all employment matters, is confidential between them and their employer. We do not hold central records of these declarations or of the companies involved.

General Practitioners

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances general practitioners are required to tell patients what services they choose to contract for; and if he will make a statement on best practice for keeping patients informed of services they will or will not be contracting. [31980]

Mr. Malone: General practitioner fundholders' purchasing plans, and the contracts they place, are public documents and available at the health authority. In addition, fundholders should make copies available at their practice or produce summaries or leaflets for patients.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners were in practice in (a) England and (b) in the south-west region on 1 April for each year since 1989; what action he is taking to increase recruitment; and if he will make a statement. [32525]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table. The number of general practitioners continues to rise.

Year	England	South and West
1989	25,608	1,942
1990	25,622	1,980
1991	25,464	1,982
1992	25,823	2,018
1993	26,116	2,054
1994	26,387	2,084
1995	26,702	2,140

Data is at 1 April each year except 1989 and 1990 when only data at 1 October is available.

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's policy over general practitioners remaining in post (a) after the age of 60 years and (b) after the age of 65 years; and what action he takes to ensure that service is continued where it is in the interest of effective health service provision. [32481]

Mr. Malone: General practitioners are able to practice as principals until they reach the age of 70 when health authorities are required to remove their name from the medical list. General practitioners over the age of 70 remain eligible to work in general practice as assistants or locums or in a private capacity.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what expenditure has been undertaken by ambulance services on the procurement of systems to prepare for the prioritising of ambulance response times; and if he will list the systems. [32205]

Mr. Horam: A number of ambulance services have procured systems which offer telephone advice to callers as well as enabling prioritisation of calls. The Department of Health has commissioned a research evaluation, in two ambulance services, of the safety, reliability and costs of two types of system considered for use in this country. These are the medical priority dispatch system and criteria-based dispatch.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Services Ombudsman

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the legal services ombudsman intends to publish his fifth annual report. [33012]

Mr. Streeter: The legal services ombudsman has today published his fifth annual report, and copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

European Union Flag

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what instructions were issued to his Department's offices and agencies in respect of flying the European Union flag on 8 May; and if he will make a statement. [31499]

Mr. Streeter: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 6 June by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Official Report, column 518.

Census Returns

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has received in relation to the role of the keeper of public records in relation to the holding of 20th century census returns. [31488]

Mr. Streeter: The Lord Chancellor's Department and the Public Record Office have received inquiries from one correspondent over recent months concerning the role of the keeper of public records in relation to census returns under the operations of the Public Records Act 1958 and the legislation governing the taking of the decennial census of population and the confidentiality of the returns. The Public Record Office has responded to two letters from constituents forwarded by hon. Members.

Census Data

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) how many applications were made to release personal census data from the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys in each of the last five years; [31486]

(2) for how long the information contained within the 20th century census returns has been (a) sold and (b) otherwise released for profit; and which returns are involved; [31516]

(3) what assessment he has made of the arrangements for the safekeeping of 20th century census returns and their continued confidentiality; [31487]

(4) on what statutory authority, the sale or disposal for profit of personal information contained in 20th century census records takes place; and for how long such sales and releases have occurred. [31517]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I have been asked to reply.

The records for the 1901 and subsequent censuses in England and Wales are in the care of the Registrar General for England and Wales. They are confidential and not open to public inspection in any circumstance, undertakings having been given at the time of each census that the information would be used only for the preparation and publication of statistical data.

Personal information obtained from 20th century returns are not, and never have been, either (a) sold or (b) otherwise released for profit. Census records are held in strict confidence for a period of 100 years by virtue of an instrument under the Public Records Act 1958. Under a concession announced in Parliament in 1972, information on place of birth and age can be made available from the 1901 census with the consent of the persons concerned or, if deceased, a descendant—or next of kin if the person dies childless. A further concession, announced in 1993, allows information form the 1911 census to be released where, and only where, it is essential for the purpose of establishing a legal entitlement such as an inheritance. A charge is made to the applicant to cover the administrative costs of searching the appropriate census records, and the supply of the information, if the search is successful but not for the information itself.

The numbers of written requests for such information held on record for the last three years are:

The census records for the years 1901 and 1911 are held by the Public Record Office in secure accommodation respectively at Chancery lane—shortly to move to Kew—and Hayes, Middlesex. Those returns for the years 1921, and 1951 to 1991 are held by the registrar general at Christchurch. Returns from the 1931 census were destroyed by fire and there was no census in 1941.

In 1990, the British Computer Society carried out an independent review of the census security and confidentiality arrangements. Its report to Parliament—published in 1991 as Cm 1447—stated that they were generally satisfied with the arrangements for the safekeeping of census forms but recommended that the possibility of storing the forms in an alternative format be kept under review. This is being done. There was a similar review in 1981.

Statistical abstracts of data from censuses since 1921 have been made available under section 4(2) of the Census Act 1920.

WALES

Road Deaths

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many road deaths in (a) Wales and (b) Clwyd involved speeding vehicles, for each year since 1985; what percentage of overall road deaths this account for in each year; and if he will make a statement. [31848]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not available. Information on personal injury road accidents which is recorded by the police and forwarded to the Welsh Office does not include the cause of accidents.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Department of Social Services

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 22 May, Official Report, column 187, if he will define the Department of Social Services. [31971]

Mr. Freeman: All the references to the Department of Social Services that appeared in my answer to the hon. Member for Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 22 May, Official Report, column 187, should have read the Department of Social Security.

Civil Service Recruitment

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to publish the first civil service fast stream recruitment report. [32942]

Mr. Freeman: The first civil service fast stream recruitment report was placed in the Libraries of the House earlier today. It covers the year to 31 March 1996, reporting the results of fast stream competitions completed during that period and action undertaken for future competitions. This information has in previous years formed part of the annual report of the Civil Service Commissioners, but is now separately published following the change to the commissioners' responsibilities last year.

The report shows that the civil service over the year in question has successfully met its need for fast stream recruits to both generalist and specialist schemes. However, the needs of civil service work do not stand still and the report also details action under way to allow the launch of a revised fast stream development programme later this year. The revised scheme will put a stronger emphasis on early training and development and, in selection, on testing candidates' ability to get to grips with numeric data and with science-related issues. Promotion of the programme will also aim to overcome stereotypes which exist in some quarters about the sort of candidates the civil service is seeking to recruit. The goal will be to encourage top graduates from all types of background to apply.

Deregulation

Mr. Pike: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which (a) employer, (b) employee and (c) independent organisations the deregulation unit consults before proposing deregulatory measures. [31994]

Mr. Freeman: Deregulatory measures are proposed by the Government Department responsible for the relevant legislation and not by the deregulation unit. The unit is responsible for co-ordinating the deregulation initiative.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations the deregulation unit has received that the six-pack health and safety regulation has put businesses into liquidation. [32009]

Mr. Freeman: I have received no representations specifically identifying the implementation of the "six-pack" of EC health and safety directives as the cause of a firm going out of business. However, surveys such as that carried out by the British chambers of commerce in September 1995 have consistently identified health and safety legislation as one of the main burdens on business, particularly small business. Both the 1994 Sainsbury task force's report and the Health and Safety Commission's own 1994 review of regulation identified the "six-pack" as an area of concern and confusion for business.

The Government fully support the Health and Safety Commission's programme to implement its own review of regulation, carried out in 1994. The "six-pack" of EC directives is being evaluated as part of that programme.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what is the current staffing level of the deregulation unit. [31987]

Mr. Freeman: The staffing level for the deregulation unit for 1996–97 is 44.2 posts.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what are the current annual running costs of the deregulation unit, including (a) staff costs, (b) administration costs and (c) overheads. [31995]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The annual running costs for the deregulation unit for 1996–97 are as follows:

	£ thousand
Staff costs	1,313
General administrative expenditure	717
Overheads (including common services on a per capita share and accommodation and telecommunications costs)	629
Total	2,659
Capital	10
Total	2,669

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits (Nationality Inquiries)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what sums have been spent on sending out and processing queries about nationality when dealing with routine applications for social security benefits in the last available year; and which benefits are subject to this process. [31309]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Joan Walley, dated 11 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what sums have been spent on sending out and processing queries about nationality when dealing with routine applications for Social Security benefits in the last available year; and which benefits are subject to this process.

The main income-related benefits (Income Support, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit) include conditions relating to the immigration status of claimants. Since 5 February 1996 Regulations exclude a person from entitlement to certain non-contributory Social Security Benefits (Attendance Allowance, Disability Living Allowance, Disability Working Allowance, Family Credit, Invalid Care Allowance, and Severe Disability Allowance) if his right to reside to remain in Great Britain is subject to any limitation or condition. In establishing immigration status and conditions attaching to a person's right to reside in the UK, it may be appropriate to seek further information regarding a customer's nationality.

Queries on nationality are now an integral part in the processing of claims to the benefits listed below. Therefore information on the sums spent on sending out and processing queries on nationality is not available as separate records are not maintained.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Industrial Injuries Advisory Council

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the appointment of a new chairman to the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council. [32514]

Mr. Roger Evans: I am pleased to announce that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has appointed Professor A. J. Newman Taylor as chairman of the council with effect from 19 July 1996. He has been a member of the council since 1983 and has chaired the council's research working group for most of that time.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Polling Stations

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many polling stations in East Antrim were not operable at 7 am on 30 May. [31480]

Mr. Ancram: All the polling stations in East Antrim were operable at 7 am on 30 May.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pencils were initially supplied to polling stations in East Antrim on 30 May. [31478]

Mr. Ancram: The chief electoral officer for Northern Ireland has indicated that four pencils were supplied to East Antrim polling stations for each ballot box; 60 ballot boxes were used in the constituency and 240 pencils were therefore available to voters.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many additional pencils were subsequently delivered to polling stations in East Antrim on 30 May; and at what cost. [31479]

Mr. Ancram: Following inaccurate reports of pencil shortages in the East Antrim constituency on 30 May, two additional pencils for each ballot box in the constituency, making 120 in total, were delivered by roving electoral officers to polling stations. These were delivered at no extra cost and there were already sufficient pencils for all polling booths.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many voting booths were provided at polling stations in East Antrim on 30 May. [31477]

Mr. Ancram: A total of 231 voting booths were provided at polling stations in East Antrim on 30 May.

Recruitment

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much his Department spent in recruiting staff to his Department and its executive agencies during the 1994–95 and 1995–96 financial years; and how many staff were recruited in each of these years. [31395]

Sir John Wheeler: Within the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments the information requested is not fully available. The information available is as follows:

Number of staff recruited	2,007	2,666
Cost of recruitment	£1,205,123	£1,564,197

Information on the cost of recruitment of industrial and casual staff is not fully available.

(a) for the Department of Health and Social Services, Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland and Department of Education for Northern Ireland to provide figures would incur disproportionate cost;

(b) for the Department of Economic Development, only advertising costs are included; and

(c) for the Department of Environment, estimated costs are included.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what use his Department and its executive agencies have made of executive search agencies or employment companies in filling vacancies within his Department or executive agencies administered by his Department during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96; what agencies were employed; what was the cost in each case; how many staff were recruited in each case; and what was the total cost in each financial year of these contracts. [31410]

Sir John Wheeler: During 1994–95 and 1995–96, the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments have used Recruitment and Assessment Services and Premiere Employment. The costs and recruitment figures are listed.

	1994–95	1995–96
Totals costs	£15,714	£15,804
Number of staff recruited	1	1

Individual cases cannot be identified on grounds of confidentiality.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what circumstances his Department or its executive agencies uses an executive search or employment agency to recruit staff in preference to using personnel staff within his own Department or its executive agencies. [31523]

Sir John Wheeler: The Northern Ireland Departments would consider using executive search or employment agencies to recruit staff for specialists jobs or in exceptional cases.

The Northern Ireland Office cadré of home civil servants is relatively small and thus there is a minimal requirement to recruit staff. It is therefore cost-effective to use a recruitment agency.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list (a) the number of (i) male and (ii) female employees, (b) the number of officials employed at each of the principal grades and the numbers and percentages of women employed at each of these grades and (c) the number of staff employed at administrative grades and the numbers and percentages of these staff that are women in his Department on 1 April. [30549]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is contained in the following table:

(i) Male employees: 10,870

(ii) Female employees: 10,618

At 1 April 1996

Grade	Number of officials	Number of women	Percentage of women
Grade 6 and above	527	82	15.6
Grade 7	896	132	14.7
Deputy principal	1,456	290	19.9
Staff officer	2,395	635	26.5
Executive officer I	3,425	929	27.1
Executive officer II	3,087	1,847	59.8

At 1 April 1996

Grade	Number of staff	Number of women	Percentage of women
Admin officer	6,639	4,717	71.0
Admin assistant	3,063	1,986	64.8

1. Non-general service grades have been lumped together with their general service analogues.
2. Figures relate to the Northern Ireland Office and the six departments of the Northern Ireland civil service.
3. Figures include full-time, part-time etc staff.
4. Figures do not include NICS staff seconded to the Police Authority for Northern Ireland.
5. Industrial staff have been excluded as it would take disproportionate cost to identify the relevant figures.

European Union Flag

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what instructions were issued to his Department's offices and agencies in respect of flying the European Union flag on 8 May; and if he will make a statement. [31509]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 6 June, Official Report, column 518.

Forensic Science Agency

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consideration has been given to market testing has services provided by the Forensic Science Agency of Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [31566]

Sir John Wheeler: The Forensic Science Agency for Northern Ireland became an agency on 1 September 1995. It is still in the process of developing and refining systems for charging and costing its services. The agency is disposed towards market testing and fully supports Government in this area. At the moment, I consider there is no reasonable or feasible opportunity to consider the transfer to the private sector of any part of its services. The issue will, however be addressed no later than the agency's quinquennial review—that is, by September 2000—and before that if suitable opportunities arise.

Women (Promotion)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures his Department has implemented during the last 12 months to encourage the promotion of women into senior positions with his Department and its executive agencies; and what progress his Department has made in encouraging the promotion of women over the last five years. [31541]

Sir John Wheeler: Measures taken by Northern Ireland Departments and agencies within the last 12 months include the introduction of mentoring, the creation of women's networks and the establishment of "keeping in touch" schemes for staff on career breaks; the inclusion in public advertisements for senior posts of statements particularly welcoming applications from women and a vigorous programme of equal opportunity awareness and training for senior staff. Other measures already in place are reported in the regularly published reports from the central equal opportunities unit for the Northern Ireland civil service, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

The proportion of women employed at grade 6 level and above in the non-industrial grades in the Northern Ireland civil service, has increased from 11.4 per cent. at 1 January to 15.8 per cent. at 1 January 1996.

There is a broadly equivalent programme for action on women for home civil service staff serving in the Northern Ireland Office. Progress on the HCS programme for action on women is contained in regular reports on equal opportunities published by the Cabinet Office.

Rate Collection Agency

Mr. Trend: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Rate Collection Agency in 1996–97. [33014]

Mr. Moss: For 1996–97 the following performance targets have been set for the agency:

1. To collect 98.5 per cent. of the gross collectable rate, excluding late assessments, by 31 March 1997.

2. To achieve a reduction of 5 per cent. in the real value of the unit costs of rate collection per hereditament over the next two years.

3. To generate refunds to 97 per cent. of ratepayers so entitled within 14 days of credits being identified.

4. To process by 31 March 1997 93 per cent. of applications for the incoming year received before 15 March 1997 from existing housing benefit recipients.

5. To achieve a reduction of 5 per cent. in the real value of the unit costs of processing housing benefit applications over the next two years.

6. To process 96 per cent. of housing benefit claims free of error.

Probation Board (Review)

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to carry out a quinquennial review of the Probation Board for Northern Ireland. [33015]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have arranged for a quinquennial review of the Probation Board for Northern Ireland to be carried out, which is expected to commence in June and which will be completed by 31 October 1996.

Harland and Wolff (Pension Fund)

Mr. Trend: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if arrangements have been concluded with Harland and Wolff Holdings plc in relation to repayment to Her Majesty's Government of the £6.5 million pension fund surplus following the report, HC paper 126, Session 1991–92, of the Committee of Public Accounts into privatisation of the company. [33016]

Mr. Ancram: Following detailed negotiations, the Department of Economic Development and Harland and Wolff Holdings plc have agreed arrangements whereby the company will repay £6.5 million to the Department. It has also been agreed that the Department will meet certain additional costs, in excess of those provided for at the time of privatisation, totalling £3.023 million, incurred by the company in connection with the privatisation in 1989. The Northern Ireland Audit Office has been consulted in the course of these negotiations and has been notified of the agreement which has been reached.

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Under the UN charter, financial matters at the United Nations are the responsibility of the General Assembly. There are no plans for a special ministerial meeting to discuss these matters.

23. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Russian Government about the timing of the presidential elections. [30866]

Kashmir

24. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new initiatives he proposes in respect of Kashmir. [30867]

Mr. Hanley: We continue to believe that the best way forward in Kashmir should involve simultaneous progress on dialogue between India and Pakistan, an improvement in human rights in Kashmir, the development of a genuine political process there, and a clear cessation of external support for violence in Kashmir.

37. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Indian authorities to secure the release of the British hostages held in Kashmir. [30881]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The British high commissioner and his staff in New Delhi and Srinagar are in daily contact with the Indian authorities and other Governments involved in our continuing efforts to secure the early and safe release of the hostages.

Bosnia

25. Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards elections in Bosnia.[30868]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Under the terms of the Dayton peace agreement, the elections in Bosnia will be supervised by the OSCE and must take place by 14 September. The Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe mission in Bosnia is now working with the parties on the electoral rules and other arrangements.

Botswana

26. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the Government of Botswana. [30869]

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary saw the Botswanan Foreign Minister, General Merafhe, on 18 March and will see him again on 18 June when he visits Britain as a guest of the Government.

Sri Lanka

27. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Sri Lankan Government on the armed conflict with Tamil separatists. [30870]

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed the conflict in Sri Lanka with the Sri Lankan Foreign Minister, the hon. Lakshman Kadirgamar, during his visit to London in January. I have had further discussions about the conflict with Ministers of the Sri Lanka Government who have visited London since then.

Tibet

28. Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to raise human rights in Tibet with the Chinese Government; and if he will make a statement. [30871]

Mr. David Davis: I met the new Gibraltar Chief Minister on 5 June. We had detailed discussions on a wide range of issues, including unacceptable delays at the frontier with Spain.

European Court of Justice

30. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to discuss the role of the European Court of Justice in the intergovernmental conference. [30873]

Mr. David Davis: In due course, we shall publish a memorandum on the European Court of Justice, setting out in greater detail the proposals outlined in the recent White Paper "A Partnership of Nations".

Cyprus

31. Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the United Nations regarding the occupation of the northern part of Cyprus by Turkish troops. [30875]

Mr. David Davis: Cyprus was discussed at an informal meeting of the five permanent members of the UN Security Council on 17 April. They reaffirmed that the status quo was unacceptable and stressed the need for a comprehensive approach leading to a settlement within the framework of the UN Secretary-General's mission of good offices.

Sudan

32. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation in Sudan. [30876]

Mr. Hanley: Sudan continues to suffer from the long-running civil war. There is little sign of willingness to make progress towards a negotiated solution, although Her Majesty's Government continue to urge this upon all concerned. The human rights situation continues to give us grave cause for concern, as does Sudan's hospitality to terrorist groups. We are watching closely for firm evidence that Sudan is complying with Security Council resolutions 1044 and 1054.

Bahrain

34. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives of the Government of Bahrain to discuss human rights in that country; and if he will make a statement. [30878]

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations between the United Kingdom and Bahrain. [32246]

Mr. Hanley: Bahrain is a close ally and under our 1971 treaty of friendship there is good co-operation in all fields.

I shall be visiting Bahrain myself next week to discuss a wide range of issues with the Bahraini Government.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what recent representations he has received relating to the matter of the detention in Bahrain of the wife of Mr. John Paul Goostrey; [32248]

(2) what action he has taken to date to assist Mr. John Paul Goostrey in the matter of the detention of his wife in Bahrain. [32245]

Mr. Hanley: Mr. Goostrey's wife, a Bahraini citizen, is not in detention in Bahrain, but her family have obtained a court injunction preventing her from leaving the country. She is applying to the court for this decision to be overturned. The British embassy is in regular contact with Mr. Goostrey and his wife and will continue to provide all the help that it can.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Bahraini ambassador in London about the matter of the detention in Bahrain of the wife of Mr. John Paul Goostrey. [32249]

Mr. Hanley: None, but I plan to discuss the matter with our ambassador on my visit to Bahrain in the near future.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has concerning the number of British citizens whose spouses are citizens of Bahrain; and what advice he would give to such individuals about visiting Bahrain. [32247]

Mr. Hanley: We do not maintain records of foreign spouses of British nationals.

There is no advice particular to such individuals, although they have access to our current travel advice on Bahrain.

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary has no immediate plans to visit Hong Kong, but discussions with China on matters relating to the transfer of sovereignty over Hong Kong continue at official level, most recently at the 36th plenary session of the Sino-British joint liaison group in London on 5 to 7 June.

Tigris and Euphrates Valleys (Children)

36. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his discussions with the Secretary General of the Arab League during his official visit to the United Kingdom in relation to starvation among children in the valleys of the Tigris and the Euphrates. [30880]

Mr. Hanley: The condition of children in Iraq was discussed with Dr. Meguid with particular reference to Saddam Hussain's failure to provide satisfactorily for them.

Civil Servants (Duties Abroad)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department spent during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 on sending civil servants accompanying Ministers from his Department on official duties abroad. [32410]

Mr. Hanley: Neither the Foreign Commonwealth Office diplomatic wing nor the Overseas Development Administration holds the information in the form requested, and it could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Diplomatic wing expenditure on overseas travel by Ministers and accompanying officials was £1,848,932 in 1994–95 and £1,496,109 in 1995–96.

ODA private office expenditure on travel and subsistence, including the Minister and civil servants working in the private office, was £131,993 in 1994–95 and £139,951 in 1995–96.

European Union (Legislation)

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list, by Department, the number of officials and other experts from the United Kingdom who assist the European Commission in drawing up legislation under the comitology procedure established by the Council decision of 13 July 1987, laying down the procedures for the exercise of implementing powers conferred on the Commission. [32462]

Mr. David Davis: UK officials participate in the exercise by the Commission of delegated powers to make secondary legislation, through their representation on the committees established under the Council decision on the comitology procedure of 13 July 1987. The number of officials and which Department they are from depends on the committees currently sitting and on the subject matter concerned.

Argentina

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of Argentina on establishing the fate of those who disappeared during the period of military rule from 1976 to 1983 and to bring those responsible before the courts; and if he will make a statement. [30813]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We have made no recent representations.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Argentine Government over the exploration of hydrocarbons around the Falklands Islands. [30874]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: At a meeting on 30 January 1996 my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary and the Argentine Foreign Minister noted the success of the joint declaration of September 1995 which established a joint commission to promote hydrocarbons development in the south-west Atlantic. Official level talks have made good progress.

European Commission (Employees)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people are currently employed in the European Commission; at what costs to public funds; what were (a) the numbers and (b) the cost in real terms five years ago; and if he will make a statement. [31178]

Mr. David Davis: The European Commission's employees totalled 16,627 in 1991, and 20,831 in 1996. The cost to the EC budget was 1,261,834,635 ecu in 1991, and 1,914,177,000 ecu has been allocated to staff costs in the 1996 budget—1,674,695,000 ecu at 1991 prices. There is no direct allocation of this sum, but the UK's contribution to the overall EC budget is approximately 12 per cent. after our abatement has been taken into account.

European Union

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will notify the European Union Council of Ministers that Her Majesty's Government will suspend forthwith the policy of non-co-operation with the other member states in respect of forthcoming decisions by the Council of Ministers. [32264]

Mr. David Davis: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced on 21 May, our policy of non-co-operation will continue until we have agreement on lifting the ban on beef derivatives and a clear framework in place leading to a lifting of the wider ban. The first of these objectives has now been met. We hope that the second will be met soon.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27536]

Mr. Boswell: From information held centrally, some 10 per cent. of procurement expenditure was with enterprises identified as having under 200 employees. The Ministry does not at this time distinguish between small and medium-sized enterprises.

Aphis Gossypii

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he has issued on the use of chemicals to control Aphis gossypii; and if he will make a statement. [31590]

Mrs. Browning: I have asked the chief executive of ADAS to reply to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from Phillip Needham to Mr. Ronnie Campbell, dated 12 June 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply direct to your Parliamentary Question in which you ask what advice has been issued on the use of chemicals to control Aphis gossypii.[31590]

ADAS has issued advice on recognition and control of A. gossypii to growers and the horticultural industry by individual consultation, newsletters e.g. 'Bedding Plant Technical Notes', 'Outdoor Ornamental Technical Notes' and by speaking at conferences e.g. the National Nursery Stock Conference and the National Cucumber Conference.

This aphid shows resistance to some types of pesticide. ADAS has been involved in the development of biological control strategies for A. gossypii and has held workshops for growers in order to aid the uptake and success of Integrated Pest Management. Research results have also been presented at conferences and scientific papers published.

Food Surpluses

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on arrangements for distribution by the voluntary sector of surplus EC food to the elderly and disadvantaged. [31561]

Mr. Baldry: The EC surplus food scheme was originally established as a temporary measure to dispose of certain intervention stocks when these were high. Last November my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food announced, as part of the Government's expenditure plans, that the UK would permanently withdraw from participation, in line with the recommendations of the Ministry's fundamental expenditure review. That decision, among others, has enabled the Ministry to contribute fully to the Government's policy of maintaining a tight control of public expenditure.

Hedley Lomas (Ireland) Ltd.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Minister has received a claim for damages from Hedley Lomas (Ireland) Ltd. or its livestock export consultant. [32473]

Mrs. Browning: In December 1992 Hedley Lomas (Ireland) Ltd. lodged an application for judicial review in respect of the Ministry's refusal to issue the company with a licence in accordance with the Export of Animals (Prohibition) Order 1991. That application included a claim for damages but the company has not, to date, provided particulars for the alleged losses arising as a result of the decision.

Animals (Sentient Beings)

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, at the forthcoming intergovernmental conference, the Government will make it their policy to argue for the re-classification of animals as sentient beings in the treaty of Rome. [32452]

Mrs. Browning: The Government have made it clear that they wish to see further progress made on animal welfare at a Community level. That is why we are seeking to have a protocol added to the treaty of Rome which will place a formal, legal obligation on Community institutions to give full regard to considerations of animal welfare in the exercise of their powers on agriculture, transport, research and the single market.

Pesticides (Food Labelling)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans his Department has to introduce a consumer labelling system for foods treated with pesticides that identifies the pesticides used; and if he will make a statement. [32273]

Mrs. Browning: The Government have no plans to introduce special labelling for foods treated with pesticides.

Organophosphates

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has of the number of farmers and farm workers disabled following exposure to organophosphates; and if he will make a statement. [32454]

Mrs. Browning: The Department has information of reported suspected adverse reactions to organophosphates used in agriculture. Suspected adverse reactions involving veterinary medicines are notified to the Veterinary Medicines Directorate. In the period between 1 January 1985 and 31 May 1996 a total of 681 reports involving human suspected adverse reactions to organophosphorus sheep dips and 20 involving OP warblecides were received by the VMD. Details of cases examined by the appraisal panel for human suspected adverse reactions to veterinary medicines are set out in the published annual reports of the panel for 1993 and 1994, which are available in the Library of the House. Suspected adverse reactions involving pesticides are reported to the Health and Safety Executive, and my Department is informed. There were 29 cases of suspected organophosphate poisoning from pesticides in Great Britain in 1993–94 and 43 in 1994–95. "Pesticides Incidents Investigated in 1993–94/1994–95—A Report by the Fields Operations Division of the Health and Safety Executive" is also available in the Library of the House.

Ostriches

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has of the number of ostriches in the UK. [32510]

Mrs. Browning: The Ministry does not collect data separately for ostriches.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provisions regulate the slaughter of ostriches. [32511]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 21 March 1996, Official Report, column 314. The Welfare of Animals (Slaughter or Killing) Regulations 1995, SI 1995, No. 731, regulate the slaughter of ostriches in Great Britain. Similar legislation applies in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research is being conducted into humane methods of slaughtering ostriches. [32512]

Mrs. Browning: Earlier this year, a research study of commercial ostrich slaughter practice in the Republic of South Africa was commissioned by the Ministry. In consultation with representatives of the ostrich industry and others, the findings of that study are being used to prepare guidance on humane slaughter which will be made available to ostrich producers. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House once it is completed.

Sheep (Collection Centres)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if each holding, as defined within the category of collection centres, as laid down in part 1 of the Animals and Animal Products Import and Export Regulations 1995, from which sheep have been acquired for export since 9 October 1995, has been approved for intra-Community trade as required by article 5(b) of the regulations. [30716]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 4 June 1996]: Some, but not all, holdings from which sheep have been certified since 9 October 1995 are also approved collection centres, as defined in Council directive 64/432/EEC. However, the Community legislation concerning the animal health conditions for intra-Community trade in sheep and goats does not require the places at which sheep are acquired to be approved collection centres. Sheep can be exported directly from a holding or via an approved market or assembly centre.

The purpose of the Animals and Animal Products (Import and Export) Regulations 1995 is to implement certain pieces of Community animal health legislation, including Council directive 91/68/EEC. The regulations are made under the powers conferred on Ministers by section 2(2) of the European Communities Act 1972. It has been drawn to our attention that, in respect of sheep, the regulations do not accurately reflect the provisions in the Community legislation. We intend to take steps to eliminate the anomalies.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he proposes to issue export health certificates in respect of sheep which are acquired through a collection centre which is approved by his Department for the purposes of intra-Community trade; [32099]

(2) if he proposes to issue export health certificates in respect of sheep which are acquired through a collection centre which is approved by him for the purposes of intra-Community trade but which at the time the sheep were acquired did not comply with the provisions relating to collection centres in Council directives 91/68/EEC. [32100]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 June 1996]: It is not a requirement for sheep exported to another EC member state from a holding to be purchased at an approved collection centre. Provided that they meet all other animal health requirements, sheep which are acquired through an approved collection centre can be issued with export health certificates.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what types of establishments and premises within the United Kingdom qualify as holding centers for the purposes of article 2 of Council directive 90/425/EEC. [32101]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 June 1996]: For the purposes of Council directive 90/425/EEC, all the places at which the animals referred to in annexes A and B of the directive are held or kept are considered to be holdings. Annexes A and B cover all live animals, including aquaculture animals.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Dover: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research projects have been (a) requested and (b) commissioned by his Department in the areas of BSE and Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease in the last two months. [31038]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 4 June 1996]: Details of the research projects requested and commissioned in the last two months are as follows:

(A) Research proposals in the areas of BSE requested by MAFF in the last two months

Audit of Bovine and Ovine Slaughter and By-products Sector.

Strain-typing of scrapie agent in meat and bone meal.

Transmission of studies for the detection of BSE in sheep.

The study of BSE in sheep and the possibility of its vertical transmission.

Applied brain metabolism and nutrition studies in cattle to aid in the control of neurological disorders.

Bioassay of BSE infectivity in non-neural tissues by intra-cerebral inoculation of cattle.

Immunohistochemical detection of cellular perturbations in formalin-fixed brain from cattle.

Pathogenesis studies of experimental BSE in sheep.

Abnormal protein distribution in the central nervous system, non-neural tissues and body fluid of cattle affected by BSE.

Hot boning of beef to avoid carcase splitting—a case for a development project.

Pathogenesis studies of experimental BSE in sheep.

Abnormal protein distribution in the CNS, non-neural tissues and body fluids of cattle affected by BSE.

A combinatorial molecular approach for the identification of early markers for BSE in cattle.

The role of glycation in the generation of scrapie amyloid fibrils.

Identification of peptides that are recognised by sera from animals infected with bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) using a random peptide phage display library.

Immune complexes and related markers in BSE.

A potential analysis for the presence of neural-tissue in beef and beef containing products.

Proposals on the role of free living mites in the epidemiology of TSEs.

Proposals for developing a mouse transgenic for the bovine PrP gene.

(B) MAFF-funded BSE research—approved April–May 1996

The neuropathological monitoring of suspect BSE cases born in 1992.

Development of mouse models for the study of bovine transmissible spongiform encephalopathy.

Electrophoretic analysis of body fluids to identify disease-specific proteins in ruminant spongiform encephalopathy.

Production of polyclonal antisera to highly purified bovine PrP scrapie.

Responsibility for CJD research lies with the Department of Health.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions in each year since 1989 abattoirs were found to be in default of BSE-related regulations governing the treatment of carcases. [31246]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 4 June 1996]: Prior to 1 April 1995, responsibility for meat inspection was the responsibility of local authorities. Details of contraventions of BSE-related regulations in abattoirs prior to this date are not held centrally.

Since 1 April 1995, responsibility for meat inspection in slaughterhouses was transferred to the Meat Hygiene Service. Results of the state veterinary surveillance programme on the handling of specified bovine material in abattoirs since September 1995 were given in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Dorset, West (Sir J. Spicer) on 18 January 1996, Official Report, column 682, and my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Grantham (Mr. Hogg) on 22 November 1995, Official Report, columns 192–93, and 30 April 1996, Official Report, columns 483–84.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions in each year since 1989 abattoirs were prosecuted for failure to comply with BSE-related regulations governing the treatment of carcases. [31247]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 4 June 1996]: Prior to 1 April 1995, meat inspection was the responsibility of local authorities. Details of prosecutions made by local authorities of contraventions in slaughterhouses are not held centrally.

On 1 April 1995 responsibility for meat inspection in slaughterhouses was transferred to the Meat Hygiene Service. So far, there has been one successful prosecution and a number of other cases are under investigation.

DEFENCE

Sea Training

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the costs of supporting flag officer sea training at Plymouth rather than at Portland; if he will estimate (a) the training days to be provided this year compared to the last full year at Portland and (b) the number of Sootax helicopter flights in support of flag officer sea training at Portland; what was the original estimate for helicopter flights from Plymouth airport and what number are actually being made from Plymouth airport; how many staff were originally estimated to be needed at Plymouth and how many are now assessed as being needed; and what is the latest estimate of the cost of closure of Portland naval base, transfer of flag officer sea training and of setting up flag officer sea training in Plymouth. [31767]

Mr. Soames: The Royal Navy's operational sea training organisation enjoys a worldwide reputation for its excellent and cost-effective training.

During the period July 1994 to July 1995—the last full year at Portland—225 training days were achieved by flag officer sea training; the estimate for the 12-month period to July 1996—the first year at Plymouth—is 235 training days. In the final year at Portland there were 547 planned Sootax helicopter sorties of which 483 were achieved; for the period July 1995 to April 1996 839 sorties were planned and 816 achieved at Plymouth. Activity levels at Plymouth have been higher than originally estimated, because of increased demand for sea training and other operational reasons.

In 1993 it was estimated that 230 personnel, service and civilian, would be needed to run the FOST operation in Plymouth. However, training is now being successfully achieved with a complement of 202.

The present estimate for the cost of closing Portland and moving FOST to Plymouth is some £10.4 million.

NATO

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) his Department's total expenditure and (b) the average defence expenditure of other European members of NATO in each of the last financial years, expressed in 1995–96 prices. [32072]

Mr. Soames: Information provided to NATO by member states gives the following comparison, at 1990 $US prices and exchange rates, between UK defence spending and the average among the other European members of the alliance:

	UK ($ million)	European average ($ million)
1991	39,790	11,869
1992	35,473	11,535
1993	34,292	11,198
1994	32,622	10,909
1995	30,710	10,640

Armed Forces (Deaths)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, column 559, how many people in the armed forces who served in the Gulf war have died since January 1991. [31788]

Mr. Soames [holding reply 10 June 1996]: Since January 1991 the total number of personnel who served in the Gulf war and subsequently died, while still serving in the armed forces, is 84.

Recruitment

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent in recruiting staff to his Department and its executive agencies during the 1994–95 and 1995–96 financial years; and how many staff were recruited in each of these years. [31397]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This information is not held centrally within my Department or within some of its agencies, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Where this matter falls to chief executives of my Department's agencies and the information is readily available, I have asked them to write direct to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Defence for details of numbers of staff recruited, and associated costs, for the years 1994–95 and 1995–96 for his Department and its Agencies. I am replying on behalf of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA).

Recruitment is only one aspect of personnel work and it is not our practice to allocate specific staff and related costs solely to this activity. Major, and clearly identifiable, costs are those associated with recruitment advertising, promotional and marketing material and recruitment literature. These identifiable costs are as follows:

1994–95: £0.9 million

1995–96: £1.4 million

The number of staff recruited in each of these years is as follows:

1995–96: 1,046

As a result of consolidation within the MOD this Agency became about 50% larger in 1995–96 compared with 1994–95, which is the principal reason for the increased activity.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from S. Parnell to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

1. You recently asked the Secretary of State for Defence two Parliamentary Questions concerning the use of executive search agencies and recruitment costs within Agencies of the Ministry of Defence. The matters you raise fall within the responsibilities delegated to the Chief Executive of the Hydrographic Defence Agency, Rear Admiral J. P. Clarke, In the normal course of events Admiral Clarke would reply to you personally but unfortunately he is at present on official duty overseas so I have been asked to reply to you on his behalf.

2. As the two questions you asked relate to similar issues I hope you will not object if I reply to them both in this letter.

3. Turning first to your question about recruitment costs (1497H) the information you require, concerning the Hydrographic Office, can be summarised as follows:

Year	Number recruited	Cost £
1995–96	66	21,681

4. As regards your question about executive search agencies or employment companies, (1498H) I can tell you that the Hydrographic Office did not use any executive search agency or employment company in filling any vacancies that arose during 1994/95 or 1995/96.

I hope the above information has been helpful.

Letter from J. C. R. Hunt to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

The Meteorological Office is an Executive Agency of the Ministry of Defence. As Chief Executive I am responding to your question regarding recruitment.

In the financial year 1994–95 we recruited 42 staff at a cost of £71,036.

In the financial year 1995–96 we recruited 65 staff at the cost of £119,393.

I hope this gives you the information you need.

Letter from Brigadier T. McG. Brown to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence, the Rt Hon Michael Portillo MP, regarding the cost of recruiting staff and the number of staff recruited in 1994/95 and 1995/96 within the MoD and its associated agencies.

As Chief Executive, this matter falls within my area of responsibility for the Defence Postal and Courier Services Agency.

During 1994/95 and 1995/96 the Agency employed five staff to manage the personnel function for in excess of 300 civilian staff, and part of their function is to oversee recruitment. However, other than the £7,600 spent advertising for staff, the cost of the recruitment component is not separately identified. In 1994/95 and 1995/96 we recruited 55 and 122 staff respectively, excluding those we assumed responsibility for as a result of MoD reorganisations. We are not responsible for recruiting military staff who are recruited by the Army's centralised recruitment function.

I hope this information is helpful.

Letter from W. E. Spreadbury to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence (about recruitment of staff) on behalf of the Chief Executive of the Duke of York's Royal Military School who is absent on duty as this matter falls within his area of responsibility.

During the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 my Agency spent £1775 and £1847 respectively on recruiting staff. The numbers of staff recruited in these two years were 7 and 13 respectively.

Letter from Brigadier K. J. W. Good to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence regarding how much my agency has spent in recruiting staff during the 1994/95 and 1995/96 financial years; and how many staff were recruited in each of these years.

My response, therefore, is as follows:

Total spend on recruitment 1994/95: £86,775

Total spend on recruitment 1995/96: £89,625

Total number of staff recruited 1994/95: 358

Total number of staff recruited 1995/96: 427

I trust this fully answers your question.

Letter from I. S. Mitchelson to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence relating to recruitment within this Agency during 1994/95 and 1995/96, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of Service Children's Education, (SCE).

Almost all Service Children's Education staff are recruited in the UK for service overseas or recruited locally in overseas locations. During the 1994/95 Financial Year SCE's predecessor Agency, Service Children's Schools (North West Europe), recruited 353 locally entered staff. Advertising for these types of staff was through existing service sources at negligible additional associated cost, which was not separately recorded. No associated travel and subsistence costs, nor fees for interview board members was incurred. The Agency only assumed responsibility for recruitment of locally entered staff in July 1994 and figures are not available prior to this. Additionally during 1994/95 10 UK Based staff were recruited at a cost of £20,770, inclusive of advertising costs, board members fees and candidates travel and subsistence costs.

In the 1995/96 Financial Year, the Agency recruited 1,044 locally entered staff, almost all part-time. Twenty-two UK Based staff were recruited during the same period at a cost of £44,874. In addition to the costs at 1994/95, this figure includes the hiring of regional venues for the interviews.

Letter from Paul A. Altobell to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about expenditure on recruiting staff as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Analytical Services Agency.

DASA has spent the following on the recruitment of staff:

1995/96: £2,752.35

In addition to those staff recruited for us by our parent Department (MoD) my Agency has directly recruited the following:

Number of staff

Letter from Colonel A. H. Roache to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Defence Animal Centre (DAC) I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence regarding how much the DAC spent in recruiting staff during the 1994–95 and 1995–96 financial years and how many staff were recruited in each of these years.

Staff are recruited through the mediums of the Area Civilian Staff Manager and the Job Centre and the use of these organisations is at no cost to the DAC.

During the financial year 1994–95, 10 staff were recruited and 36 were recruited during 1995–96.

Letter from Air Commodore P. C. Ayee to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence, asking how much his Department spent in recruiting staff to his Department and its executive agencies during the 1994–95 and 1995–95 financial years; and how many staff were recruited in each of these years as this matter falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Signals Engineering Establishment.

From its launch as an executive agency on 22 Nov 94 until the end of financial year 1994–95 my agency recruited 45 staff through the Department at no direct cost to the Agency. In financial year 1995–96 we recruited 51 staff at a direct cost of £2,652.

Letter from Captain W. S. Graham to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

1. I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence, that asked how much was spent in the 'Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation (NARO)' in recruiting staff during 1994–95 and 1995–96 financial years, and how many staff were recruited in each of these years, as the matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the NARO.

2. The figures are as follows:

Letter from W. E. E. Boreham to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about recruitment, as this falls into my area of responsibility as Chief Constables/Chief Executive of the Ministry of Defence Police Agency.

I recruited 32 police officers and no civilians in 1994–95, and no police officers but 12 civilian staff, for employment at MDP Wethersfield, in 1995–96. I spent £6,192 on police recruitment advertising during financial year 1994–95 and £10,040 in 1995–96. Recruitment is conducted in-house by my Personnel Department as part of its wider duties, and the staff costs associated with recruitment are not separately identified.

Letters from N. J. Pearson to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the cost of recruiting staff and the number of staff recruited as this matters falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Joint Air Reconnaissance Intelligence Centre (JARIC) Defence Agency. The Agency, which formed on 19 April 1996, continues to use the Department's centralized resources for its Service and civilian recruitment needs. Information on staff recruitment costs could only be provided at disproportionate costs. Since personnel are recruited to meet central requirements and not exclusively to fill JARIC's needs. The numbers of civilian staff externally recruited to meet JARIC's vacancies for financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 were 14 and 16 respectively.

Letter from Brigadier J. R. Drew to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about how much was spent by Defence Agencies on recruitment in 1994/95 and 1995/96 and how many staff were recruited, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Army Base Repair Organisation (ABRO).

It is not possible to provide information about the full cost to ABRO of recruitment in these years as the systems are not yet available to provide this without disproportionate cost and effort. I can however advise that the number of staff recruited and the amount spent on recruitment advertising for the most recent full financial years was:

	1994–95	1995–96
Number of staff	243	533
Cost of advertising	£7,618	£30,027

I hope that this is helpful.

Letter from Brian Raine to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence, on how much his Department spent in recruiting staff to his Department and its executive agencies during the 1994–95 and 1995–96 financial year; and how many staff were recruited in each of these years.

Cost of Advertising

1995/96: £9,385.53

Numbers recruited

If you have any further questions about this reply please do not hesitate to contact me.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what use his Department and its executive agencies have made of executive search agencies or employment companies in filling vacancies within his Department or executive agencies administered by his Department during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96; what agencies were employed; what was the cost in each case; how many staff were recruited in each case; and what was the total cost in each financial year of these contracts. [31412]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Department and its executive agencies have engaged the services of executive search agencies and employment companies for recruitment to senior appointments such as chief executives of defence agencies.

Saxton Bampfylde International plc: 1 post

Norman Broadbent Selection (NBS): 1 post

Total cost for year £72,000

1995–96

Norman Broadbent Selection (NBS): 1 post

Recruitment and Assessment Services (RAS): 8 posts

Total cost for year £134,853

We also use the Recruitment and Advisory Service, formerly the Civil Service Commission, for the Department's fast stream recruitment requirements.

The figures quoted include value added tax but not the costs of advertising. The individual fees for the companies are commercially confidential.

Where responsibility for these matters falls to the chief executives of my Department's agencies under the terms of their framework documents and they have exercised that responsibility, I have asked the chief executives to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Brigadier J. R. Drew to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the use made by Defence Agencies of executive search agencies and employment companies in 1994/5 and 1995/96, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Army Base Repair Organisation (ABRO).

I have enclosed the details you requested on a separate sheet. It should be noted that the number of staff engaged through employment agencies was unusually high in 1995/96 because of the need temporarily to replace vital skills lost during the rundown of ABRO Old Dalby. All the work of that workshop is in the process of transfer to other ABRO and MOD facilities or to industry.

ABRO: Use of employment agencies

Agencies used	Numbers of posts filled	Cost £
1994–95
Turner Charles Ltd, Staff UK, British Nursing Corporation	5	96,955
1995–96
Turner Charles Ltd, Staff UK, British Nursing Corporation, Kelly Services, Matchmaker Personnel	30	205,514

The individual fees for companies are not given as they are commercially confidential.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

Your two recent questions asked the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances his Department and Agencies have used executive search agencies or employment companies in filling vacancies in preference to their own personnel staff and for details about the agencies used in the years 1994–95 and 1995–96. I am replying on behalf of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) and will answer both questions in this letter.

DERA's policy is to use its own resources for recruiting. On occasion we also use executive search or employment agencies to fill a particularly specialised post or one in a profession not immediately connected with DERA's main business.

The agencies used by DERA with the numbers of staff recruited in the last two years were as follows:

Agency	Recruits
1994–95
Hays Accountancy Personnel	2
Accountancy Personnel	1
Saxton Barnfylde	1
Genesis Recruitment	1
HS Consultants	1
Total	6
1995–96
Robert Half (Accountancy)	5
Cambridge Recruitment Consultants	8
Accountancy Personnel	1
Accountancy Appointments	1
Wendy B Employment Consultants	1
Manpower PLC	1
Howlett Thrope Recruitment Consultants	1
Total	20

I cannot give the amounts paid to each of these companies individually as this information is commercial in confidence. The total amount paid in 1994–95 was £54,400 and the figure for 1995–96 was £86,900.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from J. C. R. Hunt to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

The Meteorological Office is an Executive Agency of the Ministry of Defence. As Chief Executive I am responding to your question regarding the use of executive search agencies or employment agencies.

In the financial year 1994–95 we made no use of such agencies.

In the financial year 1995–96 we used an agency on one occasion to recruit a senior finance person at a cost of £21,112. This figure is not out of line with recruitment costs generally in an area where market forces are firmly in play.

Letter from S. Parnell to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

1. You recently asked the Secretary of State for Defence two Parliamentary Questions concerning the use of executive search agencies and recruitment costs within Agencies of the Ministry of Defence. The matters you raise fall within the responsibilities delegated to the Chief Executive of the Hydrographic Defence Agency, Rear Admiral J. P. Clarke. In the normal course of events Admiral Clarke would reply to you personally but unfortunately he is at present on official duty overseas so I have been asked to reply to you on his behalf.

2. As the two questions you asked relate to similar issues I hope you will not object if I reply to them both in this letter.

3. Turning first to your question about recruitment costs (1497H) the information you require, concerning the Hydrographic Office, can be summarised as follows:

1995–96	66	21,681

4. As regards your question about executive search agencies or employment companies, (1498H) I can tell you that the Hydrographic Office did not use any executive search agency or employment company in filling any vacancies that arose during 1994/95 or 1995/96.

I hope the above information has been helpful.

Letter from Brigadier T. McG. Brown to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence, the Rt Hon Michael Portillo MP, regarding the use of employment and executive search agencies within the MoD and its associated agencies.

As Chief Executive, this matter falls within my area of responsibility for the Defence Postal and Courier Services Agency.

In 1994/95 and 1995/96 the Agency used temporary staff from "Manpower", "Remploy Ltd" and "Josephine Sammons Ltd". We also recruited from local Job Centres and directly via advertisements in the local press. We have approached various agencies to recruit accounting staff with successful candidates being provided by "Bond Accountancy" and "Hays Accountancy Personnel". The staff recruited from agencies are temporary staff for whom we do not pay a recruitment fee, but the hourly charge for these staff incorporates a percentage payable to the recruitment agency. The overall cost of employing agency staff is similar to that of our equivalent permanent staff. We do not maintain a record of the number of general temporary staff employed in 1994/95 and 1995/96. However, the number of temporary specialist accounting staff employed in this time was two.

I hope this information is helpful.

Letter from I. S. Mitchelson to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence relating to the use of executive search agencies or employment companies, insofar as this area falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of Service Children's Education.

Service Children's Education, and its predecessor Service Children's Schools (North West Europe), has not used executive search agencies or employment companies in filling vacancies during the financial year 1994–95 and 1995–96. The Recruitment and Advisory Service (RAS) is currently being used to assist the recruitment of my replacement following my retirement on 31 December 1996.

Letter from Brigadier M. G. R. Hodson to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your two Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence, about executive search and employment agencies, as these matters fall within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Transport and Movements Executive Agency.

We formed as an Agency in April 1995 and since then have utilized the services of just one outside recruitment agency. This was in connection with the engagement of one person direct from the commercial market and in such circumstances I considered it necessary to employ the Recruitment and Assessment Services, Basingstoke, because of their expertise in this specialist area. The cost falling during financial year 1995/96 was £4,054.

Letter from Paul Attobell to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the use of executive search agencies or employment companies as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Analytical Services Agency.

DASA has made no use of search agencies during 1994/95 and 1995/96. We have, however, used an employment agency to bring in casual staff on a short term basis to cope with surges in capacity. The details are as follows:

Employment Agency: Manpower plc

Cost of using Agency: DASA recruits casual staff through a central contract placed with Manpower plc by our parent Department (MoD). No details are held locally.

Numbers of staff recruited

1995/96: 4

Total cost to DASA

1994/95: £38,439

1995/96: £35,608.

Letter from Brigadier M. J. Roycroft to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to 2 of your Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about how much his Department spent in recruiting staff to his Department and its executive agencies during the 1994–95 and 1995–96 financial years; and how many staff were recruited in each of these years. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Clothing & Textiles Agency.

The Defence Clothing & Textiles Agency has delegated recruiting powers for civilian staff. The Agency did not recruit any staff from external sources in financial year 1994–95 and did not therefore incur any expenditure for recruiting staff. In financial year 1995–96 advertising costs of £5,760 were incurred for the recruitment of 36 personnel. The Agency did not use any executive search agencies or employment companies for filling vacancies during this period.

I hope that the above information provides the answers you require.

Letter from Keith Ellender to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the use made of executive search agencies or employment companies to fill vacancies within agencies. This matter falls to me as Chief Executive of the Disposal Sales Agency.

During 1995/96 the Recruitment and Assessment Services Agency (RAS) were employed to advertise the post of Chief Executive as a cost to my Agency. The cost of advertising amounted to £6,844.37. The fee paid to RAS cannot be disclosed as this information is 'Commercial-in-Confidence'.

No use was made of executive search agencies or employment companies by my Agency during 1994/95.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances his Department or its executive agencies uses an executive search or employment agency to recruit staff in preference to using personnel staff within his own Department or its executive agencies. [31525]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The recruitment and executive search agencies are engaged to assist the Department and its agencies in identifying and recruiting appropriately qualified and experienced individuals in cases where appointments are being filled by open competition and where the Department does not have the relevant in-house recruiting capability.

Where the chief executives of my Department's agencies have responsibilities for this matter under the terms of their framework documents and have additional information I have asked them to write direct to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 11 June 1996:

Your two recent questions asked the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances his Department and Agencies have used executive search agencies or employment companies in filling vacancies in preference to their own personnel staff and for details about the agencies used in the years 1994–95 and 1995–96. I am replying on behalf of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) and will answer both questions in this letter.

DERA's policy is to use its own resources for recruiting. On occasion we also use executive search or employment agencies to fill a particularly specialised post or one in a profession not immediately connected with DERA's main business.

The agencies used by DERA with the numbers of staff recruited in the last two years were as follows:

Agency	Recruits
1994–95
Hays Accountancy Personnel	2
Accountancy Personnel	1
Saxton Barnfylde	1
Genesis Recruitment	1
HS Consultants	1
Total	6
1995–96
Robert Half (Accountancy)	5
Cambridge Recruitment Consultants	8
Accountancy Personnel	1
Accountancy Appointments	1
Wendy B Employment Consultants	1
Manpower PLC	1
Howlett Thrope Recruitment Consultants	1
Total	20

I cannot give the amounts paid to each of these companies individually as this information is commercial in confidence. The total amount paid in 1994–95 was £54,400 and the figure for 1995–96 was £86,900.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from S. Parnell to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 12 June 1996:

1. You recently asked the Secretary of State for Defence a Parliamentary Question about the circumstances in which the Ministry of Defence or its executive agencies would use an executive search or employment agency to recruit staff. As the issue you raise falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Hydrographic Office Defence Agency, your question has been referred to the Hydrographic Office for the provision of a reply. In the normal course of events Admiral Clarke would reply to you personally but unfortunately he is at present on official duty overseas so I have been asked to respond to you on his behalf.

2. In answer to your question, the Hydrographic Office would only use employment agencies in special circumstances, for example to meet short-term requirements owing to temporary absences or because of surge requirements to accommodate sudden, but temporary increases in workflow.

3. I hope the above has been helpful.

Letter from Brigadier K. J. W. Good to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 12 June 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence regarding the circumstances in which my Agency uses an executive search or employment agency to recruit staff in preference to using personnel staff within the Ministry of Defence.

There are currently no circumstances in which the Army Base Storage and Distribution Agency would make use of an executive search or employment agency, as we have no personnel delegations for mobile grades. Non-mobile grades are recruited through Job Centres at no cost to the agency or the Ministry of Defence.

I trust this fully answers your question.

Letter from Brigadier T. McG. Brown to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 12 June 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence, the Rt Hon Michael Portillo MP, regarding the circumstances in which employment and executive search agencies are used within the MoD and its associated agencies.

As Chief Executive, this matter falls within my area of responsibility for the Defence Postal and Courier Services Agency.

The Agency uses employment agencies to provide temporary staff where it is not possible to recruit permanent staff from within the MoD sufficiently quickly to fill vacancies. This situation generally arises where staff are required at short notice, or occasionally where there is a need to recruit specialist staff on short term appointments. The Agency has not used executive search agencies as all senior staff, both military and civilian, have been appointed from within MoD. We always attempt to recruit from existing MoD staff before approaching employment agencies.

I hope this information is helpful.

Letter from N. J. Pearson to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 12 June 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the circumstances under which search agencies or employment companies would be used to recruit staff as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Joint Air Reconnaissance Intelligence Centre Defence Agency. The Agency, which is only 2 months old, cannot currently envisage a circumstance in which either an executive search agency or employment company would be used to recruit staff in preference to employing the Agency's Department's own personnel resources.

Letter from Brigadier J. R. Drew to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 12 June 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking in what circumstances Defence Agencies use executive search agencies and employment companies, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Army Base Repair Organisation (ABRO).

ABRO uses the services of employment companies only when difficulties are encountered in filling posts with internal candidates who have the requisite skills and experience or can move in the appropriate time frame. All such appointments are made on temporary contracts and are very much the exception rather than the rule.

SCOTLAND

GP Fundholding

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of NHS expenditure on hospital and community services in Scotland is managed by GP fundholding. [31811]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In 1995–96 GP fundholders managed 3.7 per cent. of NHS revenue expenditure on hospital and community services in Scotland.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was (a) the total national cost and (b) the cost per health board area of the allowances to cover the additional administrative costs of general practitioner fundholding in Scotland in each year since its introduction. [31810]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South (Mr. Donohoe) on 6 February, Official Report, columns 83–86.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many health boards in Scotland have established fundholding units as a means of supporting and encouraging general practitioner fundholding; and what is the annual cost of these units in each case. [31817]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None of the health boards in Scotland has established fundholding units. There is, however, a department of primary care within each health board which seeks to develop general practice. Staff involved in the management and support of all GPs, including fundholders, are employed within these departments.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total amount of efficiency savings by GP fundholding practices in Scotland in each year since the introduction of GP fundholding including the current year to date. [31813]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: For information on the amount of savings made by GP fundholders held by health boards from 1990–91 to 1994–95, the latest year for which audited accounts are available. I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South (Mr. Donohoe) on 6 February, Official Report, column 85. Audited figures are not yet available for 1995–96.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total budgets of all GP fundholding practices in Scotland in each year since its introduction, including the current year to date. [31815]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is set out in the table. Information for the current year to date is not yet available.

Sentinel Works, Polmadie

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to ensure the physical integrity of the grade A listed building at 61 Jessie street, Polmadie, Glasgow. [32208]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The maintenance of listed buildings is essentially a matter for the owners. In 1995 an application to demolish the building was submitted to Glasgow district council by Strathclyde regional council in connection with the proposed M74 extension. Following advice from Historic Scotland, however, it was accepted that the demolition of the building was no longer required in connection with the extension of the motorway and the application was withdrawn.

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what responsibility he has retained for the Sentinel Works at 61 Jessie street, Polmadie, Glasgow. [32228]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no direct responsibility for the Sentinel Works. However, as it is a category A listed building, any applications which the planning authority was minded to approve to alter, extend or demolish the building would have to be referred to him.

Council Homes

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many council homes have been built in each financial year since 1979–80 in Scotland. [32447]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The total numbers of completions of local authority dwellings in the financial years 1979–80 to 1994–95 are as follows:

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what considerations underlay the statement in the Scottish Office Development Department circular 6/96 regarding the compliance of tendering practices with legislation; to which legislation this statement refers; and if the Scottish Office has received external legal guidance to support this assessment. [31567]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 7 June 1996]: The basic legislation is the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980, the Local Government Act 1988 and the Local Government Act 1992, and regulations made thereunder. The purpose of the circular, which was issued after careful consideration of all relevant factors and reflects experience, is to provide guidance to authorities on how they may avoid conduct which has the effect or is intended or likely to have the effect of restricting, distorting or preventing competition and thus ensure value for money for the council tax payer. The circular replaces one issued in 1993.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many representations he has received indicating that Scottish local authorities have been increasing the capacity of their direct labour organisations; and who made these complaints; [31569]

(2) pursuant to his Department's letter to the president of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities of 11 May, which Scottish local authorities have used his

Department's moratorium on compulsory competitive tendering to increase direct labour organisation in-house capacity; and if he will list the evidence supporting the claim. [31576]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 7 June 1996]: We have received some 20 written complaints from contractors and other interested parties, whom it would not be appropriate to name, about authorities' actions during the CCT moratorium. We have also received representations at meetings which I and my officials have attended and have received other oral complaints. The representations have not concentrated on authorities increasing their DLO in-house capacity, on which we have no information centrally. Instead, the representations have referred to authorities taking work in-house without tendering the market and without ensuring best value for money for the council tax payer.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the legislation, statutory instruments, regulations and circulars relating to compulsory competitive tendering that have been passed or issued since 1980. [31570]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 7 June 1996]: The information is as follows:

The above circulars, with one exception, were issued by the Scottish Development Department/the Scottish Office Environment Department/the Scottish Office Development Department. The one exception is circular 18/1991, which was issued by the Scottish Office Education Department.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the cost in terms of (a) civil servant staff time and (b) other expenditure incurred by his Department in preparing legislation, statutory instruments, regulations and circulars relating to compulsory competitive tendering since 1980. [31571]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 7 June 1996]: This information is not available, but I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Dundee, East (Mr. McAllion) on 24 April 1996, Official Report, column 124.

Stonehaven Hospital

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the payback period for the private finance initiative element in respect of Stonehaven hospital. [32041]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 10 June 1996]: Grampian health board has yet to decide on the preferred bidder for the Stonehaven scheme. When a contract is awarded, it will be for an initial period of 10 years and will be for the provision by the successful tenderer of a range of services, which will be provided in new hospital premises, not for the construction of the hospital itself. The winning bidder will need to demonstrate that it provides the best value for money compared to other bids and against a public sector comparator. Therefore, it will be for the private sector to consider the payback period for the new facilities that it provides in the context of its bids, which will be expressed in terms of an overall price covering service provision, overheads and any capital elements.

Fishing (Net Sizes)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information is held on the amount of large mesh bottom-set gill net in use off Scotland by (a) British boats and (b) foreign boats (i) within the six-mile limit and (ii) beyond; and how any changes in the amount and type of gill net use, as a result of the proposed derogation on monofilament net will be determined. [31777]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 7 June 1996]: Information is not collected separately on the use of large mesh bottom set gill nets. There are no plans to change this.

Pesca Funding

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much Pesca funding is available for fishery projects in Scotland in 1996–97; how much was paid in 1995–96; and if he will list those projects funded and the amount each project received. [32193]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 10 June 1996]: Just over one Mecu—£827,000—is available to fund projects under the financial instrument for fisheries guidance in 1996. Eligible activity includes business opportunity studies, product development and marketing research and quality assurance initiatives. No money has been paid out under Pesca for 1995 or 1996.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Car Crime

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, in rank order, the statistics collated by his Department for car crime in (a) the member states of the European Union, (b) the regions of the UK and (c) districts within the north-west for each of the last five years. [32187]

Mr. Maclean: Comparisons of car crime statistics in the member states of the European Union are difficult because definitions of offences vary between countries due both to legal differences and statistical recording methods. However, the international crime survey has compared risks of car crime in European countries in 1988 and 1991 and the results are published in Home Office research findings No. 8. Additionally, information on recorded thefts of a vehicle in European countries in 1990 is published in the "Draft European Sourcebook of Crime and Criminal Justice Statistics". Copies of both these publications are available in the Library. Statistics for each police force area in England and Wales have also been placed in the Library. Figures for Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for the respective Secretaries of State. Information on districts within the north-west is not collected centrally.

Firearms Incidents

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to introduce a code of practice for use by appointed investigating officers when dealing with the Police Complaints Authority supervised investigations following firearms incidents; [32225]

(2) for appointed investigating officers to deal with the Police Complaints Authority supervised investigations following firearms incidents. [32226]

Mr. Maclean: None. The investigation of police conduct is a matter for the chief officer of the force concerned and the Police Complaints Authority.

Crime Rates

Mr. Brian Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the overall crime rate and annual percentage change in each year since 1979 in (a) the west midlands and (b) Staffordshire. [32258]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is given in the following table:

Recorded crime in the West Midlands and Staffordshire

Immigration Offenders

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if a person detained in prison for an immigration offence is kept informed of reviews of his case. [32468]

Mr. Kirkhope: Those detained in prisons and immigration detention centres under powers contained in the Immigration Act 1971 are advised in writing by the immigration service of developments in their case on a monthly basis from the date of their detention under immigration powers. Following the issue of revised instructions in May 1995, detained asylum claimants are informed separately about the progress of their applications by the asylum directorate.

Special Constabulary

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police forces in Great Britain employ, or plan to employ, a special constabulary liaison recruiting officer or equivalent; [32232]

(2) in those police forces which employ a special constabulary proactive recruiting officer or equivalent (a) what salary people employed in these positions receive, (b) how many hours per week they work and (c) how much money was spent on advertisements to recruit them. [32233]

Mr. Maclean: The information held centrally is as follows:

All 43 police forces in England and Wales have force recruitment officers whose responsibilities include the recruitment of special constables. At least two forces employ at least one member of staff who is solely dedicated to processing applications to the special constabulary. In one force, a special constable handles applications to the special constabulary.

Nineteen out of 43 police forces in England and Wales have appointed, or intend to appoint, specials liaison officers. Their duties and responsibilities vary, but may include liaison between regular officers and special constables across the force, promoting the special constabulary within the community, and helping to plan specials-specific initiatives. The majority of forces employ civilians in the post, but four forces have appointed inspectors, and police constables, for the purpose. All but two of the specials liaison officers are full-time—approximately 37 hours per week. The two part-time posts are for about 20 hours a week.

The salaries of the civilian employees range from £10,400 to £22,000 per annum: the salaries of the regular officers involved range from some £30,000 to £53,000 per annum. Several of the special liaison officer posts have been funded from Home Office grant provided through challenge funding earlier this year.

In the majority of cases, the posts were advertised internally and thus without direct costs. In the five forces where the costs were identifiable, they ranged from £170 to £700.

Royal Commission on Criminal Justice

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost of the royal commission on criminal justice review for England and Wales chaired by Viscount Runciman of Doxford. [32304]

Mr. Maclean: The total cost of the royal commission on criminal justice, which reported in July 1993, was £2.5 million.

Bats

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions were brought against persons destroying bats and bat habitats in the latest year for which figures are available. [32234]

Mr. Maclean: Information collected centrally by my Department on court proceedings under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 section 9—protection of certain wild animals—does not identify the animal involved or the subsection under which the offence was placed. However, our statistics show that in 1994—the latest year for which figures are available—there were a total of seven prosecutions under section 9.

Crime Clear-up Rates

Mr. Brian Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the crime clear-up rate and annual percentage change in each year since 1979 in (a) Staffordshire and (b) the west midlands. [32259]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is given in the following table:

Prisons

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the results of Coopers and Lybrand's review of comparative costs and performance of privately managed and public sector prisons; and if he will make a statement. [33265]

Miss Widdecombe: I have today placed in the Library copies of a review of comparative costs and performance of privately and publicly operated prisons carried out for the Prison Service by Coopers and Lybrand. The study compared Blakenhurst, Doncaster and the Wolds with the most nearly comparable public sector prisons using 1994–95 data. The findings are summarised in the tables.

The results show that, after adjusting costs onto a comparable basis, privately managed prisons are cheaper by 13 to 22 per cent. than public sector prisons and deliver equal or better performance on most measures. The findings are broadly consistent with previous findings based on 1993–94 data but suggest that the gap between the two sectors on cost has narrowed slightly.

Persons of Irish Origin (Supervision)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of Sate for the Home Department how many persons of Irish origin were being supervised by the probation service in England and Wales at the latest available date and for equivalent dates in 1986 and 1991. [32713]

Mr. Sackville: Information on the nationality of those supervised by the probation service is not collected centrally by the Home Office.

Miscarriages of Justice (Persons of Irish Descent)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of miscarriages of justice have involved persons of Irish descent over the last 15 years. [32714]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information requested is not available.

Sex Offenders

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to consult on further measures to protect the public from sex offenders. [33278]

Mr. Howard: I shall be publishing a consultation document on the sentencing and supervision of sex offenders at 11 am on Monday 17 June. Copies will then be available in the Library.

TRANSPORT

Traffic Area Office (Cardiff)

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many personal callers visited the south Wales traffic area office in Cardiff in (a) April 1996 and (b) May 1996; and if he will make a statement. [32224]

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 10 June to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Lady O. Maitland), Official Report, column 30. In April 1996, there were 193 personal callers and 246 callers in May 1996 to the south Wales traffic area office.

Light Dues

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what evidence he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated of other countries' methods of levying light dues; and if he will make a statement. [32471]

Mr. Norris: We contributed to the study of "user pays" carried out by the European Commission by providing an adviser on secondment for one year. We are currently awaiting the final results of that study.

School Buses

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken to ensure that where seat belts are fitted to coaches and minibuses for use by school children (a) tested equipment is fitted, (b) equipment is fitted safely, (c) the three-to-two rule is not used, (d) counterfeit equipment is not allowed and (e) seat belts are worn. [32572]

Mr. Norris: The safety of equipment and its fitting must ultimately remain the responsibility of the installer. We intend to issue guide lines in support of the legislation and are exploring options for checking installations at the annual test. We are also considering other safeguards but they can be of only a limited nature.

Additional steps beyond the legal measures already in place are not currently considered necessary for three to two, counterfeit equipment and the wearing of seat belts.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that each child on a school bus has a seat; and if he will make a statement on standing on buses and on blocking of gangways and emergency exits by baggage. [32573]

Mr. Norris: The responsibility for providing suitable home to school transport for children rests with the local education authority. Both the operators and the LEA must be satisfied that the transport provided enables children to travel in safety.

The carriage of standing passengers on buses is controlled by the Public Service Vehicles (Carrying Capacity) Regulations 1984. Both seating and standing capacities must be marked clearly on the vehicle. Vehicles intended to carry more than eight standing passengers must meet minimum requirements for both standing space and headroom. Sufficient hand grips must be fitted for each standing passenger. Gangways and emergency exits must not be obstructed at any time.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for the Environment in respect of discounting of extra expenditure incurred by local education authorities in respect of implementation of the end of the three-to-two rule on school travel. [32571]

Mr. Norris: The additional costs to local authorities of implementing changes to the three-for-two concession, following the new seat belt regulations, were taken into account along with a range of other pressures when determining the amount for education—education standard spending—in the local government finance settlement, and reflected in the increased funding for local education authorities.

Domestic Air Services

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action his Department is taking to ensure that slots for domestic services are protected at Heathrow and Gatwick airports; and if he will make a statement. [32796]

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport is taking no such action. Recommendations 8 and 9 of the Transport Committee's report on airport capacity, published on 21 May this year, address this issue. The Department aims to respond as soon as possible to the report.

Airport Capacity (London)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the current evaluation of a close parallel runway at Gatwick; and if he will make a statement. [32789]

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 22 May 1996, Official Report, column 231.

Civil Aviation Authority

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the future of the CAA following the EU third package on the liberalisation of air services. [32805]

Mr. Norris: None.

Channel Tunnel (Security)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what mandatory requirements are placed on European Passenger Services to undertake security inspections on passengers' baggage in respect of those travelling aboard Eurostar services. [32785]

Mr. Watts: EPS is required to security screen a percentage of passengers' baggage. The percentage varies depending on the levels of threat and risk as assessed by Government agencies.

All unaccompanied baggage—that is, baggage travelling separately from its owner—is screened.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many inspections were undertaken by Transec on security measures undertaken at the channel tunnel in each of the last two years. [32784]

Mr. Watts: From June 1994 to March 1995, 124 security inspections in relation to channel tunnel services were carried out. The figure for 1995–1996 was 289.

M25 (Widening)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) for what reasons traffic forecasts contained in the official assessment report for the 10 to 12 lane M25 widening scheme between junctions 12 and 15 do not allow for the road traffic impact of the consequences of a planning permission being granted for terminal 5 at Heathrow airport; and if he will make a statement; [31887]

(2) what allowance has been made within the traffic growth forecasts accompanying the junctions 12 to 15 widening scheme for the M25 for the traffic generation factors that were identified and contained in the Standing Advisory Committee on Trunk Road Assessment report of December 1994; and if he will make a statement. [31886]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Andrew Mackinlay, dated 13 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent parliamentary questions about the M25 widening scheme between Junctions 12 and 15.

The traffic forecasts for the scheme have taken into account the factors identified in the SACTRA report, including the potential for generated traffic. The State 3 Assessment Report, which was published with the Environmental Statement on 11 April, indicates that in overall terms, across the geographic area considered within the traffic model, no generated traffic is predicted.

Traffic forecasts for the widening do not include the effects of the proposed Heathrow Terminal 5 (T5) since the widening does not depend for its justification on T5.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [32664]

Mr. Norris: Initial assessment of critical operational systems has produced estimates of around 5,000 date tests needing modification. Assessment of necessary work is the subject of further detailed studies and will form the basis of cost negotiations with contractors. Replacement may obviate modification in some cases. Urgent changes have been made. Many of the Department's operational service and management systems will be replaced by the end of the century and are not being assessed. Studies are planned to cover all other systems in the Department.

Concessionary Travel

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the implications of the Wrekin decision of the European Court of Justice on retirement ages, for concessionary travel for pensioners in (a) Greater London and (b) the rest of the metropolitan countries. [32718]

Mr. Norris: The European Court of Justice has not yet given its judgment in the Atkins v. Wrekin district council and Department of Transport case. When it does we shall assess the implications.

Register of Shipping

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if entries on the British register of shipping indicate fully (a) the ownership of a vessel and (b) those with a title to the vessel. [32227]

Mr. Norris: The register of British ships records legal ownership. Title proof is required in respect of merchant ships and pleasure vessels on part I of the register, and of fishing vessels with full registration on part II of the register. Title proof is not required on part III—small ships—part IV—bareboat charter ships—or for fishing vessels with simple registration on part II of the register.

TREASURY

European Union

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a White Paper on the same lines as the economic assessment published in February 1970 showing the gains and losses to the average British family resulting from membership of the EU. [31820]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There are no plans to publish such an assessment.

Standard of Living

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will assess the gains and losses to the standard of living in the United Kingdom of (a) abolishing the common agricultural policy, (b) ending contributions to the EU budget, (c) ending free trade with the EU and its associations and (d) taking control over (i) fishery and (ii) other resources. [32085]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There are no plans to do so. Any such calculation would be very imprecise as it would require hypothetical assumptions to be made about the level of UK spending in the absence of contributions to, and receipts from, the Community budget; the policies which replaced those in the EU; the performance of the UK economy outside the Community; and the impact on trade outside the EU.

British Manufacturing and Research Company

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost of the investigation into the BMARC affair; and if he will publish the findings of the investigation. [32199]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 11 June 1996]: To date, the direct costs of the Customs investigation into alleged breaches of UK export controls by BMARC have been approximately £20,000. This figure is based on the National Investigation Services' time recording system. The figure does not include costs incurred by departmental management and legal advice provided by departmental lawyers, or the costs of giving evidence to the Trade and Industry Committee. Customs inquiries are, however, not yet complete and decisions on the form of any announcement on the outcome of these inquiries will be taken at the appropriate time.

Alcohol Smuggling

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his policy on the harmonisation of taxes on beers, wines and spirits; and what is his assessment of the revenues lost to the Treasury through such smuggling in the latest year for which figures are available. [32542]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 12 June 1996]: Member states should be free to set excise duty rates at the level they feel are appropriate to their own particular circumstances, subject only to the agreed minimum rates. This was the basis of the agreement reached by all member states at ECOFIN on 19 October 1992. Nevertheless, the Government consider that there should be movement towards the approximation of excise duty rates across the EU, and that some steps in the direction of the UK pattern of indirect taxation makes sense. The mechanism for achieving this aim is through the Commission's biennial review of the minimum rates of excise duty, the next such review being due by the end of 1996.

Customs does not, at present, have a reliable estimate of the extent of cross-border smuggling of alcoholic products. It is liaising with the drinks industry with the aim of achieving an objective measurement.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of (a) the total value and (b) the total volume of the cross-border smuggling of (i) beer, (ii) wines and (iii) spirits in the latest year for which figures are available; and what value of smuggled goods was seized in that year. [32540]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 12 June 1996]: Customs does not at present have a reliable estimate of the extent of either the total volume or total value of cross-border smuggling of alcoholic products. It is liaising with the drinks and tobacco industry with the aim of achieving an objective measurement. The revenue value of intra-EU smuggling detected by excise verification officers in the year ending 31 March 1996 is shown in the table:

Category	Revenue value detected (£ million)
Beer	3.090
Spirits	4.312

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received relating to the impact upon British companies and traders of cross-border smuggling of beers, wines and spirits; and what response he intends to make to those representations. [32541]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 12 June 1996]: The Chancellor receives many representations from the trade and other interested parties about the cross-border smuggling of alcoholic drinks and its consequential impact on legitimate UK trade. These representations are taken into account by the Chancellor when making his Budget decisions.

Customs has deployed excise verification officers to seek out and prosecute those engaged in smuggling activity. In addition, in November 1995 Customs, together with the various associations representing the industries concerned, formed an excise alliance for the purpose of developing a co-operative approach leading to the detection of smugglers and fraudsters, and to exchange high level information on excise smuggling and fraud matters.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Attorney-General what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [32675]

The Solicitor-General: The departments and agencies for which my right hon. and learned Friend is responsible are assessing the impact of the millennium date change.

In the case of the Treasury Solicitor's Department and Government Property Lawyers, no significant cost effects are expected.

The Serious Fraud Office estimates that several man months of work will be required to implement the change.

The Crown Prosecution Service has started a programme of work to assess the implications of the change but is not yet in a position to give an estimate of costs.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [32678]

Mr. Hanley: In line with Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency recommendations, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office diplomatic wing has completed a study to determine which of its computer systms will be affected by this problem. The findings show that approximately 60 per cent. of Foreign and Commonwealth Office computer systms will be affected in some way. Further study is now taking place to determine what the cost will be.

The Overseas Development Administration is updating its systems, most of which already recognise the year 2000.

Wilton Park

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the Wilton Park agency performed against the targets which were agreed for 1995–96; and if targets have been agreed for the current year. [33275]

Mr. Hanley: According to provisional figures which are subject to audit, Wilton Park exceeded all four of the agreed targets set for 1995–96 financial year, for the number of conference participants, income, cost recovery and cost per head to the FCO overall.

The Wilton Park departmental board met in April. We have agreed to the recommendation of the board that the following key targets be adopted for this financial year:

To increase overall income from £1,309.000 in 1995–96 to £1,368.000.

To increase cost recovery from 82.8 per cent. in 1995–96 to 85.1 per cent.

To increase the target for the overall number of Wilton Park Conference participants from 1,350 in 1995–96 to 1,500.

To reduce the average cost to the FCO of each participant from £165 in 1995–96 to £160.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing Associations

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of housing association tenants have been in receipt of housing benefit in each year since 1988. [32014]

Mr. Clappison: Definitive information is not yet available but on the basis of sample surveys the percentages have increased from the order of 52 to 55 per cent. in 1988 to about 61 to 65 per cent in 1994–95—figures for England.

Water Leakages

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the average water leakage levels in (a) 1988 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [32048]

Mr. Clappison: The Office of Water Supply Services report, "Leakage of Water in England and Wales", published on 30 May 196, gave a total leakage level for 1994–95 of about 30 per cent. of water put into the distribution system. Of this percentage, companies attribute about 23 per cent. to leakage from the distribution system and 7 per cent. from customers' supply pipes.

Further detail is contained in the body of the report, a copy of which is in the Library.

Leakage levels for 1988 are not available on a comparable basis.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [326679]

Sir Paul Bereford: My Department is aware of the issue and is currently investigating the scale and complexity of the problem and its potential cost effects. The Department's computer systems are primarily based upon modern technology, not affected by the millennium date problem. It is expected that those systems still residing on older technology will reach the end of their natural life and be replaced before 2000.

Local Government (Professional Work)

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to take action under section 13 of the Local Government Act 1988 against authorities who have subjected white collar professional work to competition; and if he will make a statement. [33153]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has today served notices under section 13 of the Local Government Act 1988 on the London boroughs of Enfield and Hounslow, the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority and the metropolitan district of Barnsley setting out his view that these authorities may have acted anti-competitively during competitions for legal services work. He has also served notices on the cities of Liverpool and Manchester setting out similar views in respect of construction-related services work.

Although the circumstances differ in each case, the most common grounds cited in the notices are: work was not packaged in a way which took proper account of the market's ability to provide the services, that tender documents did not indicate how much work was on offer, and that onerous conditions featured in some contracts.

They have four weeks in which to explain their actions in assigning work in-house after competitions against the private sector.

Special Waste Regulations

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 1 April, Official Report, column 15, what guidance will be issued on the Special Waste Regulations 1996. [33154]

Mr. Clappison: Detailed guidance on the Special Waste Regulations 1996 has been issued today in the form of a joint circular from the Department of the Environment, the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department and the Welsh Office. A copy of the circular has been placed in the Library.

The guidance was issued in draft form for public consultation in 1995. The final text takes account of the many comments received. It gives an outline of the procedures which are to be followed by those who handle special waste and incorporates in a separate annexe technical guidelines on the definition of special waste, technical aspects of assessing whether a particular consignment of waste is special, and the hazard criteria which apply.

Copies of the circular have been distributed to local authorities, the Environment Agency and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency, which will have a supervisory role in the system of controls.

In addition, we have produced a free 10-page leaflet on the regulations. This is designed for those who handle special waste and answers to the main questions which are likely to arise.

Estates Renewal Challenge Fund

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce the allocations for the 1996–97 round of the estates renewal challenge fund. [33236]

Mr. Curry: I shall be announcing allocations for the 1996–97 round of the estate renewal challenge fund tomorrow and shall place both copies of the press notice detailing the successful authorities in the Libraries of both Houses.

Social Housing

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the responses to the consultation papers, "Our Future Homes: Opportunity, Choice, Responsibility" and "More Choice in the Social Rented Sector". [32460]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 12 June 1996]: Six explanatory and consultation papers were published by my Department setting out the details of proposals in last year's White Paper "Our Future Homes". Copies of responses to these papers were made available for inspection through the Department of the Environment library in line with normal practice.

Water Companies

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, what voluntary leakage reduction target each water company has set over the next five and 10 years. [27164]

Mr. Clappison [pursuant to his reply, 30 April 1996, c. 420]: The Water Services Association has notified a correction to the data it originally provided. A revised summary table of water service companies' targets for reducing leakage follows:

Water service company leakage targets

DWR Cymru	Aim to achieve a reduction in leakage of 17 per cent. by 2000 and over a third by 2010.

HEALTH

Tobacco-related Cancer

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Germany have died of tobacco-related cancers in each of the last 10 years. [31765]

Mr. Horam: The Health Education Authority report "The Smoking Epidemic", copies of which are available in the Library, estimated that there were about 44,000 cancer deaths attributable to smoking in the United Kingdom in 1988.

No comparable figures are available for Germany.

Carers

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many meetings his Department, at ministerial or official level, has had with the Carers National Association since 1 January 1995 regarding the drafting and implementation of the Carers (Recognition and Services) Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [32483]

Mr. Bowis: We have had several meetings with the Carers National Association since January last year to discuss the legislation, and it was involved in the preparation of the policy guidance and practice guide. We regularly meet CNA—and other organisations—to discuss a variety of issues, including new legislation.

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he has taken to assist local authorities to implement the Carers (Recognition and Services) Act 1995; and what extra funds have been provided for this purpose (a) in England and (b) in each county in the south West. [32482]

Mr. Bowis: In February this year, we issued the carers (recognition and services) policy guidance and practice guide to all local authorities. Draft versions of the guidance were issued for consultation in October last year—some six months before the Act came into force. The Act enshrines in law principles of good practice which we recommended in previous guidance issued at the time of the implementation of the community care reforms. Examples of good practice on carers are described in the social service inspectorate reports published in 1995: notably "Caring Today" and "What Next for Carers?".

The Act should not involve significant extra costs. It enshrines in statute many of the principles of good practice which we had recommended local authorities follow.

Walsgrave Hospital, Coventry

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients had their operations cancelled on the day of admission at Walsgrave hospital, Coventry, in each year since 1990. [32256]

Mr. Horam: The information on individual hospitals is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Gary Reay, chairman of the Walsgrave Hospital NHS trust for details.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the percentage of patients not assessed within five minutes at Walsgrave hospital, Coventry, for each year for which figures are available. [32255]

Mr. Horam: This information can be obtained from the performance tables publication for 1993–94 and 1994–95, copies of which are available in the Library.

Lariam

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of reported and suspected adverse reactions to Lariam have been notified during the last three years for which figures are available. [32282]

Mr. Malone: The Medicines Control Agency has received 878 reports of 2,493 suspected adverse reactions associated with Lariam between 7 June 1993 and 7 June 1996. During this time, in excess of four hundred thousand patients have received Lariam. The reports received are consistent with the known safety profile of Lariam as described in the authorised product information.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from professional bodies and the Committee on Safety of Medicines on the anti-malarial drug Lariam. [32284]

Mr. Malone: The Department and the Medicines Control Agency have received representations from doctors and other health professionals and bodies representing health professionals and have responded to the issues raised. The Committee on Safety of Medicines, as an independent expert advisory body to the Licensing Authority, provides advice on the quality, efficacy and safety of medicines, including Lariam, to the Licensing Authority.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the indicated side effects of the drug Lariam. [32283]

Mr. Malone: Warnings on the side effects of Lariam are included in the product information. This includes the data sheet provided to all doctors and pharmacists and the information leaflet for patients.

Magnetic Resonance Imaging Scans

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the average waiting time for an MRI scan in (a) north-east Warwickshire and (b) Walsgrave hospital, Coventry; [32254]

(2) what is the average waiting time for an MRI scan in the United Kingdom. [32253]

Mr. Horam: Information for England is not available centrally. Questions relating to Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Civil Servants (Duties Abroad)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department spent during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 on sending civil servants accompanying Ministers from his Department on official duties abroad. [32416]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Warrington, South (Mr. Hall) on 1 March, Official Report, columns 762–64. Within the overall cost of ministerial visits to other countries, it is not possible to identify separately the element attributable to civil servants accompanying Ministers.

General Medical Services (East London and City)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the general medical services budget and proposed budget in the East London and City health authority. [32561]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 21 April 1995, Official Report, column 312.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) of 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1153, what factors prevented commencement of the despatch of letters relating to desogestrel and gestodene before 16.30 on 18 October 1995. [32723]

Mr. Malone: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health made an oral statement to the House on 23 October 1995, columns 701-02 which described the urgent arrangements put in place to communicate the Committee on Safety of Medicines' advice to health professionals. In addition, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 5 June, Official Report, column 448.

Medicines Commission

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members of the Medicines Commission as at 1 January indicating for each member his or her principal professional appointment, the date of first appointment to the commission, the scheduled termination of the period of membership and which of the criteria laid out in section 2(3) of the Medicines Act 1968 is relevant to the appointment of each member. [32722]

Mr. Malone: Members of the Medicines Commission are appointed for their knowledge and expertise which encompass the activities set out in section 2(3) of the Medicines Act 1968. The members of the Medicines Commission, as at 1 January 1996, are listed in the table, indicating for each member his or her principal professional appointment, the date of first appointment and the scheduled termination date of the current period of membership.

Committee on Safety of Medicines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the statutory basis for the appointment of members for the day of the Committee on Safety of Medicines. [32724]

Mr. Malone: All members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines are appointed under section 4(5) of the Medicines Act 1968. In the case of members for the day, the terms in their letters of appointment limit membership to a particular meeting of the committee. The statutory basis for such terms is regulation 4 of the Medicines Commission and Committees Regulation 1970 (S.I. No. 746).

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [32677]

Mr. Horam: Preliminary analysis of the Department of Health's own mainframe computer systems has already been undertaken to assess the likely impact of the change of millennium. A further more detailed analysis is to be carried out during 1996–97 fully to assess the impact and likely cost of the change.

DEFENCE

Army Courts Martial

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Army courts martial were convened each year since 1979. [32551]

Mr. Soames: Details of courts martial prior to 1990 are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The number of individuals tried by Army courts martial convened since 1990 are as follows:

1991: 707
1992: 780
1993: 688
1994: 594
1995: 440.

Mormond Hill Radar Base

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are his plans for his Department's former radar base at Mormond Hill, near Fraserborough; what public consultation will take place; and if he will make a statement. [32758]

Mr. Soames: I have nothing to add to the answers which I gave on 16 April, Official Report, columns 458–59.

Gordon Foxley

Mr. David Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about steps to reclaim moneys from the companies involved in the payment of commissions to Gordon Foxley relating to defence contracts. [33235]

Mr. Arbuthnot: A satisfactory settlement has been concluded with one of the companies concerned, Raufoss AS of Norway, under which the company will pay an agreed sum in redress to my Department, including interest and a contribution to costs, for payments made contrary to contractual conditions.

A statement of contrition by the company, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House, forms part of the agreement with the Ministry of Defence. We have decided that in the light of this agreement the company will become eligible to be considered for Ministry of Defence orders, although normal commercial relations will not be resumed for some months during which period we shall monitor the operation of the agreement.

Discussions are taking place with the other companies involved in the Foxley case, against whom proceedings are still in train.

Thermal Identity Beacons

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what use has been made in the past of thermal identity beacons for military vehicles; if he will make a statement on the new requirement for such beacons in future, purchase No. ASIC/31 of the MOD contracts bulletin volume 10 No. 16; and if such beacons are in use with other NATO forces. [30784]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No use has been made of thermal identity beacons for military vehicles in the past. The new requirement, outlined in MOD "Contracts Bulletin" volume 10 No. 16, is for the United Kingdom contingent of The NATO implementation force—IFOR No. 16 in Bosnia and is being procured to reduce the risk of friendly fire. The beacons are not in use with other NATO forces but we intend to share the technology with other IFOR nations.

Dump Trucks

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the advantages of (a) leasing and (b) using the private finance initiative in relation to the supply of self-loading dump trucks for the Royal Engineers as set out in tender No. EM and D1A/155 of the MOD "Contract Bulletin" volume 10 No. 16. [30785]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Self-loading dump trucks to meet the specific military requirement of the Royal Engineers are not currently available for lease on the commercial market. No assessment was made of the advantages of using the private finance initiative for this specific requirement.

A study commissioned by the Procurement Executive is currently under way to examine the potential for greater private sector/private finance involvement in the management and supply for future requirements of this type. The study will not be complete in time to influence this procurement because the existing fleet has reached the end of its economic life and requires replacement now. Recommendations of the study will be carefully considered for future requirements.

Royal Navy (Fuel)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the quantity of fuel purchased by his Department for allocation to the Royal Navy fleet in each of the last five years. [32647]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The full information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Such information as is available is as follows:

Fuel purchased for the Royal Naval Fleet (1,000 cubic metres)

	Financial year 1994–95	Financial year 1995–96
DIESO F76[1]	405	330	Naval fuel for ships

Marine gas oil	55	Not held	Commercially supplied fuel for ships

[1] These fuels are produced by refineries to specific NATO standards.

Royal Navy (Exercises)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in how many exercises the Royal Nay has taken part in each of the last 10 years. [32648]

Mr. Soames: Royal Navy exercises range in scale from very small activities involving individual elements of establishments, units or ships, to participation in major tri-service and international exercises.

Details of all of the various exercises in which the Royal Navy has participated in some form over the last 10 years are not held centrally, and the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Army Equipment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the Army's battlefield equipment reliability return in each of the last three years for (a) Warrior vehicles, (b) Challenger tanks and (c) the multiple-launch rocket system. [32649]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information requested is classified and cannot be released.

Clansman Radio System

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of spare parts for the Clansman radio system in each of the last three years. [32650]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The cost of spare parts for Clansman for each of the last three years was as follows:

1993–94: £9.8 million

1994–95: £10.7 million

1995–96: £10.3 million.

EH101 Merlin Helicopter

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current estimated total cost of the EH101 Merlin helicopter; what was the original total estimated cost of the helicopter at current prices; what was the original in-service date and what is its current estimated in-service date; and if he will make a statement. [32651]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The current estimated total cost of the EH1O1/Merlin programme is £4,307 million. The prime contractor is Lockheed-Martin-ASIC.

The estimated total cost, at current prices, when the Main Production Contract—MPC—was awarded was £3,922 million.

The in-service date agreed when the MPC was awarded was December 1998 and this has not changed.

British Companies (America)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with his American counterpart to allow British companies greater access to American markets; and if he will make a statement. [32653]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Regular discussions are held at all levels with the US Administration and Congress to convey Her Majesty's Government's concerns regarding the level of access that United Kingdom companies have to the American defence market. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has raised this issue with Dr. Perry on two occasions this year and during my visit to the United States last month I discussed this subject with a number of senior officials.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [32670]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The capability of MOD's existing computer systems to recognise the millennium date change is under investigation and will be the subject of MOD-wide guidance requiring those responsible for current and planned information systems to assess fully the extent of the problem. Until this is known, it will not be possible to assess the cost effects of the year 2000 date change.

NATO Joint Task Force

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning recent changes to NATO's combined joint task force initiative. [32654]

Mr. Soames: The recent meeting of NATO Foreign Ministers in Berlin welcomed the approval of the combined joint task forces concept which, when implemented, will facilitate the mounting of NATO contingency operations as well as those undertaken by the Western European Union. Ministers asked for a report on implementation of the concept. We expect these recommendations to come forward in December.

Maritime Patrol Aircraft

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the criteria to be used in the placing of a contract for the replacement maritime patrol aircraft. [32655]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The contract for the replacement maritime patrol aircraft—RMPA—will be measured against criteria that will offer the best value for money. Many factors will influence the decision including: performance, reliability, commonality with equipment already in service and the cost of operating and maintaining equipment through its expected life. A combined operational effectiveness and investment appraisal exercise is one of the tools which has been employed in determining the best value for money.

The RMPA decision will take account of the benefits that come from having a strong indigenous defence industry and, in that respect, due weight will be given to industrial capabilities which the UK has an interest in retaining in order to support the equipment we procure. Industrial participation proposals have been sought from the prime contractors and, where foreign contractors are employed, due account will be taken of the nature and cost of the work put back into United Kingdom industry.

Procurement Decisions

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence by what mechanisms he assesses the impact on the United Kingdom defence industrial base of his Department's procurement decisions. [32656]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department's practice on the consideration of United Kingdom defence industrial base issues in procurement decisions was set out in written and oral evidence to the Select Committee on Defence and Trade and Industry in joint session during 1995. The minutes of evidence were published as daily parts on 9 August 1995 (HC 333-iv) and the Committee's final report was published on 5 December 1995 (HC 61 and 62).

In its response to the Committee's report, published on 8 February 1996 (HC 209 and 210), the Government noted that industrial factors had always been taken into account in equipment procurement decision making processes. However, following a review of its internal procedures, my Department will in future take a more systematic account of such factors. Guidance is currently being prepared to this end.

Former Yugoslavia

Sir Donald Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to call out further Army Reserve and Territorial Army personnel in support of the operations in the former Yugoslavia. [33142]

Mr. Soames: Approval has been given to call out up to 251 members of the Army Reserve and Territorial Army to provide support to operations in the former Yugoslavia, and volunteers are being sought. The majority will replace those called-out last February, but there is also an additional need to fill 55 posts to reinforce regular units. This arises from some units having dual commitments. Those called out will report to a mobilisation centre between 8 and 12 July, and those who are selected for service will undergo training before deployment.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Compensation Recovery Unit

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how much income has been received in the current year by the compensation recovery unit; and what is the projected income by the end of the current financial year; [2904]

(2) what was the total amount recovered by the compensation recovery unit in 1994–95. [2905]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Compensation recovery is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Tony Worthington, dated 5 December 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about how much income has been received in the current year by the Compensation Recovery Unit; and what is the projected income by the end of the current financial year and what was the total amount recovered by the Compensation Recovery Unit in 1994–1995.

In the period 1 April 1995 to 31 October 1995 the total amount recovered by the Compensation Recovery Unit was £72.6M. Based on the pattern of recoveries to date it is expected that the total recovery for 1995/96 will be in the range of £123M to £130M.

The total amount recovered by the Compensation Recovery Unit in the period from 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995 was £110.1m.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how much compensation has been recovered by the compensation recovery unit in the current financial year from sufferers from asbestos-related diseases; how many sufferers there have been; and what have been the individual sums recovered; [2901]

(2) how much compensation was recovered by the compensation recovery unit in 1994–95 from sufferers from asbestos-related diseases; how many suffers there were; and what were the individual sums recovered. [2907]

Mr. Mitchell: Compensation recovery is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Tony Worthington, dated 5 December 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about how much compensation has been recovered by the Compensation Recovery Unit in the period 1994/95 and the current financial year from sufferers from asbestos related diseases; how many sufferers there have been; and what have been the individual sums recovered.

Statistics are not available about the numbers of sufferers from asbestos related diseases. However, in the period from 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995 there were 138 recoveries made in relation to asbestosis and the total amount recovered was £1,030,457.77. During the period 1 April 1995 to 31 October 1995 there have been 112 recoveries made in relation to asbestosis. The total amount recovered was £863,370.89.

The individual amounts recovered from sufferers of asbestosis during the period 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995 are outlined in the enclosed Table A. Table B details the individual amounts recovered during the period 1 April 1995 to 31 October 1995.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what have been the 10 largest sums recovered by the compensation recovery unit in the current financial year; and if he will list the (a) illnesses, (b) accidents and (c) diseases suffered by those from whom compensation was recovered. [2906]

Mr. Mitchell: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Tony Worthington, dated 5 December 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about what have been the 10 largest sums recovered by the Compensation Recovery Unit in the current financial year; and to list the (a) illnesses, (b) accidents and (c) diseases suffered by those from whom compensation was recovered.

Claim form CRU 1 asks for the reasons for making a claim for compensation together with the date of any accident and details of the resulting injury, disease or if appropriate the date of death. Further details are not requested about the circumstances of individual accidents.

For record purposes information is taken from the CRU 1 about the nature of the injury or disease and recorded in broad categories only. Details of illnesses, injuries and diseases can only therefore be provided within these categories.

Appendix A which is attached contains information about the ten largest amounts recovered from individual customers by the Compensation Recovery Unit.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Appendix A: The ten largest amounts recovered from individual customers by the Compensation Recovery Unit and a brief description of the injury or disease

£ Amount recovered	Brief description of injury/disease
70,522.25	Head/facial injury
67,165.00	Back/spinal injury
66,775.53	[1]Multiple injuries
64,704.06	Back/spinal injury
61,943.44	[2]Miscellaneous
59,142.57	[1]Multiple injuries
59,137.28	[1]Multiple injuries
59,131.70	[2]Miscellaneous
59,017.48	[2]Miscellaneous
57,773.28	Head/facial injury

[1] Multiple injury—more than one injury to different parts of the body or a combination of injury/amputation to the same part of body e.g. broken left arm and amputated right arm.
[2] Miscellaneous—this includes lacerations/cuts/bruising or any combination where no specific part of the body is mentioned.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many persons who qualified for severe weather payments for each month from 1 November 1995 to 30 April 1996, applied to each of the Benefits Agency offices in the Doncaster and Mexborough area; and what were the figures for the period 1 November 1994 to 30 April 1995. [31432]

Mr. Roger Evans: Once a cold weather period has been identified, a scan of the income support database is run to establish those who are eligible for a cold weather payment. Payment is sent out automatically; there is no need for a claim to be made.

Information relating to cold weather payments made for the periods 1 November 1994 to 30 April 1995 and 1 November 1995 to 30 April 1996 can be found in the statistical section of the Library. The data are held in the social fund statistical load file under "Cold Weather Payments by District Office".

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to alter the qualification requirements for cold weather payments to enable ex-service men on war pensions but not receiving income support to entitlement to these payments. [32250]

Mr. Evans: There are no plans to change the existing qualifying groups. The current scheme targets available resources towards those regarded as most vulnerable during a sustained period of very cold weather.

Suspension of Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many cases the suspension of benefit under regulation 37A of the Social Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations 1987 was lifted following representations by or on behalf of claimants; and if he will give a breakdown of the reasons for the lifting of the suspension in each of those cases and in total. [31808]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many awards of benefit he has suspended in each year since 1990 under regulation 37 of the Social Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations 1987. [31806]

Mr. Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 14 May, Official Report, column 392.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many awards of benefit he has suspended pending appeals in the cases of (a) Bate, from the Court of Appeal to the House of Lords, (b) Graham, from the commissioner to the Court of Appeal, including the reference to the European Court of Justice and (c) Halliday (aka Fairey) in relation both to the appeal to the Court of Appeal and to the appeal to the House of Lords. [31809]

Mr. Evans: The information is set out in the table:

Lead case	Number of suspensions
Bate	2,768
Graham	46,418
Halliday (aka Fairey)	3,017

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many awards of benefit he has suspended under regulation 37A of the Social Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations 1987 since its introduction in March 1992. [31807]

Mr. Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 11 March, Official Report, columns 480–81.

War Pensions

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the number of people in the United Kingdom who currently receive a war pension. [32252]

Mr. Heald: It is estimated that at 31 March 1996, the most recent date for which figures are available, 301,379 people in the United Kingdom were receiving either a war disablement pension, war widow's pension or other war dependants pension.

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his oral statement in the Scottish Grand Committee of 20 May, Official Report, column 19, what plans he had to review the reduced earnings allowance. [23533]

Mr. Roger Evans: None at present.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [32666]

Mr. Burt: The Department is aware of the information technology issues which arise as a result of the millennium, and work is under way to establish the cost effects on departmental systems.

Incomes

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are his Department's plans for the households below average income and the pensioners' incomes statistical series. [33113]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: I have today published the report of the Department's review of the methodology underlying the households below average income series. A copy has been placed in the Library. One of its recommendations is that future issues should highlight information on income mobility derived from longitudinal sources.

Incorporating the review results, together with the move in the survey sources from calendar to financial years, means that publication of the next households below average income is expected to be in October. Publication of the pensioners' incomes series, which draws on the households below income database, is expected to follow in November.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 13 June. [31179]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 13 June. [31180]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition on to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Royal Family (Records)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) of 20 May, Official Report, column 60, if he will list the three criteria which govern closure of records; and if he will make a statement. [31552]

Mr. Streeter: The three categories of public record which are to be closed for public inspection for longer than 30 years are as set out in chapter 9 of the 1993 White Paper, "Open Government" (Cm 2290).
They are:

- exceptionally sensitive records containing information, the disclosure of which would not be in the public interest in that it would harm the defence, international relations, national security—including the maintenance of law and order—or the economic interests of the United Kingdom and its dependent territories;
- documents containing information supplied in confidence, the disclosure of which would or might constitute a breach of good faith; and
- documents containing information about individuals, the disclosure of which would cause either substantial distress, or endangerment from a third party, to persons affected by disclosure or their descendants.

Court Service

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what consideration has been given to market testing of the services provided by the Court Service agency; and if he will make a statement. [31553]

Mr. Streeter: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 June 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about market testing of services provided by the Court Service.

Since the establishment of the Court Service as an Executive Agency on 2 April 1995, no further consideration has been given to market testing its services. Most of the ancillary services it uses such as cleaning, catering, judges' car hire, security and maintenance are already contracted out. Other support services such as IT, Internal Audit and Pay were market tested before the Court Service became an Agency.

Statutory constraint and the fact that much of the Court Service's work is in support of the judiciary means that the scope for further market testing is very limited. Consideration is, however, being given to involving the private sector through partnership schemes under the Private Finance Initiative.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [32674]

Mr. Streeter: My Department is currently assessing the impact of the millennium date change on its computer systems.

Family Law Bill

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make available information outlining the effect of the amendments tabled by the Government to the Family Law Bill for Report stage; and if the Government intend to maintain or overturn amendments already made in Committee. [33276]

Mr. Streeter: This information has been placed in the Vote Office.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Port of Tyne Authority

Mr. Trotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will report progress on considering the transfer scheme submitted by the Port of Tyne Authority; and if he will make a statement. [33152]

Sir George Young: I have been asked to reply.

The transfer scheme submitted by the Port of Tyne Authority contains a number of provisions which, in our view, would constrain the operation and development of the port. I have considered the arguments offered by the authority about the provisions in question and the legal position, and am now minded to make my own transfer scheme under section 12 of the Ports Act 1991.

Before preparing such a scheme, there is a requirement to consult the port authority. My noble Friend, the Minister for Aviation and Shipping, has today written to the chairman of the Port of Tyne Authority to seek the views of the board.

Arms Embargo (Argentina)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list by date the changes of policy since March 1982 in the application of arms embargoes towards Argentina; and if he will make a statement on each specific exception to the embargo in that period. [31326]

Mr. Oppenheim: Since January 1991—the date from which detailed records are readily available—12 exceptions have been made for the export of items falling within the embargo. Two were temporary licences for which the goods were returned. The remainder included equipment to be used by Argentine forces engaged in UN peacekeeping and international search and rescue duties, certain airport security, anti-terrorism and anti-drugs goods and parts for civil aircraft which fall under the embargo. One licence was granted for a sporting gun, one for .22 calibre ammunition for sporting guns. There was also one for humane cattle stunner blanks where a licence was issued to cover the export during the period when they were licensable under the existing Export of Goods (Control) Order but, where the new, 1994 order has decontrolled them.

The policy on the application of the embargo on defence sales is kept under regular review.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many cases, by region, are waiting to be heard in industrial tribunals in England and Wales; and how long his Department estimates it will take to clear this backlog in each case. [32020]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The number of cases awaiting hearing by region at April 1996 is set out in table 1. The industrial tribunals work to a performance target of 80 per cent. of cases to be heard within 26 weeks of being registered. Performance against this target by region for the first quarter of 1996 is shown in table 2. The two London regions remain below target but have made good progress, following measures taken to reduce delays, and this is expected to continue.

Inward Investment

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the level of inward investment from Korea in each year since 1990. [32073]

Mr. Oppenheim: The stock of inward direct investment into the UK from South Korea in each year since 1990, as calculated by the Office for National Statistics, is:

1990: Disclosive (this figure would release details of an investment by a particular company)

	£ million
1991	–44.1
1992	–29.0
1994	–167.0

No figures are available on investment into the UK from North Korea, nor are figures on portfolio investment from either North Korea or South Korea.

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each year since 1979 the number of inward investment strategies developed by his Department for each region of England. [31825]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 7 June 1996]: The DTI Invest in Britain Bureau promotes the benefits of the United Kingdom to potential inward investors. In the English regions, it is the responsibility of each of the regional development organisations to produce an annual inward investment strategy that draws upon the particular strengths and selling points of their respective regions.

The Invest in Britain Bureau also part funds the RDOs on the basis of agreeing this forward programme of inward investment promotional activities each year.

Exports

Mr. Amess: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the value of exports from the United Kingdom for each of the years since 1992 of (a) office machinery and data processing equipment, (b) electrical and electronic engineering, (c) motor vehicles, (d) aircraft, (e) other transport equipment, (f) North sea oil and derivatives and (g) the chemical industry. [32529]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information is given in the table. The figures for 1992 are not exactly comparable with those of later years, due to a change in the system of classification.

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what expenditure Her Majesty's Government have made via the UK Atomic Energy Authority/AEA Technology for the joint European trans-sonic wind tunnel—JET—fusion project and other projects in (a) the last year and (b) since the beginning of the European fusion programme. [32565]

Mr. Page: The expenditure made by the Government via the UKAEA for the JET fusion project was £7.7 million in 1995 and £109.12 million since the European fusion programme began. The expenditure made by the Government via the UKAEA for other fusion projects in the UK was £8 million in 1995 and £240.95 million since the UK became part of the European fusion programme in 1973. The UK has received additional support from Euratom for its own programme during the period at a level of approximately 30 per cent. of its own expenditure.

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what expenditure Her Majesty's Government have made via Euratom and the JET fusion project and other fusion projects (a) in the last year and (b) since the beginning of the European fusion programme. [32566]

Mr. Page: The expenditure made by the Government via Euratom for the JET fusion project was £8.4 million in 1995 and £123.60 million since the European fusion programme began. The expenditure made by the Government via Euratom for other fusion projects in Europe was £13.97 million in 1995 and £168.52 million since the European fusion programme began.

Post Offices

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures he is proposing to encourage the sale of vehicle tax discs and the issuing of passports by smaller post offices and sub-post offices; and if he will make a statement. [32266]

Mr. Oppenheim: Decisions on the overall number of post offices issuing motor vehicle licences and passport application forms are respectively matters for the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency and the UK Passport Agency.

Foresight Challenge Programme

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many foresight challenge bids have been received to date. [32660]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Five hundred and fifteen foresight challenge bids have been received to date.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what criteria are being used for the evaluation of foresight challenge bids. [32659]

Mr. Taylor: The criteria used for the evaluation of foresight challenge bids are contained in section 6 of the challenge terms and conditions document, which was issued to interested bidders by the Office of Science and Technology in September 1995.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the bid timetable for the foresight challenge was announced; and if he will make a statement. [32661]

Mr. Taylor: The timetable for the foresight challenge was announced in September 1995, in the terms and conditions document issued by the Office of Science and Technology.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many of the successful applicants for funding under the foresight challenge programme were also members of the foresight panels. [32657]

Mr. Taylor: I shall make an announcement about the successful applicants on 24 June. I shall write to the hon. Member soon after the announcement.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how payments made under the foresight challenge programme are to be monitored. [32680]

Mr. Taylor: Payments under the foresight challenge programme will be made and monitored by the research councils.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many successful applications there have been for funding under the foresight challenge programme. [32658]

Mr. Taylor: I shall make an announcement on 24 June regarding the winning applications.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [32665]

Mr. John M. Taylor: In line with guidance recently issued by the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency and the Cabinet Office central IT unit, my Department has initiated studies to assess the extent to which its computer systems will need to be amended to take account of the millennium date change. The results of these studies, including estimates of the cost of the corrective work, are expected later this year.

Home Shipbuilding Credit Guarantee Scheme

Mr. Sykes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the future of the home shipbuilding credit guarantee scheme. [33155]

Mr. Eggar: The review of the scheme, which I announced to the House on 15 March 1995, has now been completed.

I have decided that the scheme should continue. When the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development shipbuilding agreement comes into force, the currently subsidised interest rate of 7.5 per cent. will be replaced by the appropriate commercial interest reference rate used in export finance. The scheme will continue to provide credit for up to 80 per cent. of a ship's contract value, the maximum permitted by OECD rules.

I have also decided to make an amendment to the scheme designed to enhance the scheme's attractiveness in appropriate cases. I have invited main banks involved in shipping business to participate in arrangements which would come into play when the terms offered under the scheme are not able to provide 80 per cent. financing on the basis of the vessel's mortgage and other readily available security, and it is felt that, by the standards of the international market place, better terms should be possible. In such circumstances, the new banking facility would aim to provide an additional tranche of financing. The DTI and the participating bank would share the risk in this additional tranche, normally on a 50–50 basis, although in some circumstances my Department would be prepared to take two thirds of the risk if necessary to secure 80 per cent. financing. Additional margins would be charged to reflect the additional risk undertaken.

This new banking facility will come into effect as of the date of this announcement. Applications for loans under the scheme, for which offers have not yet been made, will also be eligible.

The changes to the current interest rate offered under the scheme will be made with the entry into force of the OECD agreement presently targeted for 15 July. The success of this new banking facility will depend on the response from the banks. However, I believe that it is a valuable development of the scheme and responds to the concerns of the shipbuilding industry.

Overdue Commercial Debt

Mr. William Powell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will announce the outcome of the review of the case for a statutory right to interest on overdue commercial debt that was announced on 11 January, Official Report, column 293. [33148]

Mr. Page: I announced to the House that the Government were meeting the commitment made in the 1994 competitiveness White Paper to review again the case for legislation for a statutory right to interest. That review has been informed by updated submissions from representative bodies which responded to the public consultation on this subject in 1994, the regional "Your Business Matters" conferences and commercial and academic research.

Following the review, I can confirm that the Government will not be introducing legislation to enact a right to interest on overdue commercial debt.

It is right that the Government listen to and act upon the views of the business community and it is clear that there has been a significant shift in opinion, particularly by the small firms representative organisations, against legislation. Eight of the nine main small firms organisations have stated that they are against legislation because of the detrimental impact they fear it would have on small businesses. Even a number of organisation which responded to the review in favour of legislation had serious reservations about its effectiveness. Additionally the regional "Your Business Matters" conferences concluded against legislation.

The Government introduced a significant package of measures to tackle late payment in 1994. Good progress has been made in their implementation, although it is too early to gauge their effectiveness. That is something we shall continue to review and evaluate. In addition, the Prime Minister announced on 11 March this year a package of additional measures including consultation on whether public companies should be required to publish their payment performance.

Recent research by the university of Bradford has identified that effective credit management procedures can significantly reduce the incidence and impact of late payment experienced by small businesses. The Government will therefore continue to work with all sectors of the business community to help small firms improve their credit management procedures. Business links in England, business connect in Wales, local enterprise companies in Scotland and the Local Enterprise Development Unit in Northern Ireland will be able to provide advice and guidance in this area.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. William Powell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the privatisation of the short-term business of the Export Credits Guarantee Department. [33149]

Mr. Lang: The then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, my right hon. Friend the Member for St. Albans (Mr. Lilley), announced on 2 December 1991, Official Report, columns 11–12, the sale of the short-term business of the Export Credits Guarantee Department to NCM Holding NV. The £20 million goodwill element of the sale price included a deferred element up to a maximum of £5 million payable in 1996 subject to the privatised company's financial performance. I am pleased to be able to report that, on the basis of the company's actual performance, a sum of £5,479,127, made up of the basic sum due of £4,928,296 plus index linking, has now been paid to ECGD by the company.

I welcome this as the final formal stage in a highly successful privatisation which has provided UK exporters with the benefits deriving from the most competitive private sector export credit insurance market in Europe.

Radio Spectrum (Licensing)

Mr. William Powell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what arrangements are being made for the contracting out of the management and licensing of the radio spectrum used for making programmes and similar activities. [33150]

Mr. Lang: The Radiocommunications Agency published on 15 May the report of its review of spectrum used in programme making and related activities by broadcasters, independent programme makers and others. The spectrum is currently managed and licensed on the agency's behalf by ASP Frequency Management Ltd. and the Broadcasters' JFMG Ltd. One of the main recommendations of the review was that a single spectrum management organisation should be established with responsibility for licensing all programme making spectrum. I have decided to accept this recommendation and intend to establish new arrangements under a contract which would run from 1 April 1997. The agency will shortly advertise the intention to appoint a single contractor and will invite expressions of interest. I intend, in exercise of powers conferred by section 69 of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994, to make an order enabling me to authorise another person to exercise my licensing function under section 1 of the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949 in respect of programme making spectrum. The contract will be made under the order.

Contracts

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what response his Department has made to the European Commission's recommendation that public entities wishing to advertise invitations for tenders should break down large contracts into lots. [31889]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 10 June 1996]: The European Commission is expected to present shortly a Green Paper on procurement policy in the European Union. My Department will consider, in consultation with business interests and with HM Treasury, which are the lead Government Department on procurement policy, any such recommendations which are made.

"Tenders Electronic Daily"

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what translation facilities are provided by his Department for potential tenderers to the "Tenders Electronic Daily". [31901]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 10 June 1996]: None. Although overseas tender notices on "Tenders Electronic Daily" are published in full only in the language of the purchasing authority, a summary of such notices is provided in English.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what evidence his Department has evaluated for the first quarter of 1996 regarding business (a) demand, (b) optimism and (c) output amongst small and medium manufacturing companies. [31905]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 10 June 1996]: Evidence from business surveys shows demand, optimism and output increasing in the first quarter of 1996.

Electric Batons

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date Her Majesty's Government were advised that a market report partially funded through his Department's export marketing scheme would state that there was a future requirement for electric batons in a named country; what action he took in respect of that report; and what steps he has taken to ensure (a) that Her Majesty's Government does not fund such reports in the future and (b) that the contents of market reports are sanctioned before publication. [31139]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 6 June 1996]: The report was partially funded through the export marketing research scheme under the terms and conditions applicable at the time for trade associations using the scheme for the first time. The report covered six countries in the Arabian peninsula and was restricted to marketing research only.

This independent marketing research was carried out on behalf of the members of a trade association. The two lines from the 200–page report which refer to this issue solely reflect the views expressed by the authorities in the named country. The two lines are "The Special Forces are interest in procuring anti-ballistic helmets as well as electronic batons"

"The force has access to riot vehicles and body armour which was rarely used, although interest has been shown in anti-ballistic helmets and electronic batons".

The Department cannot dictate the contents of a marketing research report. Such reports are a reflection of the views of those interviewed by the researchers and the Department confers no authorisation to any of the views expressed. The Department is not notified in advance of the contents of any reports. However, a copy of the final report of projects conducted on behalf of trade associations is placed in the Department's export market information centre. Accordingly, a copy of this report was placed in the EMIC on 10 August 1994.

The UK strictly controls the export of military and paramilitary equipment. The use of the EMRS in no way subverts, circumvents or undermines this process.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what consideration has been given to market testing the services provided by his Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency; and if he will make a statement. [31554]

Mr. Freeman: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the CCTA under its chief executive, Mr. Robin Guenier. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Guenier to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 10 June 1996:

The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question concerning market testing of CCTA's services.

You will be aware that, following CCTA's becoming a Next Steps Agency on 1 April 1996, one of the objectives of the Chief Executive is to achieve full cost recovery by financial year 1997–98. In conjunction with this objective, the Chief Executive is also required to achieve demanding annual financial, efficiency and quality of service targets.

With this in mind, I have a responsibility to ensure that all CCTA services are competitive and provide value for money to those who use them. CCTA, therefore, makes use of whatever efficiency savings are appropriate to achieve these objectives, market testing being one of many options. Of course, use of CCTA's services is not mandatory and departments and Agencies do so at their own discretion. It is, therefore, important for users of our services to ensure that they do so taking into account options such as market testing.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 487, when he expects to declare the results of the review of provisions of the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995. [31386]

Mr. Freeman: We aim to complete the review and consultation exercise by 30 September 1996. An announcement on the conclusions will be made at that time by the Department of Transport.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [32667]

Mr. Willetts: My Department and its agencies are currently in the process of assessing the impact of the millennium date change on their computer systems, including any costs that may arise.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Burundi

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held with the French Government about their decision to suspend military co-operation with Burundi. [32567]

Mr. Hanley: We remain in close touch with our French and other European partners about the situation in Burundi.

WALES

Official Material

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to make official material available to hon. Members before release to the media. [31243]

Mr. Hague: In line with the guidance set out in "Questions of Procedure for Ministers", it is my policy to ensure that, when the House is sitting, major policy announcements are given to Parliament before they are released to the media.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 13 May, Official Report, column 111, how many (a) representations and (b) petitions his office has now had concerning the implementation of the nursery voucher scheme; for each, how many were in favour and how many against the implementation of nursery vouchers; and if he will make a statement. [31846]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: In addition to a number of letters to Welsh Office Ministers, some 35 petitions and some 4,000 separate representations have been received, the vast majority of the latter consisting of printed pro forma letters and postcards.

There continues to be general support for the Government's objective of making nursery education available for all four-year-olds, although only one letter offers specific support for the voucher scheme as the most appropriate means to achieve that objective. This is not surprising, given that most of the representations contain misunderstandings of some basic elements of the scheme.

Traffic Area Office (Cardiff)

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Transport concerning the future of the south Wales traffic area office. [32288]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My hon. Friend the Minister with responsibility for local transport has announced plans to restructure the traffic area offices, including the closure of the South Wales traffic area office in Cardiff. The decision to close the Cardiff office is regrettable, but I understand that it is necessary in order to make best use of limited resources.

Ear Operations

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the NHS trust hospitals in Wales that currently meet the standard set out in the patients charter for waiting times for ear operations; [32150]

(2) if he will list the average waiting times for ear operations for each of the national health service trusts in Wales. [32152]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: At 31 March 1996, there were no patients waiting for admission to Welsh hospitals for treatment in the specialty of ear, nose and throat who had been waiting for more than the standard set by the patients charter for all operations. Information on the average waiting times for ear operations is not readily available. However, the percentage of patients admitted within three and 12 months in the year to 31 March 1996 for the specialty of ENT will be published in "The Patients Charter, NHS Wales Performance Tables 1996" in July.

Highways (Costs)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the typical works costs associated with (a) the construction of one mile of major dual carriageway in open countryside and (b) on-line upgrading of a mile of single carriageway to dual carriageway. [32038]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Construction costs can be affected by many factors, including topography, the number of structures and ground conditions.

In the last 10 years, for trunk road schemes constructed to dual carriageway standard in open countryside, the costs at March 1996 prices were (a) in a range £2.5 million to £5.5 million per mile and (b) approximately £2 million per mile.

Civil Servants (Duties Abroad)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department spent during the financial years 1994–1995 and 1995–96 on sending civil servants accompanying Ministers from his Department on official duties abroad. [32423]

Mr. Hague: The information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproppportionate cost.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [32672]

Mr. Hague: An assessment of the effect of the millennium date change on my Department's computer systems has recently been undertaken. I do not expect there to be any major costs involved in ensuring that my Department's computer systems can cater for the year 2000.

Welsh Economic Performance

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent assessment he has made of the performance of the Welsh economy. [33147]

Mr. Hague: The Welsh economy has made great progress over recent years and is now acknowledged to have significant strength, not least in its manufacturing sector.

I have today published a comprehensive report, entitled "Meeting the Challenge", analysing Wales's current position. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Scottish Visitors

9. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of visitors from Scotland to Northern Ireland in (a) 1995 and (b) 1994. [30931]

Mr. Ancram: The total number of visitors from Scotland to Northern Ireland in 1995 was 207,000—up 22 per cent. on the 170,000 of the previous year. The number of holidaymakers increased by 76 per cent. in that period.

Peace Process (Terrorists)

11. Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the number of persons with convictions for terrorist offences who are (a) members of the forum and (b) involved in the negotiating teams. [30933]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: The considerable difficulties involved in obtaining the information make it impossible for me to make available the details requested. Such investigations would require not only the full name, date of birth and current address of each individual concerned but, in order to be absolutely sure of correct identification, a full set of fingerprints.

Terrorist Murders Monument

12. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to commission a national monument to those civilians and members of the police and armed forces who have been killed by terrorist action. [30934]

Sir John Wheeler: There are no plans to commission such a monument.

Peace Process

13. Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on progress in the peace process. [30935]

15. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the latest position over political developments in Northern Ireland. [30937]

23. Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the all-party talks process at Stormont. [30947]

25. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the peace negotiations in Northern Ireland. [30950]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: All-party negotiations began on Monday 10 June in plenary session involving negotiating teams from those parties invited to participate together with the British and Irish Governments.

The Prime Minister and the Taoiseach opened the proceedings. Following a round of intensive bilateral discussions on 10 and 11 June, Senator Mitchell assumed the chair of the opening plenary session. General de Chastelain and Mr. Holkeri were appointed as chairman of strand 2 and the business committee, and alternate chairman respectively. All the delegations present committed themselves to the Mitchell principles of democracy and non-violence and the Democratic Unionist party and Mr. McCartney also did so during later discussions. The parties are now conferring on various important procedural issues.

Arts Funding

14. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current expenditure from public funds on the arts; what it was (a) five, (b) 10, (c) 15 and (d) 20 years ago in real terms; and if he will make a statement. [30936]

Mr. Ancram: Government expenditure on the arts in the last year was £7.2 million compared, in real terms, with £6.5 million five years ago; £5.2 million 10 years ago; £3.8 million 15 years ago and £3.5 million 25 years ago.

Decommissioning

16. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made in decommissioning paramilitary-held weapons in Northern Ireland. [30938]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Lewisham, East (Mrs. Prentice).

Terrorism

17. Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the level of the current terrorist threat. [30939]

21. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make an assessment of the current terrorist threat. [30945]

Sir John Wheeler: The various terrorist gangs retain their structures and weaponry; they continue to train and to target individuals and installations. Recent activity has included robberies, punishment attacks and murders in Northern Ireland, and the renewed bombing campaign in London.

Punishment Beatings

18. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the current levels of punishment beatings; and what assessment he has made as to the responsibility for them. [30941]

Sir John Wheeler: So far this year, there have been 124 so-called punishment attacks. Of these, 72 have been attributed to Republican groups and 52 to loyalist groups, including five victims who were shot.

These crimes are against all concepts of justice and human rights. There is no doubt that terrorist groups control these barbaric activities and that, if they wished to call a halt, they could do so immediately. Sinn Fein claims to have signed up to the principles set out in the report of the international body, but one of these principles calls for a commitment to try to stop "punishment" attacks and to take effective steps to prevent such actions. The House will note that to date there is no evidence of these attacks ceasing.

Deregulation (Small Businesses)

20. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress he is making with regard to reducing costs to small businesses as a result of UK deregulation initiatives. [30943]

Mr. Ancram: Good progress has been made:

104 NI regulations affecting business have been repealed or amended; food legislation and planning and building requirements have been simplified; tax, national insurance and value added tax systems have been streamlined;

a major initiative to simplify health and safety guidance and reduce paperwork is in hand.

Elections

22. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the outcome of the elections in Northern Ireland. [30946]

Mr. Ancram: As intended, the 30 May election opened the way to substantive all-party negotiations which began on 10 June and allowed the various parties to come fortified by an electoral mandate. The high turnout demonstrated the wish of the people of Northern Ireland for political dialogue.

Employment and Training

24. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what further measures are proposed to increase employment and training opportunities in Northern Ireland over the next 12 months. [30949]

Mr. Ancram: The Government continue to give a very high priority to those successful policies which have contributed to the development of the economy and provided increased employment opportunities. This is clearly evidenced by the high levels of employment being maintained, currently at 573,880 (March 1996). Our on-going commitment is further witnessed by the allocation in 1996–97 of some £455 million in support of a wide range of employment and training measures. Additionally, £7.3 million has recently been made available from the EU's special support programme for peace and reconciliation which will support a range of additional innovative programmes aimed at investment and employment development.

Grammar School Pupils

26. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many primary school pupils who received grades other than A in the transfer procedure will obtain a grammar school place in Northern Ireland for the 1996–97 school year; and if he will publish a list of Northern Ireland grammar schools and the number of pupils in each grade to be admitted for the 1996–97 school year. [30951]

Mr. Ancram: The transfer procedure processes are not yet completed for the 1996–97 school year; and accordingly the information required is not yet available. It will be available in the autumn.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to publish the results of his consultation on restructuring of the RUC. [30942]

Sir John Wheeler: The Government White Paper "Foundations for Policing" stated that the importance of the forthcoming all-party talks was such that no finite consultation period for comments was being set. Work on the fundamental review is continuing. When the report is finalised, the main findings will be made public.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consideration has been given to market testing the services provided by the child support maintenance services of the Child Support Agency; and if he will make a statement. [31556]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for taking forward the competing for quality initiative rests with the chief executive of the Child Support Agency and to date all the agency's support services have been contracted out. The agency will be the subject of an agency review in 1997–98 and the prior options stage of that review will include, inter alia, an examination of the potential for the market testing of the agency's main functions including child support maintenance.

Social Security Agency

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consideration has been given to market testing the services provided by the Social Security Agency; and if he will make a statement. [31565]

Mr. Moss: My right hon. and learned Friend announced the outcome of the review of the Social Security Agency on 19 April 1996, Official Report, column 622–23. The second stage of that review required the Department to examine the prior options of abolition, privatisation and wholesale contractorisation. The report concluded that there was no scope for abolition or privatisation, nor was there any evidence to suggest that wholesale contractorisation of functions was a viable option, given the lack of a mature market or interest in the private sector for this work at present. However, the study report went on to recommend that the Social Security Agency should develop a comprehensive strategy for achieving efficiency improvements through involving the private sector in all aspects of its business, including benefit administration. The strategy should be completed during the 1996–97 year, for implementation to begin in 1997–98 or earlier. The agency is currently taking forward these recommendations. A copy of the executive summary of the prior options report is available in the Library.

Sexual Abuse (Compensation)

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what provisions apply to claims for compensation by people who are sexually abused as children and take legal action as adults; [32516]

(2) if adults who were sexually abused as children are not eligible for financial compensation; and if he will make a statement; [32517]

(3) if he will make a statement regarding the changes he is planning to the Criminal Injuries (Compensation) Northern Ireland Order 1988 in order to allow sex abuse victims to claim compensation after they reach the age of 21 years; [32518]

(4) in what circumstances he may make ex gratia payments to Northern Ireland sex abuse victims who were abused as children and cannot claim compensation after they reach the age of 21 years; [32519]

(5) on how many occasions he has made ex gratia payments to sex abuse victims who were abused as children and cannot claim compensation after they reach the age of 21 years. [32520]

Sir John Wheeler: Under the terms of the Criminal Injuries (Compensation) Northern Ireland Order 1988, a person has three years within which to lodge an application for compensation. However, in the case of victims aged under 18 when the injury was sustained, my right hon. and learned Friend has discretion to admit applications made outside the three-year time limit, if there was a reasonable cause for not making the application at any earlier time. This discretion is applicable for up to three years after the victim's 18th birthday, and acknowledges the fact that children and young persons who are criminally injured are not always in an immediate position to protect their interests or have them protected.

The 1988 order also introduced a three-year time limit for claims made under the earlier Criminal Injuries (Compensation) (Northern Ireland) Order 1977 which continues to apply to injuries sustained before the 1988 order came into effect on 1 July 1988. However, the order did not make an exception in respect of those criminally injured while under 18. This anomaly was rectified by article 5 of the Criminal Justice (Northern Ireland) Order 1991 so that they too could apply for compensation up to the age of 21. In short, 21 is the effective cut-off point for all claims relating to injuries to minors.

As for violence within the family—which encompasses many sex abuse cases, including incest—article 5(2) of the 1988 order provides that no compensation can be paid in respect of an injury where the victim was, at that time, living in the same household as the person responsible for causing the injury unless:

(a) the person who caused the injury has been prosecuted (or there is a sufficient reason why this could not happen);

(b) the victim and the person who caused the injury have stopped living together (unless there are exceptional circumstances which prevent them from ceasing to live in the same household); and

(c) the person responsible for causing the injury cannot benefit from the compensation if it is paid.

Officials are currently considering whether it would be feasible to admit for consideration applications made after a victim has reached the age of 21, possibly by way of ex gratia payments to be made in cases which are now time barred but which meet all the other criteria. This work is still in progress. I shall let the hon. Gentleman know when it has been completed. No ex gratia payments have been made outside the terms of the 1988 order to any victim of child sex abuse.

Economic Co-operation

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to increase trade and economic co-operation between Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland. [30928]

Mr. Ancram: Government agencies and private sector business organisations in Northern Ireland have been co-operating with their counterparts in the Republic of Ireland on a wide range of cross-border trade and economic development projects. Co-operation will continue in the future on any initiatives which will contribute to the provision of job opportunities and prosperity for people in both parts of the island.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [32669]

Sir John Wheeler: Within Northern Ireland Departments there is an initiative to identify the scope of the millennium problem and to ensure that those with responsibility for systems potentially at risk are made aware of the implications. Steps are being taken to ensure that whatever remedial action needs to be taken is planned for and completed by 1 January 2000. Investigations are currently in progress, but as yet there has been no assessment of the full costs involved.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

SHL Software

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what contracts his Department and his agencies have with SHL software computer system; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [31436]

Mr. Boswell: Neither the Ministry nor any of its agencies hold contracts with SHL. Between March 1994 and June 1996, the Ministry spent £4,494 with SHL Technical Solutions Ltd. for the provision of IT training courses. There are no contract end dates or potential penalty fees. Fees for early discharge of contractual arrangements are a matter for negotiation between the Ministry and its suppliers.

Fishermen (Early Retirement and Compensation)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what practical steps the Government are taking to implement the new measures of Council regulation (EC) No. 2719/95 amending Council regulation 3699/93; and when it intends to introduce an early retirement and compensation scheme for fishermen as prescribed in the regulation; [32532]

(2) how many EU member states have replied positively to Council regulation EC 2719/95 of 20 November 1995; in what terms Her Majesty's Government have replied; and if Her Majesty's Government are participating in the Commission's study of practical arrangements for complementing the new measures. [32534]

Mr. Baldry: The Government did not support Council regulation 2719/95, which gives member states the option of using part of their existing financial instrument for fisheries guidance—FIFG—funds to finance early retirement schemes and make payments to crews of decommissioned vessels. No additional EU money is available. The Government believe that FIFG funds should be concentrated on other priority areas, leaving member states' social security systems to deal with any employment consequences.

The Government have no information on the number of EU member states implementing Council regulation 2719/95 and is not aware of any related Commission study of practical arrangements.

Recruitment

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what use his Department and its executive agencies have made of executive search agencies or employment companies in filling vacancies within his Department or executive agencies administered by his Department during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96; what agencies were employed; what was the cost in each case; how many staff were recruited in each case; and what was the total cost in each financial year of these contracts. Letter from Philip Needham to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 13 June 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply direct to your Parliamentary Question in which you ask what use the Executive Agencies have made of executive search agencies or employment companies in filling vacancies within the Executive Agency during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96; what agencies were employed; what was the cost in each case; how many staff were recruited in each case; and what was the total cost in each financial year of these contracts. (31417)

The information for ADAS is as follows:

1994–95	6,000	St. James's Recruitment Consultants	One
1995–96	4,621	Cherry Consultants	One

Letter from Johnston McNeill to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 13 June 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service, your questions to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food concerning the use of executive search agencies or employment companies for recruitment and the expenditure on, and number of staff recruited during 1994/95 and 1995/96 have been passed to me for reply with respect to this Executive Agency.(31417)

The Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) was established on 1 April 1995 as an Executive Agency of MAFF and took over from some 300 local authorities the responsibility for enforcing hygiene, inspection and welfare requirements in licensed fresh meat premises in Great Britain. The majority of the Agency's staff are meat inspectors and official veterinary surgeons. Some 711 meat inspectors transferred over to the MHS on 1 April 1995 from local authorities under the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (TUPE) Regulations 1981.

In 1994/95 before the launch of the MHS an initial recruitment exercise was carried out to appoint senior and middle management posts as well as the administrative posts required to ensure the effective operation of the Service. The Recruitment and Assessment Services (RAS) Agency were used for the recruitment of 61 staff. Assistance was provided by RAS in the advertisement of posts as well as their staff sitting on the interview panels for the more senior management positions. The total cost for their services was approximately £287,500. £78,000 of this sum was funded by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

The MHS spent approximately £44,000 (excluding expenditure for the services of RAS) in 1994/95 on the recruitment of staff. This was primarily for the services of members of the Personnel team of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and consultants on interview panels for the afore-mentioned posts.

Approximately £39,000 was spent by the MHS in 1995/96 on the recruitment and selection of 375 additional meat inspectors and veterinary staff and a relatively small number of administrative and clerical support staff. This sum has been mainly incurred in advertising costs, as the MHS has fully utilised the services of its own personnel department in recruitment exercises.

Letter from P. I. Stanley to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 13 June 1996:

You asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food two questions relating to executive search or employment agencies to recruit staff. The Minister has asked me to reply to you in respect of his Central Science Laboratory (CSL) Agency, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.(31417)

It is only in exceptional circumstances, such as filling a very senior or specialist post, that we would use the services of an outside agency for recruitment purposes in preference to our own personnel staff.

You ask specifically for details of expenditure in the financial years 1994/95 and 1995/96. During these two years no executive search agencies were employed but in 1995/96 an employment agency was used at a cost of £6.5k to recruit a senior member of staff to a specialist scientific post.

Letter from Dr. J. M. Rutter to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 13 June 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about the use of executive search agencies or employment companies in filling vacancies as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.(31417)

The Veterinary Medicines Directorate did not use these methods for filling vacancies during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 13 June 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your questions on recruitment in the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA).(31417)

The VLA was established on 1 October 1995, from the merger of the existing Central Veterinary Laboratory with the Veterinary Investigation Service, which was part of the State Veterinary Service. Figures quoted below relate only to the Central Veterinary Laboratory.

In reply to your question on executive search agencies and employment companies, the VLA did not make use of any such organisation during 1994–95 and 1995–96.

The cost of recruiting permanent staff and the numbers of staff recruited are as follows:-

	Recruitment cost £	Recruitment numbers £
1995–96	25,046	61
1994–95	13,347	45

The above costs include advertising and the costs of candidates travelling to interview. A higher number of specialist professional posts in areas such as BSE, bovine tuberculosis and rabies have been filled over the last year, resulting in increased costs.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much his Department spent in recruiting staff to his Department and its executive agencies during the 1994–95 and 1995–96 financial years; and how many staff were recruited in each of these years. [31402]

Mr. Boswell: It is not readily possible to separate out costs for recruitment.

The number of staff recruited to core MAFF and the Pesticide Safety Directorate is 426 for 1994–95 and 667 for 1995–96.

Executive agencies will reply separately by chief executive's letter.

Letter from Dr. J. M. Rutter to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 13 June 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your recent question about the cost and numbers of staff recruited during the 1994–95 and 1995–96 financial years as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible. [31402]

During 1994–95 the Veterinary Medicines Directorate recruited five members of staff at a cost of £20,529 and in 1995–96 recruited sixteen members of staff at a cost of £69,286.

Letter from Philip Needham to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 13 June 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply direct to your Parliamentary Question in which you ask how much his Agencies have spent in recruiting staff during the 1994–95 and 1995–96 financial years; and how many staff were recruited in each of these years. [31402]

The figures for ADAS are as follows:

Year	Cost £	Number of staff
1994–95	21,793	88
1995–96	80,762	138

The figures above exclude short term casual appointments and the two posts recruited through an executive search agency.

Letter from P. I. Stanley to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 13 June 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question about the cost and number of staff recruited in each of the financial years 1994/95 and 1995/96 in respect of his Central Science Laboratory (CSL) Agency, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.(31402)

The figures are as follows:

1995/96: £63465; 250 staff

The costs relate to recruitment advertising and expenses of candidates and independent members of interview boards. The number of staff includes permanent, causal and fixed-term appointments. The number of staff recruited in 1995/96 shows a significant increase. This reflects recruitment of new staff associated with the Agency's relocation of the majority of its existing sites to a single new site near York later this year and the need to make casual appointments to fill posts where some staff not relocating to York have already left the Agency.

Letter from Johnston McNeill to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 13 June 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service, your questions to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food concerning the use of executive search agencies or employment companies for recruitment and the expenditure on, and number of staff recruited during 1994/95 and 1995/96 have been passed to me for reply with respect to this Executive Agency. Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 13 June 1996:

The VLA was established on 1 October 1995, from the merger of the existing Central Veterinary Laboratory with the Veterinary Investigation Service, which was part of the State Veterinary Service. Figures quoted below relate only to the Central Veterinary Laboratory.

In reply to your question on executive search agencies and employment companies, the VLA did not make use of any such organisation during 1994/95 and 1995/96.

The cost of recruiting permanent staff and the numbers of staff recruited are as follows:—

	Recruitment cost £	Recruitment numbers

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in what circumstances his Department or its executive agencies uses an executive search or employment agency to recruit staff in preference to using personnel staff within his own Department or its executive agencies. [31530]

Mr. Boswell: Use of executive search agencies by my Department and its agencies is limited to occasional recruitment, including head hunting, for senior management posts, or posts where a high degree of specialist skill is needed. In addition, employment agencies, most notably Recruitment and Assessment Services, are used wherever this reflects best use of resources to recruit all grades of staff.

The chief executive of the Central Science Laboratory has replied separately by letter.

Letter from I. P. Stanley to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 13 June 1996:

You asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food two questions relating to executive search or employment agencies to recruit staff. The Minster has asked me to reply to you in respect of his Central Science Laboratory (CSL) Agency, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible. (31530)

Women (Promotion)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures his Department has implemented during the last 12 months to encourage the promotion of women into senior positions with his Department and its executive agencies; and what progress his Department has made in encouraging the promotion of women over the last five years. [31534]

Mr. Boswell: The Ministry has in place a programme of action for women and is a member of Opportunity 2000. Each of MAFF's executive agencies also either has a programme in place or will be implementing one shortly. Promotion is entirely on merit. While there have been limited opportunities for promotion for all staff over the last 12 months in both the Ministry and its agencies, more women are entering the senior grades and progress over the last five years has been steady.

Farming (Jobs)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of jobs in the farming industry in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement. [32333]

Mr. Boswell: Statistics on the number of people working on agricultural holdings are collected by the annual agricultural census. The results from 1982 are published in "The Digest of Agricultural Census Statistics" and figures prior to 1982 are available in "Agricultural Statistics United Kingdom".

Civil Servants (Duties Abroad)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much his Department spent during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 on sending civil servants accompanying Ministers from his Department on official duties abroad. [32415]

Mr. Boswell: In the financial year 1995–96 the Ministry spent a total of £47,911 on officials accompany Ministers on official duties abroad.

In the financial year 1994–95, Ministry records indicate that from 23 November 1994, a total of £22,250 was spent on officials accompanying Ministers on official duties abroad.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

School Funding

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average level of delegation of potential schools budgets by local education authorities; and which local education authorities and what percentage delegate more of their potential school budgets than they are required to under current legislation. [31836]

Mr. Robin Squire: The average level of potential schools budget, PSB, delegated by local education authorities in 1996–97 is 90.5 per cent. This percentage is derived from the financial budget statements published by LEAs in England under section 42 of the Education Reform Act 1988, and relates to expenditure on schools covered by their schemes for the local management of schools, LMS. All LEAs from whom statements have been received have planned to exceed the required delegation level—85 per cent. of PSB—in the current financial year. I understand that this is also true of the two LEAs—Redcar and Cleveland and York—from whom statements are still awaited.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will place a copy of the training and enterprise council operating agreement for 1996–97 in the Library. [32580]

Mr. Paice: Copies of the training and enterprise council operating agreement 1996–97 and the TEC licence and annual funding agreement 1996–97 are held in the Library.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will publish lists comparing the most recent general certificate of secondary education results of grant-maintained schools in England and Wales with the results of the same schools in the years before they went grant maintained. [32088]

Mr. Robin Squire: The data are contained in a number of lists, copies of which have been placed in the Library. The lists give details of the GCSE results for grant-maintained schools in England for 1994–95 with their results for the most recent year before they became grant maintained. No previous results for schools that were grant maintained in 1992 are available since 1992 was the first year of the school performance tables. The information on grant-maintained schools in Wales is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Learning Vouchers

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what consultations she has had with (a) the Headmasters Conference, (b) the Conference of Head Mistresses, (c) the Professional Association of Teachers, (d) university departments of education and (e) education committees of the county councils associations or associations of municipal authorities concerning the use of vouchers for years 12 and 13 in secondary schools. [32449]

Mr. Paice: None. The Government have no plans to introduce vouchers for years 12 and 13 in secondary schools. We have announced our intention to consult on the introduction from 1997 of a system of learning credits. These will set out for all 16 to 19-year-olds their entitlement to the education and training they choose.

Barred Teachers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what cross-checking is carried out of names recorded on list 99 against those on the Department of Health's consultancy index. [32591]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department of Health consultancy index includes details of people on the Department's list 99. The Department of Health receives an up to date copy of list 99 each year, and is notified of changes as names are added or removed throughout the year.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many applications there have been to check names against list 99 in each of the last five years; [32597]

(2) how many names have been on the Department for Education and Employment list 99 in each of the last five years; [32596]

(3) how many names have been removed from list 99 in each of the last five years. [32592]

Mr. Squire: Statistics about the number of checks made against list 99 are not collected centrally. The majority of checks are carried out by local education authorities and establishments of further education which hold copies of the list.

The number of people on list 99 varies as cases are dealt with throughout the year. The most recent version of the list, issued in April, contained details of 1,882 people who are either barred from teaching and related employment in England and Wales, or are subject to restrictions on their employment. The table shows the number of people added to, and removed from, the list in each of the last five years.

1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995	98	10
1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996	85	5

School Uniforms

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will investigate the decision by East Sussex education authority to stop grants for schoolchildrens' uniforms; and if she will take steps to ensure that children from poorer families are not penalised. [32646]

Mrs. Gillan: I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by her Department. [32681]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department is currently assessing the impact of the millennium date change on its computer systems. The assessment will be completed towards the end of this year. Only then will it be possible to estimate the cost of dealing with the problem.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has for assessing the working and effects of phase 1 of the nursery education voucher scheme. [33151]

Mr. Robin Squire: The nursery education voucher scheme will be assessed in three stages. First, the operational aspects of the scheme will be evaluated, drawing on data on the issue and redemption of vouchers provided by the voucher agent and on surveys of parents and providers. Initial results will be placed in the Library as they become available, with an overall assessment in the autumn. The first inspection reports will also be published in the autumn, and the Office for Standards in Education proposes to publish an overview report of early findings around January 1997.

Secondly, to assess medium-term changes in the provision and use of places, a survey will be undertaken of current use of places by three and four-year-olds. The results will be compared with those of similar surveys in subsequent years. Thirdly, the Department is considering tender proposals for assessing the longer-term effects of pre-school education by a longitudinal cohort study.

In all of this, the Department will liaise as appropriate with other bodies making assessments of the scheme.

County Farms

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the local authorities which own county farms. [31589]

Mr. Boswell: I have been asked to reply.

Buckinghamshire
Cambridgeshire
Cheshire
Cleveland

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Payroll Giving

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many right hon. and hon. Members are currently signed up to the charity payroll giving arrangement operated by the Fees Office. [32075]

Mr. Newton: There are currently 46 right hon. and hon. Members signed up to the payroll giving arrangement operated by the Fees Office.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Lord President of the Council what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [32668]

Mr. Newton: The Privy Council Office operates only personal computers and the millennium date change is expected to entail negligible costs, if any.

SCOTLAND

Private Investigators

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what use his Department has made of private detective agencies or investigators during 1995–96 and 1994–95; what agencies have been employed; for what purposes; and at what cost to his Department. [30566]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The information is set out in the table.

Seals

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to review the Conservation of Seals Act 1970; and if he will make a statement. [31298]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Government's policy on conservation of seals is kept under review. There are no plans to amend the Act.

Clyde Fishermen (Sharks)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many sharks have been caught by lone Clyde fishermen in each of the last five years. [31338]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information requested is not available.

Bird Habitats

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research his Department has commissioned into trends in the number of farmland birds. [31313]

Mr. Kynoch: The Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department is currently providing funding for a number of projects covering research into the impact of agricultural practices on the environment, which include bird-related studies. Research work on farmland bird numbers is also being funded through Scottish Natural Heritage, the Government's statutory adviser on nature conservation matters.

Examples include the joint funding of the Natural Environment Research Council-led special project on large-scale processes in ecology and hydrology. Three of the projects in that programme are concerned with aspects of bird populations, including analysis of trends. Scottish Natural Heritage has funded research into farmland bird numbers through a Joint Nature Conservation Committee contract let with the British Trust for Ornithology.

For 1996–97, each of the authorities has set a charge of £25 for the first emptying of a septic tank; any subsequent emptyings requested in 1996–97 may be charged at a higher rate or actual cost.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Promotion (Women)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures her Department has implemented during the last 12 months to encourage the promotion of women into senior positions with his Department and its executive agencies; and what progress her Department has made in encouraging the promotion of women over the last five years. [31545]

Mr. Howard: The Home Office is committed to the implementation of the Office of Public Service programme for action to achieve equality of opportunity for women in the civil service. It is also a founder member of Opportunity 2000, which aims to increase opportunities for women and promote the achievement of a balanced work force. The Department has continued to encourage measures which increase opportunities for women to reach senior positions. It monitors regularly the number of women in each grade, their annual report markings and their performance on promotion boards. It also makes available career breaks, flexible working arrangements and subsidised child care to assist women who want to combine work with domestic responsibilities.

There has been steady progress in the promotion of women into senior positions over the past five years. The percentage of women in grades 1 to 7, excluding the Prison Service, has risen from 21 per cent. to 28 per cent. Within that group, the representation of women at the former grade 3 level has risen from 27 per cent. to 43 per cent. and at grade 7 level from 20 per cent. to 33 per cent. Examples of progress elsewhere within the Department are that of the 12 people reaching governor 4 grade on the accelerated promotion scheme in the Prison Service, five have been women, representing 43 per cent., and that representation at grade 7 level in the Forensic Science Service has quadrupled over the past five years.

Life Prisoners

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many life sentence prisoners released on licence in the period 1990–95 were subsequently recalled. [32151]

Miss Widdecombe: Provisional data show that there were 578 life sentence prisoners released on licence between 1990 and 1995 inclusive, of whom 37 had their licence revoked and were subsequently returned to prison.

Prisoners (Phone Calls)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if appropriate equipment exists in all prisons in England and Wales to monitor phone calls being made by inmates. [32466]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 17 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to answer your recent Question about the monitoring of telephone calls in prison.

Cardphones for prisoners' use are provided in all establishments in England and Wales and appropriate equipment for monitoring calls is installed in all closed prisons. Arrangements for the monitoring of prisoners' calls are set out in Prison Service Circular Instructions 61/1989 and 21/1992, copies of which are in the Library.

Consideration is being given to the introduction of new telephone technology which minimises the risk of prisoner making unauthorised calls. This follows a recent successful pilot study at Full Sutton prison.

Prison Officers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the present policy of his Department in respect of the wearing by prison officers of name badges when on duty in a prison establishment in prisons in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [32465]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 17 June 1996:

The Home Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about name badges.

Prison Service policy on the wearing of name badges has remained unchanged since it was introduced in 1993. The policy is that staff who come into contact with prisoners or the public will be required to wear name badges; and staff will be encouraged to wear name badges in any circumstances where it will be useful or courteous to do so.

The implementation of the policy has been by encouragement rather than by active enforcement. There is a high level of non-compliance by staff, particularly from prison officers.

It is planned that name badges will be superseded by new security passes which will be worn by all staff. Information on the new style passes will include the name and a photograph of the member of staff. The new style passes should be introduced throughout the Prison Service by April 1997.

Non-human Primates

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if measures to deal with the adverse effects which may be encountered by non-human primates during transport prior to arrival in the United Kingdom will be incorporated into section 5(4) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. [32811]

Mr. Sackville: There are no plans to amend section 5(4) of the 1986 Act. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of people held in prisons in England and Wales for immigration offences as of 1 June. [32464]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 17 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of people held in prisons in England and Wales for immigration offences as of 1 June.

Married Man's Allowance

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total revenue forgone as a result of the married man's tax allowance in the last financial year for which figures are available, attributed to (a) families with children, (b) childless couples where both are in work and (c) childless couples with only one partner in work. [31603]

Mr. Jack: The estimated full year revenue cost of the married couple's allowance at 1996–97 income levels is about £3.3 billion. This includes the cost of related allowances—the additional personal allowance and the widow's bereavement allowance. A detailed breakdown of the cost is given in the following table. The estimates are based on a projection of the 1993–94 survey of personal incomes and the 1994–95 family expenditure survey in line with assumptions in the Budget forecast. Employment income is taken to include income from employment and self-employment.

[1] There are a few couples where both spouses are paying tax, but only one spouse has income from employment and the other spouse pays tax on investment income. These are included in this group.

Health Insurance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost of tax exemption for permanent health insurance payments in 1995–96. [32237]

Mr. Jack: Precise figures are not available centrally, but, based on the latest information from the Association of British Insurers, it is estimated that in 1995–96 the cost of exempting benefits payable under permanent health insurance policies is about £30 million.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [32663]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 13 June 1996]: Work is in hand to assess the effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated in the Treasury.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 25 April, 9122/96, which was transferred to the Office for National Statistics. [31574]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 7 June 1996]: A reply was sent on 4 June.

ENVIRONMENT

Asbestos

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures his Department has taken to ensure that those involved in the asbestos removal trade operate to proper safety standards. [32071]

Sir Paul Beresford: The health and safety of those involved in asbestos removal work is regulated by the Health and Safety Executive. HSE administers a system for licensing employers and the self-employed who work with asbestos insulation or asbestos coating, including removal. This enables HSE to monitor and inspect the work of licensed contractors. HSE also gives advice and publishes guidance.

Domestic Violence (Refuge Places)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list the estimated number of refuge places available for women escaping domestic violence in each year since 1991; [32699]

(2) how many refuges for women escaping domestic violence have been notified to his Department in each year since 1991 (a) in total and (b) in the Greater Manchester area. [32696]

Mr. Clappison: A survey carried out by the Women's Aid Federation (England) in 1995 identified 418 refuges in England, offering 6,532 bed spaces. Twenty-two of these refuges were in the Greater Manchester area. No figures are available for earlier years.

Customer Charters

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list (a) the customer charters which are currently in use within his Department and its executive agencies and (b) the charters which have been withdrawn. [32836]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department of the Environment and its executive agencies are responsible for one of the 41 main charters. This is the council tenants charter, issued in a revised form in June 1995. No charter in DoE's area of responsibility has been withdrawn.

Postage Costs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much his Department spent on postage in the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96; and how many items were posted during these periods. [328451]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is as follows:

1994–95 cost: £959,000

1995–96 cost: £952,000.

The statistics on the numbers of items posted were collected only for the London headquarters over this period and were:

1994–95: 937,400

1995–96: 941,400.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of local government expenditure was provided by (a) business, (b) domestic householders and (c) central Government in each of the years 1979 to 1995. [32105]

Sir Paul Beresford: The requested information is available from 1981–82. Figures for the proportion provided by domestic householders are gross of rebate or benefit—as detailed in note 2—and the grants supporting these expenditures are excluded from column 3.

1. For the years 1981–82 to 1989–90 this represents non-domestic rate yields net of rate relief. For the years 1990–91 to 1996–97 this represents the distributable amount from the non-domestic rates pool.

2. Gross of domestic rate rebates for the years 1981–82 to 1989–90. Gross of community charge benefit grant and transitional relief/community charge reduction scheme grant (1990–91 to 1992–93). Gross of council tax benefit grant and council tax transitional relief scheme grant (1993–94 to 1996–97).

3. For the years 1981–82 to 1989–90 Government grants comprise aggregate Exchequer grant. For 1990–91 to 1996–97 Government grants included are revenue support grant, specific and special grants in aggregate external finance, community charge grant (1991–92), teachers pay award additional grant (1992–93), standard spending assessment reduction grant (1994–95 to 1996–97), police grant (1995–96 to 1996–97).

4. The percentages do not add up to 100 per cent. The difference is funding or drawing from balances.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those district areas in Berkshire, Cambridgeshire, Cheshire, Devon, Essex, Hereford and Worcester, Kent, Lancashire, Nottinghamshire and Shropshire where the Local Government Commission for England concluded that the costs of transition would be recovered by ongoing savings in annual running costs following structural change. [32808]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Local Government Commission's estimates are in respect of whole county areas, not individual districts, and are expressed in each case as a range. They suggest that ongoing savings may be achievable in Essex, Hereford and Worcester, Lancashire, Nottinghamshire and Shropshire. In each case the estimates of costs or savings are marginal; whether savings are in fact achieved or costs incurred will depend on the decisions of the local authorities concerned.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the estimates of the Local Government Commission for England for the transitional costs arising from the proposals for the reorganisation of local government in the counties of Berkshire, Cambridgeshire, Cheshire, Devon, Essex, Hereford and Worcester, Kent, Lancashire, Nottinghamshire and Shropshire. [33029]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Local Government Commission's estimates of transitional costs of reorganisation are:

	Transitional costs £ million
Berkshire	9.0–13.0
Cambridgeshire	[1]4.8–7.9
Cheshire	[1]3.6–8.1
Devon	5.0–9.0
Essex	[2]6.5–12.2
Hereford and Worcester	6.0–9.0
Kent	[1]7.8–11.2
Lancashire	[1]2.9–6.1
Nottinghamshire	1.0–7.0
Shropshire	[1]2.0–2.6

[1] Excludes costs of redundancy, early retirement and other staff compensation costs.

[2] Consists of £2.5 to £4.2 million for Thurrock (excluding redundancy costs etc.) and £4.0 to £8.0 million for Southend.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will indicate the maximum allocation for supplementary credit approvals to meet transitional costs, arising from the structural change of local government, which will be available to relevant local authorities in England in the financial years 1997–98 and 1998–99. [32962]

Sir Paul Beresford: Provision for supplementary credit approvals to meet transitional costs of local government reorganisation for 1997–98 will be decided as part of the local government finance settlement later this year; that for 1998–99 will be decided in the settlement for 1998.

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will calculate notional amounts for local authorities which are subject to local government reorganisation on 1 April 1997. [33373]

Mr. Curry: We intend to calculate a notional amount for each local authority which is subject to local government reorganisation on 1 April 1997. These figures will serve as a baseline against which to make a fair comparison of an authority's proposed 1997–98 budget requirement for capping purposes.

We have made a first calculation of notional amounts for these authorities. These figures are shown in the following table along with our estimate of what each reorganised authority's 1996–97 standard spending assessment would have been on the basis of their revised boundaries and functions.

The aim of our notional amounts calculation is to disaggregate the 1996–97 budget requirements of reorganised county councils so as to reflect the actual pattern of spending between their continuing areas and the areas of the new unitary councils. We are consulting authorities on those figures and we hope that local information will enable us to improve the calculations so as better to reflect the actual pattern of spending. We will generally be willing to accept locally-agreed budget splits put to me by both the relinquishing county and the new unitaries in its area.

Authorities have until the end of August to comment. We shall consult further on our proposed notional amounts, incorporating any changes which we may make as a result of this initial consultation, as part of the local government finance settlement for 1997–98 later this year. Final notional amounts will be included in a report under section 55 of the Local Government Finance Act 1992 which will be subject to approval by the House of Commons.

Council Leaseholders

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he proposes to use his powers in the Housing Bill to help council leaseholders facing high service charges for repair and improvement works. [33354]

Mr Clappison: On 14 June we invited comments on our detailed proposals to reduce charges to leaseholders of local authorities and other social landlords. We wish to help leaseholders whose charges are particularly high in relation to any benefits which they receive from such works. We also wish to give landlords flexibility so that they can help those in greatest difficulty—for example, those who would suffer particular hardship as a result of high charges. We have therefore included in the Bill, in clauses 191 and 192, powers to issue directions to social landlords telling them when they can, or must, reduce charges, and to what extent.

Our consultation paper, "Leaseholders of local authorities, housing action trusts, urban development corporations, registered housing associations and other registered social landlords: further proposals to reduce charges for repairs and improvements," sets out in detail how we propose to use those powers—in particular, the circumstances in which we propose that charges should be reduced, and by how much. We plan to require social landlords to reduce charges in certain cases where these are particularly high and where they will be seeking Government financial assistance for the works on or after the date of the direction. In a wide range of other cases we propose to allow them to reduce charges, and to offer refunds on charges already paid.

I have placed a copy of the paper in the Library. We have invited comments by the end of August. The Welsh Office will be consulting similarly in Wales.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Marriage Working Party

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what progress has been made with regard to the work of the interdepartmental working party on marriage. [33546]

Mr. Streeter: The interdepartmental working party today issued a consultation paper following on from the seminar for researchers, service providers and other interested parties held on 3 April. The papers for the seminar have been published and are available in the Library. The results of this consultation exercise will inform the tender specifications being prepared for the funding of pilot projects which have particular potential for reducing the incidence and costs of marriage breakdown.

The working party has concluded its mapping exercise of existing services. It intends to publish a directory of marriage support services in the summer.

The mapping exercise has highlighted the lack of information about social attitudes to and expectations of marriage and also about the reasons why some marriages are so very successful when others sadly end in divorce or separation. Tender specifications will shortly be published for research into this field.

Probate Service

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to ensure that the recommendations contained in the report on the structure of the probate service of September 1994, are subject to parliamentary debate before their implementation. [33095]

Mr. Streeter: There are currently no plans for a debate on the recommendations. Comprehensive public consultation on the proposals from the report was carried out between October and March and all hon. Members whose constituencies would be affected were included in this exercise. A submission will soon be put forward for the Lord Chancellor's and my consideration. Any change to the number of probate sub-registries will be introduced by way of statutory instrument which will be laid before the House in the usual way.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellors's Department what assessment he has made of the extent to which the recommendations of the report on the structure of the probate service comply with the aims and commitments contained in the courts charter. [33096]

Mr. Streeter: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer. I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Derek Foster, dated 17 June 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the proposed changes to the structure of the Probate Service.

The quality of service which the Probate Service would be able to provide under any new structure has been the paramount consideration when assessing the proposals. Although no final decisions have yet been made, I am satisfied that the recommended structure for the Probate Service would continue to provide a high quality service and meet the standards in the Charter for Court Users.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Home Shopping

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimates he has made of the growth of home shopping over the next decade and what assessment he has made of the implications of such growth for the retail industry. [33077]

Mr. Eggar: No official forecasts of the growth of home shopping in the UK have been made, although I am aware that some private sector organisations have made such forecasts. However, there is already a substantial amount of home shopping through mail order, response advertising and other methods. I would expect this total to rise in the next decade as electronic shopping develops.

Contracts

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the (a) contracts with and (b) work carried out for (i) his Department, (ii) its agencies and (iii) development corporations by (1) Paddington Consultancy Partnership Ltd. or its directors, (2) Millbank Consultants, (3) Mr. Neale Coleman, (4) Mr. Stephen Hilditch and (5) Mr. Peter Bradley; and if he will indicate the total fees paid to (1) to (5). [32405]

Mr. John M. Taylor: In DTI headquarters, no contracts for external consultancy have been let centrally to the organisations or individuals listed. Information on other contracts is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Agency chief executives have been asked to provide separate responses.

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. David Shaw, dated 17 June 1996:

PADDINGTON CONSULTANCY PARTNERSHIP LIMITED (AND DIRECTORS), MILLBANK CONSULTANTS, MR. NEALE COLEMAN, MR. STEPHEN HILDITCH AND MR. PETER BRADLEY

Letter from R. J. Marchant to Mr. David Shaw, dated 17 June 1996:

The Patent Office has used none of the organisations or individuals listed.

Letter from Seton Bennett to Mr. David Shaw, dated 17 June 1996:

None of the organisations or individuals listed have carried out work for this Agency.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. David Shaw, dated 17 June 1996:

You recently asked the President of the Board of Trade for information regarding work carried out under contract for his Department. I am replying as Chief Executive of the above Agency.

None of the persons mentioned are current suppliers to Companies House, nor have they provided any services during the financial years 1994/95 or 1995/96. Since your question did not specify any particular period, we have not checked our records for earlier accounting periods, but have no reason to believe that Companies House has ever used the services of the persons mentioned.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those constituencies he has visited in the last three months on official business and those constituencies he intends to visit in the next three months; and if he will make a statement. [32336]

Mr. Lang: In the last three months I have visited Swindon, Suffolk Coastal, Esher and Brent, South constituencies on official business. I have a number of planned engagements over the next three months, but it is not the Department's policy to make public details of the forward diary.

Anglo-Yugoslav Trade

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the availability of statistics for trade between Britain and Yugoslavia since 1990. [33277]

Mr. Nelson: The information on trade in goods is published in Business Monitor M20, "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom", by HM Customs and Excise, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Until the end of 1992 the information was provided for Yugoslavia as a whole. Since the beginning of 1993, Slovenia, Croatia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Serbia and Montenegro and Macedonia have been treated separately.

Volatile Organic Compounds

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his assessment of the market for VOC abatement technology in (a) Europe, (b) America and (c) world wide. [32594]

Mr. Page: The Government's 1994 study of the UK environment industry, "The UK Environmental Industry: Succeeding in the Changing Global Market", covered VOC control technology as part of a review of the air pollution control sub-sector. The study concluded that there were good opportunities in western Europe, but that market opportunities in eastern Europe and north America were limited. The main opportunities in the United States will be for VOC control in light industry.

Business Links

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish his Department's recent report into business links. [32751]

Mr. Page: A copy of the report was placed in the Library of the House on 13 June.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many business links chairmen and chief executives defined their relationship with the Department as "poor" in the categories set out in his Department's recent internal report. [32939]

Mr. Page: A total of 11 out of 59 surveyed.

Strategy for Global Environmental Research

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what contribution he has requested university history departments to make to the United Kingdom national strategy for global environmental research. [32781]

Mr. Ian Taylor: No contribution has been requested specifically from university history departments. Contributions were requested through an open consultation exercise before the strategy was drafted. An open consultation meeting was subsequently held to consider the draft in March. This was attended by about 240 people from academia, industry and commerce, representative bodies, non-governmental organisations and Government Departments and agencies. Around half were academics from various disciplines. A further 100 people who were unable to attend requested sight of the report and had an opportunity to comment.

The UK national strategy for global environment research is due to be launched at a one-day conference at the British Association for the Advancement of Science annual festival of science in September 1996.

Disused Oil Wells

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many disused oil wells in British waters (a) have leaked and (b) are believed to be leaking from the capped reservoirs into the sea. [33072]

Mr. Page: Only one well in British waters has leaked small quantities of gas—not oil—from a shallow horizon into the sea and remains uncapped. The well, 22/4b-4, was drilled by Mobil in November 1990.

It was not physically possible at the time, or subsequently, to perform any sort of intervention into the wellbore which would have any degree of success in plugging or killing the well. It has not, therefore, been capped.

Recent inspections and sampling by Mobil have confirmed that the fluid now leaking is water, which contains no trace of hydrocarbons.

There have unfortunately been three disasters where hydrocarbons have leaked into the sea: Piper Alpha, Ocean Odyssey, and Sea Gem. These leaked hydrocarbons for a short time only, until the occurrence was controlled.

Human Genetics Report

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the Government will respond to the third report of the Science and Technology Committee of Session 1995–96 (HC 231) on "Human Genetics: the Government's response"; and if he will make a statement. [33350]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Government have today published their response to the Select Committee's report, "Human Genetics: the Government Response". Copies of the response have been laid before Parliament.

Advances in human genetics have great potential for improved health care, quality of life and competitiveness. The UK currently leads Europe in the research, development and application of genetic science and the Government want that lead to be maintained. As recognised by the Science and Technology Select Committee, however, advances in human genetics raise a number of important social, ethical and economic issues. It will be important that public confidence advances at a pace which reflects that of scientific discovery.

In evidence to the Science and Technology Select Committee earlier this year, the Government undertook to look at whether there was a need for a new body to take a trans-departmental view of developments in human genetics and to foster public confidence. In the light of this, and after consultations with the Chief Scientific Advisor and the Chief Medical Officer, the Government have decided to establish a new Human Genetics Advisory Commission.

The new advisory commission will report to health and industry Ministers and will be supported by a joint secretariat from the Office of Science and Technology and the Department of Health. It will report periodically and will be open to the Government to seek its advice on particular issues. More details, including the terms of reference, are given in the Government's response.

Radio Spectrum (Future Management)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress has been made in the review of the future management of the radio spectrum; and if he will make a statement. [33349]

Mr. Lang: I am today publishing a White Paper, "Spectrum Management: into the 21st Century".

The radio spectrum is used by used by a wide range of businesses and public sector services and in a variety of scientific and social applications. Radio services are of considerable importance to the economy and are growing rapidly. The White Paper announces proposals to improve the way in which the finite resource of the radio spectrum is managed so that future growth can be accommodated. We intend to achieve this by bringing forward legislation on spectrum pricing when parliamentary time is available. This will allow fees for licences to use spectrum to be set to reflect its value more closely instead of being linked to the costs of spectrum management. The White Paper seeks views on the detailed application of spectrum auctions and administrative pricing.

The proposals will benefit the economy, enhance competitiveness and create jobs. By promoting spectrum efficiency, they will:

- tackle spectrum shortages and congestion affecting the most heavily used services in some parts of the country,
- increased opportunities to access spectrum so that more users can be accommodated in the finite spectrum that is available and the rapidly growing demand for radio services can be met;
- accelerate the introduction of advanced digital technology; and
- increase competition and choice.

The purpose of spectrum pricing will be to achieve spectrum management objectives, rather than to increase revenue. Pricing will be phased in and applied selectively with a review after three years. Increases in charges will be focused where congestion is worst and kept to the minimum necessary to achieve spectrum management objectives. Most users will face no increases in fees and may benefit from reductions. Some users will face increased charges, but the increased availability of spectrum will bring considerable economic benefits overall. There will be concessions for safety-of-life charities.

Radio makes a substantial and growing contribution to wealth creation, competitiveness and jobs. The UK is a world leader in the use of radio. This success is placing ever-increasing demands on the finite spectrum resource. Unless we can meet these, the UK will suffer considerable economic losses as businesses are deprived of spectrum and new services are delayed.

The Radiocommunications Agency has fully explored existing regulatory measures to manage the spectrum effectively. These are no longer sufficient, so we intend to introduce spectrum pricing to augment them. The legislation will include provisions to allow enhanced security of tenure for licensees and selective financial assistance to radio users to accelerate desirable changes in spectrum use.

The public sector, which is a major user of radio, will be charged on a basis comparable with the private sector, but there will be safeguards for the operations of essential services.

The legislation will address the way in which fees are charged for licences under the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949. It will not affect the licensing of independent broadcasters under the Broadcasting Act 1990 and the Broadcasting Bill currently before Parliament, nor the BBC's position under its royal charter and agreement.

The adoption of digital broadcasting is the key to the Government's long-term spectrum strategy, since it has the potential to generate exciting wealth creation opportunities through the release of valuable spectrum for new broadcasting use or other applications. The Broadcasting Bill provides for a review of progress of digital broadcasting. The White Paper states that this review will consider the use of spectrum pricing to accelerate the transition from analogue to digital broadcasting.

The White Paper also deals with the organisation of spectrum management. Core functions, such as international representation, overall control of spectrum strategy and enforcement, need to be retained within Government. But there is already considerable private sector involvement in various aspects of spectrum management outside the core functions and we are keen to encourage further private sector participation where it delivers improved quality of service.

The measures announced in the White Paper are necessary to deal with pressing spectrum management problems. They will provide a framework of progressive spectrum management for continued growth and success into the next century and open the door to further market-based reforms, such as secondary trading of licences.

I am placing in the Libraries of the House copies of the White Paper and a background technical study.

Electricity Pricing

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will order an inquiry into the electricity pool pricing system; and if he will make a statement. [32900]

Mr. Page: This is a matter for the Director General of Electricity Supply, who keeps the operation of the pool under review and publishes reports and other papers from time to time.

Nuclear Generating Stations, Scotland

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish detailed information on all nuclear generating stations in Scotland with special reference to safety, structural soundness, security, and good working practice, before privatisation. [31689]

Mr. Eggar: Detailed information on British Energy's nuclear generating stations, including those in Scotland at the Hunterston B site and at Torness, is contained in the British Energy pathfinder prospectus issued on 10 June and will also be included in the publicly available full retail prospectus which will be published on 26 June. That prospectus will also contain detailed information about the legislative and regulatory regimes which British Energy must comply with to operate. Magnox Electric's nuclear generation station at the Hunterston A site in Scotland has closed.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Schools (Parental Choice)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many complaints under section 269 of the Education Act 1993 have been received by the ombudsman from parents failing to obtain a place for their child in the school of their choice in respect of (i) grant-maintained schools, (ii) voluntary-aided schools and (iii) special agreement schools for each year since the Act came into force. [32600]

Mrs. Gillan: This information is not held by the Department for Education and Employment. The annual report of the local government ombudsman for 1994–95 notes that 1,187 complaints concerning education were received in that year, and that 45 investigation reports were issued. The report does not state how many of these concerned school admissions.

Muslim Community Schools

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the number of Muslim community schools in England. [32872]

Mr. Robin Squire: There are currently 44 Muslim schools in England which are registered independent schools, and none in the maintained sector.

SHL Software

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the contracts his Department and his agencies have with SHL software computer systems; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; and what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract. [32914]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department and agencies do not have any contracts with any company under the name of SHL software systems, nor have we been able to identify a company in this name.

Employment Service

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what progress has been made on the privatisation of services provided by placement assessment and counselling teams in the Employment Service; and if he will make a statement; [32310]

(2) what progress has been made on the privatisation of local occupational psychology services within the Employment Service; and if he will make a statement; [32311]

(3) what progress has been made in the privatisation of functions carried out by the ability development centre in the Employment Service; and if he will make a statement. [32312]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Dale Campbell-Savours, dated 17 June 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the privatisation of placing, assessment and counselling teams, local occupational psychology services and Ability Development Centres. As all of these relate to the market testing programme and to disability services, this letter seeks to respond to all three questions.

As a Next Steps Agency, the Employment Services (ES), is subject to systematic and periodic examination in the form of a Prior Options Review. This review, conducted in early 1995 examined all of the services provided by ES including the feasibility of abolition, privatisation, strategic contracting out and, where these were rejected, market testing or the maintenance of current arrangements. Following the review, the then Secretary of State announced via a written Parliamentary Question that the services delivered by placing, assessment and counselling teams (PACTS) should be market tested in one or two ES regions on a pilot basis.

Market testing is a means of identifying whether the private sector can take forward work currently undertaken by the public sector at better value for money. This is done by allowing a team drawn from within the in-house service to compete with private sector bidders for the contract to do the work. Privatisation on the other hand entails a firm decision that the service should no longer be undertaken by the public sector, but should be contracted directly with the private sector. In this case we are clearly engaged in a market test, not a privatisation.

As a consequence of preliminary research into how the Secretary of State's recommendations could be taken forward, ES senior managers decided that the market test should cover the whole of the ES Disability Service within the North West region. This includes the services provided within the Ability Development Centre (ADC) and the local occupational psychology service in addition to the PACTs service. This decision was taken to ensure that ES clients would continue to receive fully integrated service and would not suffer any disadvantage as a result of how the market test had been packaged.

The market test was advertised in the "Disability Now" publication, and various national papers. As a consequence expressions of interest were received from private and voluntary sector organisations and also one from a team representing the in-house service. Organisations (including the in-house service provider) who wish to pursue their interest further have been asked to send an outline of how they would propose to deliver the Disability Service in the North West region, to ES by 28 June 1996. These proposals will be evaluated and shortlisted during July, with the aim of negotiating the detailed delivery proposals with the shortlisted organisations throughout the autumn. Final decisions on the outcome of the market test and the award of contract/service level agreement are planned for April/May 1997.

Local Occupational Psychology Services (LOPS) in each of the ES regions were subjected to market testing in 1994. In each case the in-house service providers were successful. Our decision, noted above, to market test the whole of the North West Disability Services has resulted in the LOP services in North West being included in that test. Except for that region, our plans are that these services will continue to be delivered under the present arrangements for the full duration of the current service level agreements. These are scheduled to run until September 1999.

This year we asked consultants to undertake a review of the functions of Ability Development Centres (ADCs) and how they were delivered. The review concluded that all the functions of ADCs should continue to be carried out. However, it also made a number of recommendations to allow them to be delivered more flexibly and improve their effectiveness. Senior management in ES accepted the recommendations and is currently considering how best to implement them. Within North West region, since ADC functions are within the scope of the market test, the way in which these functions will be carried out here in the future will depend on the outcome of the test.

I hope this is helpful.

Customer Charters

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list (a) the customer charters which are currently in use within her Department and its executive agencies and (b) the charters which have been withdrawn. [32824]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department and its executive agencies publish the following charters:

the parents charter,

the jobseekers charter,

the further education charter, the higher education charter.

No charters have been withdrawn.

Class Sizes

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what number and percentage of children in (a) primary and (b) secondary maintained schools in England have been in classes of (i) 30 or more and (ii) 40 or more in 1996; and if she will give the percentage change since 1995. [32964]

Mr. Robin Squire: I will write to the hon. Member at the end of June, when provisional information on class sizes in January 1996 will be available.

PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Jovan Zebic

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Prime Minister (1) on what dates Ministers met Mr. Jovan Zebic in their official capacity since 1990; [32306]

(2) on what dates Ministers met Mr. Zoran Tanic in their official capacity since 1990. [32307]

The Prime Minister: As far as I am aware, none.

Sir James Kirkham

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Prime Minister when he last met Sir James Kirkham; and if he will outline the matters discussed. [32965]

The Prime Minister: I have never heard of Sir James Kirkham. The hon. Member may be referring to Sir Graham Kirkham, whom I last met on Sunday 9 June at the Oval cricket ground and at a dinner at Downing street. We discussed raising funds for good causes, in particular Mencap, in whose interests the cricket was played and the dinner given.

Conservative Party (Donations)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) of 21 May, Official Report, column 96, what reports he received in 1991 and 1992 alleging donations to the Conservative party from sources linked to Bosnian Serbs. [33285]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to my answer to the right hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashown) on 21 May, Official report, column 96.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Compliance Cost Assessments

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those compliance cost assessments published during the latest six-month period. [33355]

Mr. Freeman: Since April 1993, the Government have required Departments to prepare and publish compliance cost assessments with all proposed legislation presented to Parliament to assess the impact on business costs. This includes a special test of the impact on small businesses. Since January 1996, the responsible Minister has had to certify that he has seen the compliance cost assessment and is satisfied that the regulatory proposal strikes an appropriateness balance between cost and benefit.

I have presented to Parliament today a Command Paper listing 91 CCAs published between 1 July 1995 and 31 December 1995 plus four CCAs published between 1 January 1995 and 30 June 1995 which were omitted from the previous Command Paper. This is the fourth such Command Paper and further papers listing all CCAs published in the preceding six month period will be published at six monthly intervals.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Burundi

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Belgium regarding the security situation in Burundi. [32568]

Mr. Hanley: We remain in close touch with the Belgians and our other European partners about the situation in Burundi.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the current security situation in Burundi, and if he will make a statement. [32569]

Mr. Hanley: The security situation in Burundi is a cause of grave concern and we have made clear our condemnation of violence from whatever quarter. We continue to give our full support to international efforts, led by former President Nyerere, to resolve Burundi's problems through political dialogue.

Rwanda

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the current political and security situation in Rwanda. [32570]

Mr. Hanley: Conditions inside Rwanda are generally stable. We are supporting action in the UN to deal with the deterioration in the security situation along the border in eastern Zaire.

World Heritage

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons the United Kingdom was not represented at the biennial general assembly of states parties to the world heritage convention in November 1995. [32747]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Her Majesty's Government were represented at this meeting by the UNESCO observer section of the British embassy in Paris.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards world heritage matters; what are the responsibilities of the United Kingdom observer at UNESCO in this connection; and how information gathered by him is disseminated to interested parties in the United Kingdom. [32748]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The Government ratified UNESCO's world heritage convention in 1984 and actively supports its provisions concerning the protection of the world cultural and natural heritage. The world heritage list of sites considered to be of outstanding universal value contains 16 UK sites. Later this month we shall be nominating maritime Greenwich for addition to the list.

The Government contribute annually to the world heritage convention. For 1996, the UK contribution is approximately £129,000.

The UNESCO observer section of the British embassy in Paris monitors events and occasionally attends meetings on behalf of the lead Whitehall Department, the Department of National Heritage. The observer's reports are sent to the DNH, which informs interested UK parties as necessary.

Tibet

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to recognise the Tibetan authorities in exile as the legitimate Government of Tibet; and if he will make a statement. [33021]

Mr. Hanley: We do not recognise the self-proclaimed Tibetan Government in exile. We do, however, consider that Tibetans should have a greater say in the running of their own affairs in Tibet, and we have consistently urged the Chinese authorities and Tibetan Buddhist leaders to enter into a constructive dialogue, without preconditions.

Postage Costs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department spent on postage in the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96; and how many items were posted during these periods. [32852]

Mr. Hanley: The cost of postage in the FCO diplomatic wing was £154,685 for the financial year 1994–95 and £150,757 for 1995–96. The number of items posted in 1995–96 was 403,322. Figures for 1994–95 are not available.

The cost of postage for the ODA was £42,000 for the financial year 1994–95 and £51,000 for 1995–96. The number of items posted in 1994–95 was approximately 104,000. The number of items posted in 1995–96 was 104,152.

Customer Charters

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the customer charters which are currently in use within his Department and its executive agencies and (b) the charters which have been withdrawn. [32837]

Mr. Hanley: We introduced charter standard statements for overseas pensions in 1992 and consular services, legalisation work and overseas trade services in 1993. None have been withdrawn.

Burma

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Burmese Government about the future of human rights and democracy in Burma; and if he will make a statement. [32759]

Mr Hanley: We have taken action both bilaterally and in international fora such as the United Nations to put pressure on the ruling State Law and Order Restoration Council in Burma to implement democratic and human rights reforms. We have severed defence links and have imposed an embargo on arms sales and all non-humanitarian aid.

We issued a statement on 22 May condemning the detention of National League for Democracy members and urged the SLORC to enter into meaningful dialogue with pro-democracy groups. Our ambassador in Rangoon repeated these concerns in a démarche to the SLORC on 7 June.

Immigration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 23 January, Official Report, column 165, when a decision is to be taken on the application by Mr. Gultasab Hussain (ref: HO C8645) to the United Kingdom post in Islamabad to join his wife in the United Kingdom. [32958]

Mr. Hanley: I have asked the high commission at Islamabad for details and will arrange for the hon. Member to receive a substantive reply from the migration and visa correspondence unit as soon as possible.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 14 May, Official Report, column 383, if the teacher named and the letter from the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Upminster (Sir N. Bonsor), of 28 March has been able to take advantage of the new rules relating to maternity leave on St. Helena; and if he will make a statement. [33173]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The teacher was not able to take advantage of the new rules relating to confinement leave in St. Helena as she resigned from her job on 25 April 1996. The new rules became effective from 31 May 1996.

General Affairs Council

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the outcome of the General Affairs Council and the intergovernmental conference ministerial meeting on 10 June. [33279]

Mr. David Davis: In accordance with the current policy of non-co-operation I withheld UK agreement from 17 measures where unanimity was required. I agreed to three others: signature of the EU-Slovenia agreement, a mandate for a new EU-Algeria agreement, and a joint action on Bosnia election monitoring. As a result, the only "A" points in document 7929/96 that were adopted were items 1 to 10 inclusive, which did not require unanimity, and item 26, Bosnia election monitoring. The single item in document 8047/96 was blocked. The documents will be placed in the Libraries of the House as soon as they are available. I argued strongly for early agreement on a framework for lifting the beef ban. While other Ministers and the Commission expressed their concern at the policy of non-co-operation, many urged the Commission to produce such a framework at the earliest possible date, and both the Commission and the Presidency made clear their commitment to work for an early agreement.

The Council had a further discussion of the MEDA regulation on aid to Mediterranean countries.

The Council discussed follow-up on the Barcelona Euro-Med conference on 27–28 November 1995.

The Presidency explored their ideas for an informal Euro-Med ministerial in Rome on 17 June. The Presidency also asked for approval of conclusions on Barcelona follow-up activity, but I made it clear that I could not agree these on beef ban non-co-operation grounds.

The Council discussed the middle east peace process and the Council asked the European political directors to take forward work in preparation for the Florence European Council.

The Presidency explained arrangements for the Florence European Council.

In a discussion on the former Yugoslavia, the Presidency and the Commission reported on their tour of the region. Carl Bildt, the EU's High Representative, briefed the Council on preparations for the Florence Peace Implementation Council.

The Council discussed Commission proposals for revision of the agricultural generalised scheme of preferences.

The Council discussed the draft EU-Canada action plan.

The Commission and the Presidency reported on preparations for the EU-US summit to be held on 12 June.

The council had an exchange of views on possible Euro-African summit.

A ministerial session of the IGC focused on external issues. On defence, Ministers discussed the implications for the IGC of the recent Berlin NATO ministerial meeting. Ministers also discussed general common foreign and security policy issues, the question of whether the Union should acquire legal personality, and questions of external economic competence.

The ministerial session was preceded by an exchange of views with representatives of the European Parliament.

President Menem of Argentina briefly addressed the Council on 10 June. The first EU-Mercosur-Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay, Uruguay-ministerial meeting was held in the margins of the GAC on 10 June.

On 11 June, there were meetings of the EU-Syria Co-operation Council and the European Economic Area Council.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

New Parliamentary Building

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what arrangements have been made to procure the cladding for the new parliamentary building; what factors have delayed the procurement process; and if he will make a statement. [31305]

Mr. Ray Powell: The new parliamentary building is being procured using the construction management form of contracting. This involves tendering separately for each of the main elements of the building under a firm of construction managers. The tendering process includes advertising the main packages in the EC Journal before selecting a short list of companies to submit their offers. The criteria for awarding the packages is overall value for money.

In the particular case of the fenestration, the initial offers were all over the budget. It was therefore necessary to modify the scheme before seeking revised bids, which were received towards the end of last year. Since then, detailed discussions have taken place to finalise the technical and legal aspects of the contract.

The contract has now been awarded to Seele Avis Fenestration Ltd., a joint venture formed by Seele GmbH and Alvis plc to combine and exploit their respective skills. I understand that much of the work will be undertaken at Alvis' factory at Coventry.

Security Passes

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee how many security passes for hon. Members have been reported lost or stolen during the last five years. [32966]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: One hundred and one.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

ODA Fundamental Expenditure Review

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the recommendations from the Overseas Development Administration's fundamental expenditure review which (a) will and (b) will not be implemented indicating the criteria used to select those recommendations which will be implemented. [32702]

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development confirmed on 10 June in another place, Official Report, House of Lords, column 147 that the Government have accepted and are implementing most of the recommendations of the fundamental expenditure review. She listed the few exceptions.

Each recommendation was considered against our development and foreign policies, whether it would enable us to pursue better key objectives and whether operational efficiency and effectiveness would be improved.

Oslo Conference (20/20 Initiative)

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 21 May, Official Report, column 111, which countries attended the Oslo meeting on the 20/20 initiative; which countries committed themselves to adopting the 20/20 initiative; and which countries have indicated they will implement the 20/20 measures on time. [32578]

Mr. Hanley: Representatives from more than 30 countries attended the Oslo meeting on the 20/20 initiative. These included more than 10 donor countries. All countries present agreed the consensus, to which I referred in my answer of 21 May. Several countries indicated informally that they would pursue the initiative in future aid talks. The United Kingdom is open to approaches from developing countries which have an interest in developing the initiative. There is no time limit for implementing the initiative.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: to ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the report of the Overseas Development Administration social security adviser on his visit to St. Helena was first made available to members of the St. Helena (a) Executive Council and (b) Legislative Council. [33170]

Mr. Hanley: The report was sent to the St. Helena Government on 12 June for consideration and distribution.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proposals she has to use the private finance initiative to fund the proposed millennium exhibition which she announced on 28 February. [31560]

Mr. Sproat: The Millennium Commission is continuing to explore the viability of the proposed millennium exhibition at Greenwich. Sir Peter Levene is assessing commercial support for it on the commission's behalf.

Ethnic Minority Broadcasting

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans the Radio Authority has to consult (i) black and (ii) other ethnic minorities in (a) Manchester, (b) Birmingham and (c) London on commercial radio; and if she will make a statement. [32558]

Mr. Sproat: It is a matter for the Radio Authority to decide on groups and bodies to be consulted in discharging its responsibilities.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is her Department's policy in respect of ethnic minority radio broadcasting. [32556]

Mr. Sproat: The Government are committed to the promotion of diversity and choice in radio. The BBC recognises its particular duty as a public service broadcaster to represent and serve Britain's ethnic minorities by providing targeted programmes and services and through ensuring fair representation in mainstream radio services. In the commercial sector, the Broadcasting Act 1990 requires the Radio Authority, in awarding local radio licences, to have regard to the extent to which any applicant for a licence would cater for the tastes and interests of the local community and broaden the range of programmes available to it. These principles will be taken forward into digital audio broadcasting by the Broadcasting Bill currently before the House.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what consultative meetings her Department has held with representatives of the black and other ethnic minority communities on radio broadcasting in 1995–96; and if she will make a statement; [32555]

(2) what plans her Department has to consult black and other ethnic minorities nationally about commercial radio; and if she will make a statement. [32557]

Mr. Sproat: Ministers and officials from my Department meet representatives from a wide range of radio broadcasting interests from time to time. The most recent meeting with representatives of the black community involved in radio broadcasting was a visit to Choice FM by the Department's permanent secretary on 24 April. We currently have no plans for a formal consultation exercise on any aspect of commercial radio policy.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many (i) black and (ii) other ethnic minority staff the Radio Authority employs; and if she will make a statement. [32554]

Mr. Sproat: Of the seven members of the authority appointed by my right hon. Friend, there is currently one black member. The Radio Authority has 33 staff, of whom one is from an ethnic minority. The authority also retains a former member of the authority, who is from an ethnic minority, as a consultant on ethnic minority issues.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many radio licences have been issued to (i) black and (ii) other ethnic minority radio stations. [32553]

Mr. Sproat.: The Radio Authority has issued 10 licences to provide local radio services aimed at catering for the tastes and interests of black and ethnic minority audiences.

SOCIAL SECURITY

European Union Flag

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what instructions were issued to his Department's offices and agencies in respect of flying the European Union flag on 8 May; and if he will make a statement. [31511]

Mr. Lilley: I gave instructions that the European Union flag should not be flown from Department of Social Security buildings on 8 May.

Recruitment

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what circumstances his Department or its executive agencies uses an executive search or employment agency to recruit staff in preferences to using personnel staff within his own Department or its executive agencies. [31527]

Mr. Burt: Under the next steps programme responsibility for recruitment has been devolved to individual business units and, within agencies, to local level. Employment agencies and executive search agencies are used by personnel sections where their expertise can add value to the recruitment process. In most cases they are used to fill senior or specialist vacancies. The Department uses recruitment and assessment services to recruit staff to the fast stream grade. The Contributions Agency has contracted out its personnel services and the contractors undertake all recruitment action on the agency's behalf.

War Disablement Pension

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average length of time currently taken to process (a) an application for a war disablement pension and (b) an appeal against a refusal of an application for a war disablement pension. [32153]

Mr. Heald: These are matters for Mr. Kevin Caldwell, chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from K. C. Caldwell to Mr. David Hanson, dated 13 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about War Pension claims and appeals.

The current average time being taken by the War Pensions Agency to clear a first claim to War Pension is 169 working days and the average time to clear an appeal is 328 working days.

War Pensions claims and appeals, in many instances, relate to World War II cases and thus involve the determination of cause and effect of medical conditions arising from incidents in service over 50 years ago. The retrieval of old service records and the linkage from service incidents to current disablements, as well as the assessment of the current degree of disablement and determination of the part played by the service incident are all complicating factors.

The War Pensions Agency set about a programme of modernising its administrative processes and through 1995 introduced a substantial programme of change: restructuring its operational teams into end-to-end sections to provide holistic service to claimants; introduction of a major operational computer system linked to the Department's other systems; and moving to new purpose built accommodation. These changes, aimed at providing an improved, more cost-effective service, did lead to a down-turn in performance in the second half of 1995 as the costs of retraining staff in the new arrangements were felt. As the throughput of work has picked up, and more cases are being cleared, more of these are relatively old cases in the system and average clearance times are elongated.

The position on appeals has also been affected by the considerable increase in appeals in 1994. There are still many old appeals in the system, which will continue to depress performance, but the Agency is making inroads and now has 10,475 appeals on hand compared to 14,360 at the same time last year and is clearing about 1,000 a month against a current average intake of less than half that number.

I should explain the War Pension appeals are dealt with in two stages. First, the Agency prepares appeal papers and a Statement of Case for the independent Pensions Appeal Tribunals (PAT), who come under the jurisdiction of the Lord Chancellor's Department. The PAT, who consider all War Pension appeals, are then responsible for arranging the appeal hearing.

The figures I have quoted relate solely to the Agency's performance. I am advised by the PAT that, after receiving the appeal papers from the Agency, it is currently taking them on average 59.4 weeks to arrange a hearing.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to (a) commission and (b) undertake research into the impact of incapacity benefit. [32489]

Mr. Burt: A programme of external research and in-house studies is already in place to help assess whether incapacity benefit is meeting its objectives. These are to target help on people whose medical condition makes them incapable of work and to provide help in getting them back to work through arrangements that are simple to understand and fair.

Appeals

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) when he intends to complete his review of the legal basis of decision-making and appeals for social security benefits. [32240]

(2) what plans he has to reform the system of independent appeals tribunals with right of audience for appellants. [32241]

Mr. Roger Evans: The review my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, announced in February is concerned with how to achieve simpler, more efficient and cost effective arrangements for decisions and appeals whilst preserving claimants' rights to properly based decisions and access to an independent appeals mechanism. It is too soon to say when the review will be completed.

Civil Servants (Duties Abroad)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much his Department spent during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 on sending civil servants accompanying Ministers from his Department on official duties abroad. [32420]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Warrington, South (Mr. Hall), on 20 March, Official Report, columns 238–40. Costs attributable to civil servants cannot reliably be identified separately.

Means Testing

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 7 May to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Rutherglen (Mr. McAvoy), Official Report, columns 93–94, if he will provide the same information for each year since 1978. [32579]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table:

"The Growth of Social Security"

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which of the assumptions concerning gross domestic product growth and unemployment in the three cases in "The Growth of Social Security" were used as the basis for calculating figure 10 in the Social Security departmental report, Cm3213. [32485]

Mr. Burt: The projections in "The Growth of Social Security" all assumed an unemployment level of around 3 million in 1992–93 which either stayed constant (case 1) or fell (cases 2 and 3) over the period to 1999–2000. None of these cases were appropriate for the latest projections—figure 10 of the Social Security departmental report—which assumed that the unemployment level remained constant at 2.1 million from 1995–96 to 2000–2001.

Child Benefit

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families with children in receipt of child benefit aged (a) 16, (b) 17, (c) 18 and (d) 19 years, have a household income of (a) £0 to £5,000 per annum, (b) £5,000 to £10,000 per annum, (c) £10,000 to £15,000 per annum, (d) £15,000 to £20,000 per annum, (e) £20,000 to £25,000 per annum, (f) £25,000 to £30,000 per annum, (g) £30,000 to £35,000 per annum, (h) £35,000 to £40,000 per annum, (i) £40,000 to £45,000 per annum, (j) £45,000 to £50,000 per annum and (k) £50,000 and over. [30138]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell [holding answer 20 May 1996]: The information is not available in the format requested as child benefit is not payable in respect of 19-year-olds. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Numbers of benefit units receiving child benefit for children aged 16, 17 and 18, by bands of gross household weekly income, UK, 1992–93

Thousands

Gross household weekly income (January 1993 prices)	Numbers of benefit units receiving child benefit for children aged: 16	17 to 18	16 to 18
£0-£192	80	60	130
> £192 to £385	140	120	250
> £385 to £577	130	110	220
> £577 to £769	70	90	150
Over £769	90	100	180
Total	510	470	930

Notes:

1. Figures show the estimated number of benefit units which receive child benefit in respect of a child aged 16 to 18, by bands of weekly gross household income. A benefit unit is defined as a single adult or a couple with any dependent children; a household can contain one or more benefit units. Benefit units with children aged 16, and aged 17 or 18, will appear in both the first two columns; rows may therefore not sum.
2. Benefit units are grouped according to bands of gross weekly household income. If received throughout the year, these bands would correspond to annual incomes in January 1993 of: (i) £0 to £10,000 (ii) over £10,000 to £20,000 (iii) over £20,000 to £30,000 (iv) over £30,000 to £40,000 and (v) over £40,000. A more detailed breakdown would not be reliable.
3. 1992–93 is the latest period for which data is available. Figures for 1992–93 are for two calender years combined.
4. Estimates are derived from survey data and are subject to sampling error.

Estimates for 17 and 18-year-olds are combined, as are certain income groups, to reduce these sampling errors. Figures are shown to the nearest 10,000 benefit units. Columns may not sum due to rounding.

Child Support Agency

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the additional annual administration costs of the new powers of investigation which are to be given to the Child Support Agency. [32599]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: There are no plans to give the Child Support Agency new powers of investigation.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Asil Nadir

29. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the current position in relation to the preparation of the case against Asil Nadir. [31641]

The Solicitor-General: Asil Nadir stands indicted before the central criminal court on 13 counts of theft involving over £33 million alleged to have been stolen from Polly Peck International plc. A warrant has been issued for his arrest. The Crown is ready to proceed as soon as he returns or is returned to the jurisdiction.

Racism

30. Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on prosecutions for racist attacks. [31642]

The Attorney-General: From 1 October 1995 to 31 March 1996, 429 defendants in cases identified as racial incidents were prosecuted by the Crown Prosecution Service.

31. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement about prosecutions for acts of racism in the last 10 years. [31644]

The Solicitor-General: There have been 29 applications for consent to prosecute under part III of the Public Order Act 1986. Twenty-four have been granted. Four have been declined and one withdrawn.

Driving Offences

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the number of cases relating to (a) driving without due care and attention, (b) causing death by dangerous driving, (c) causing death by reckless driving that have been referred to the Crown Prosecution Service in each of the last five years resulting in (i) prosecutions and (ii) convictions. [32801]

The Attorney-General: Information about the number and outcome of cases by offence category is published annually by the Home Office in "Criminal Statistics England and Wales".

The Crown Prosecution Service holds no central records showing by offence category the result of cases referred to it. The information is held on individual case files, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list for each of the last five years the number of cases relating to road traffic accidents involving death or injury that have been referred to the Crown Prosecution Service and resulted in (a) prosecution and (b) conviction. [32800]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service holds no central records in respect of specific offences. The information is held on individual case files, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Prosecuting Departments

Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement concerning his relationship with those Government Departments with prosecuting responsibilities which are not subject to his superintendence. [33363]

The Attorney-General: I do not expect to be routinely informed about prosecutions which I do not superintend merely because they are difficult or have a high, or potentially high, public profile. But it may well be appropriate to consult me in relation to cases raising, for example, particularly difficult public interest considerations, issues of propriety, or important issues of law of general importance.

It is always open to prosecutors to seek my guidance in relation to particular problems or issues, and open to any Department to drawn concerns about a prosecution to my attention, whether or not it is one which I superintend. A fuller account of my role is contained in a paper which I have placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Scott Report

Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Attorney-General is he will make a statement on the recommendation contained in Sir Richard Scott's report that there should be a formalised system of supervision of export control prosecution by the Attorney-General. [33364]

The Attorney-General: As indicated in my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade in the debate on Sir Richard Scott's report on 26 February, Official Report, column 597, the Government have accepted that in future the role of the Attorney-General should include the exercise of increased supervision of Customs and Excise prosecutions in relation to export control matters. The arrangements to give effect to this increased supervision have now been settled and are contained in a paper which I have placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

I shall be answerable to the House for actions taken by Customs and Excise in relation to individual prosecutions relating to defence exports and to sanctions infringements, other than those involving strict liability—that is not requiring evidence of deliberate evasion. Treasury Ministers will continue to be answerable for general enforcement and prosecution policy and will also remain responsible for the investigation of such offences.

Young Offenders

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Attorney-General how many children below the age of 10 years were prosecuted in the last year for which figures are available; which were the main offences; and if he will make a statement. [32059]

The Attorney-General: None. There is an irrebuttable common law presumption that children under 10 years are incapable of criminal responsibility.

European Union (Withdrawal)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on his Department's recent work on the implications of withdrawal from the European Union. [31637]

The Attorney-General: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has made it clear that there is no suggestion of the United Kingdom leaving the European Union. In any event, by convention, the fact of whether advice on any issue has been sought from or given by the Law Officers is not disclosed.

Crown Prosecution Service

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Attorney-General what was the cost to public funds of the case involving Nick Rodwell and other defendants at Northampton crown court; and what assessment he has made of the desirability of a change in the practices of the Crown Prosecution Service in such cases. [32919]

The Attorney-General: The costs incurred by the prosecution in the case involving Mr. Rodwell and other defendants are estimated at £2,856.62. The costs to the Lord Chancellor's Department of the five-day Crown court trial are assessed at £10,390. That figure includes staff and administrative costs and judicial salaries but not an element for the cost to the legal aid fund. To date no payment has been made from either the legal aid fund or from central funds. Those costs will not be known until the final bills have been assessed.

The practice of the Crown Prosecution Service in deciding whether to prosecute such cases is to apply the existing law and the code for Crown prosecutors, which is issued under section 10 of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985.

The Crown Prosecution Service has recently issued revised guidelines to provide a consistent standard for the selection of charges for offences against the person, which gives further guidance to prosecutors in dealing with cases such as that against Mr. Rodwell. The prosecution of Mr. Rodwell reflected the proper application of those principles.

Improper Trading

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list those offences in law that may be referred to as improper trading or misrepresentation of company financial status; if he will make a statement on the position of (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers, should companies to which they hold directorships be found guilty of such offences; and if he will make a statement. [31854]

Mr. Lang: I have been asked to reply.

What offence or offences were charged in any particular case would depend on the individual circumstances of that case, but the offences which might be charged would include section 458 of the Companies Act 1985 (Fraudulent Trading), section 233 (Approval and Signing of Accounts) or section 234 (Duty to Prepare Directors' Report) of the Companies Act 1985, section 47 of the Financial Services Act 1986 (Misleading Statements and Practices), section 17 of the Theft Act 1968 (False Accounting), section 209 (Falsification of Company's Books) or section 210 (Material Omissions from statement Relating to Company's Affairs) of the Insolvency Act 1986.

The position of any civil servant found guilty of a criminal offence is a matter for the Department in which the individual is employed in accordance with its disciplinary procedures. A Minister in a similar position would be responsible for judging how best to act and for justifying his or her conduct to Parliament. Ministers can remain in office only for as long as they retain the Prime Minister's confidence.

TRANSPORT

Salvage Tugs

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he hopes to implement Lord Donaldson's recommendation in respect of the stationing of salvage tugs around the coast of the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [31439]

Mr. Norris: Emergency towing vessels were stationed, as a trial, at Dover and Stornoway as a result of recommendations made by Lord Donaldson's inquiry and the emergency towing study team. The next highest priority identified by the inquiry and by the emergency towing study team was the south western approaches. On the basis of our experience with the tugs in Dover and Stornoway over the last two winters, we shall station a tug at both these locations again next winter; further, we have decided to place a third tug in the south western approaches next winter. We will shortly be inviting competitive tenders for that contract.

Civil Servants (Duties Abroad)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department spent during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 on sending civil servants accompanying Ministers from his Department on official duties abroad. [32418]

Sir George Young: Information on such visits was placed in the Library in response to an earlier question from the hon. Member for Warrington, South (Mr. Hall) on 11 March 1996, Official Report, column 474. No further overseas visits were made in the financial year 1995–96.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those constituencies he has visited in the last three months on official business and those constituencies he intends to visit in the next three months; and if he will make a statement. [32335]

Sir George Young: I am placing the information requested in the Library.

Heavy Goods Vehicle Licences

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the changes that will affect licences held by HGV drivers as a result of the implementation of EC directive 5415/96. [32778]

Mr. Norris: The European Commission proposal for a Council directive amending directive 91/439/EEC is to introduce the use of a set of codes on licences to signify conditions under which licences may be used. It also provides for the formation of a committee of national experts to undertake minor changes to the codes, and more generally minor changes of a scientific and technical nature to the annexes to directive 91/439/EEC. Driving licences, including those for large goods vehicle drivers, first issued or renewed after the directive comes into force would be required to include codes appropriate to their conditions of use, and may be subject, in so far as they are relevant, to other, minor changes of a scientific and technical nature as agreed by the committee.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for transport if he will list the number of drivers entitled to drive (a) class 1 HGVs and (b) class 2 HGVs. [32779]

Mr. Norris: Class 1 and class 2 HGV licences were replaced in 1991 by EC driving licence categories which have a different basis. Numbers of pre-1991 HGV licences are not now held in disaggregated form, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

London Underground (Investment)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what levels of investment were planned by his Department in 1992 in the London Underground for the period 1992 to 2000; and what was the level of investment (a) made in 1993–94, 1994–95, 1995–96 at (i) outturn and (ii) 1996 prices and (b) planned at 1996–97 prices for 1996–97 and successive years until 1999–2000. [32705]

Mr. Norris: Investment in London Underground is planned by London Transport, not the Government. The information requested is set out in the tables:

London Underground core business investment 1993–94 to 1995–96

£ million

Year	Outturn prices	1996–97 prices
1993–94	480	516
1994–95	503	531
1995–96	485	490

London Underground core business planned investment 1996–97 to 1998–99

Year	1996–97 prices (£ million)
1996–97	360

Aircraft Inspections

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions, and for what reasons, aircraft operated by (a) Air Operations of Europe and (b) Air Operations of Sweden have been grounded or had their take-off delayed by the Civil Aviation Authority. [32797]

Mr. Norris: None. However, the Swedish civil aviation authority withdrew the certification of airworthiness for one aircraft operated by Air Operations of Europe in May 1995 when severe corrosion was found by engineers during routine maintenance at Heathrow. If the Swedish authorities had not taken prompt action once the fault had been uncovered, the Civil Aviation Authority would have issued a direction to prevent the aircraft from flying. The certificate of Airworthiness was restored by the Swedish authorities when the fault had been rectified.

At the request of the Department, the CAA undertook ramp checks of two further aircraft operated by Air Operations of Europe. These inspections did not delay the take-off of the aircraft concerned.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of inspection reports compiled by the Civil Aviation Authority as a result of inspections undertaken on aircraft operated by Air Operations of Europe and Air Operations of Sweden. [32799]

Mr. Norris: The CAA did not produce reports of the two inspections carried out on aircraft belonging to Air Operations of Europe, which has now ceased trading.

However, they provided the Department with advice on the condition of the aircraft. That advice concluded that the aircraft concerned were airworthy. The CAA has not carried out any inspections on aircraft operated by Air Operations of Sweden.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by airport for each of the last five years the number of inspections of aircraft undertaken by the Civil Aviation Authority and the number of aircraft that (a) were grounded and (b) had their take-off delayed. [32798]

Mr. Norris: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Airport Capacity (London)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the usage of the cross-wind 23/05 runway at Heathrow in the last 12 months. [32788]

Mr. Norris: Data provided by national air traffic services shows that the crosswind 23/05 runway at Heathrow was used for 23 landings in the 12 months up to 31 May 1996.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the declared runway and terminal capacities for Heathrow and Gatwick airports. [32790]

Mr. Norris: This is a matter for BAA plc.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the current terminal and runway throughputs for Heathrow and Gatwick airports together with the percentage usage of available capacity these represent. [32791]

Mr. Norris: I understand from BAA plc, that the current terminal and runway throughputs for Heathrow and Gatwick airports are as follows:

Throughput Year to May 1996	Terminal passengers Thousands	Air transport movements
Heathrow	54,886.3	422,337
Gatwick	23,082.2	200,955

The capacities of Heathrow and Gatwick airports are a matter for BAA plc.

British Airways

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of UK air transport is held by British Airways and its franchisees. [32793]

Mr. Norris: British Airways and its wholly-owned subsidiary, Brymon Airways, contributed 58.3 per cent. of all available tonne kilometres offered by UK airlines in 1995. A further 1 per cent. of ATK was contributed by BA's franchise partner airlines.

Transatlantic Airline Alliance

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what instructions he has given to his officials who have been sent to Washington to support the British Airways/American Airlines alliance. [32803]

Mr. Norris: No officials have been sent to Washington DC to support the proposed British Airways/American Airlines alliance. Informal contacts between the US and officials of this Department have continued since the UK broke off air services negotiations last year.

Central Railway Group

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the legal basis for his view that a debate in each House on the Central Railway Group's proposals is required to be on a motion moved by a Minister seeking the House's approval of the proposals, regardless of whether the Government support the motion. [33100]

Mr. Watts: Section 9(4) of the Transport and Works Act 1992 says that in the case of proposals which in the Secretary of State's opinion are of national significance the Secretary of State may not make an order authorising the proposals unless each House of Parliament has passed a resolution, on a motion moved by a Minister, approving them. A motion seeking such approval is the only certain way of securing a decision one way or the other in a single debate. A motion framed in other terms—for example, to take note of the proposals—would risk an inconclusive result and a need for a second debate.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which statistics his Department had discontinued (a) the collection and (b) the publication of since 1989. [32868]

Mr. Norris: The information requested is shown in the list:

Customer Charters

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list (a) the customer charters which are currently in use within his Department and its executive agencies and (b) the charters which have been withdrawn. [32826]

Mr. Norris: The central transport group of the Department of Transport has published a leaflet entitled "Serving the Public", which sets out the standards of service for answering correspondence, responding to telephone inquiries and handling complaints. The Highways Agency publishes its standards of service in the road users charter. Each of the Department's other executive agencies—DVLA, the Vehicle Inspectorate, and the Driving Standards, Coastguard, Marine Safety and Vehicle Certification Agencies—publishes its service standards in customer service guides, dedicated charter standard statements or codes of practice for its business customers.

Several of these charter documents have been revised and updated; none has been withdrawn.

Rail Freight Industry

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he (a) has had and (b) intends to have with the managing director of English, Welsh and Scottish Railway Ltd. concerning the sale by Railtrack of strategic land sites needed for the future development of the rail freight industry. [33076]

Mr. Watts: None. The arrangements for safeguarding strategic freight sites are governed by a legal agreement between Railtrack and those licensed rail freight operators either currently or formerly owned by British Rail, including English, Welsh and Scottish Railways Ltd.

Postage Costs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department spent on postage in the financial years 1995–96 and 1995–96; and how many items were posted during these periods. [32844]

Mr. Norris: My Department spent £13,262,194 in 1994–95 and £13,809,113 in 1995–96 on postage. A complete record is not kept of the number of items posted, but exceeds 61 million.

A458, Ford

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the future of the public lavatory alongside the A458 road at Ford in Shropshire; and what assessment he has made of the adequacy of public lavatory provisions on the A458 road at Ford in Shropshire. [32206]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 17 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about the future of the public lavatory alongside the A458 road at Ford in Shropshire, and what assessment he has made of the adequacy of public lavatory provisions on the A458 at Ford in Shropshire.

The funding available for trunk road routine maintenance this year has been reduced. In these circumstances the Highways Agency has examined all activities encompassed in this type of work and taken the view that it must give priority to those directly related to safety. As a result many non safety related activities including the cleaning of trunk road toilets have been reduced in frequency or stopped. This has led to closure of some trunk road toilets. Facilities where local authorities, local franchises or businesses have entered into agreements with the Agency to take over responsibility and associated costs for the day to day running are not affected.

With regard to the toilets on the A458 at Ford in Shropshire, the Highways Agency are seeking to avert closure by concluding an agreement with the owners of the "Dinkies Dinah" cafe for its day to day running. If an agreement is not concluded in the near future then the toilets are likely to be closed.

I am aware of the benefit of these facilities, but in the face of shortages, activities concerned primarily with safety must have first call on available funds.

Sea Empress Oil Spill

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much the international oil pollution compensation fund and the Sea Empress insurers have paid out to victims of the spillage engaged in (a) fishing, (b) tourism, (c) clean-up operations and (d) other. [32961]

Mr. Norris: The international oil pollution compensation fund has provided the following information on the amounts paid by the joint claims handling office by 14 June:

Tourism	54,596.75
Fishing	1,205,327.93
Clean-up	0
Other	45,188.29
Total	1,305,112.07

In addition, cheques amounting to £75,348.06 are awaiting collection by claimants.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent to date by (a) local authorities, (b) the marine pollution control unit and (c) private organisations on the Sea Empress clean-up operation. [32960]

Mr. Norris: Precise figures on local authority expenditure are not available, but it is estimated that they have incurred costs of the order of £4 million. To date, the marine pollution control unit has spent £7,372,022. Information on spending by private organisations is not held by Government.

Milford Haven Port Authority

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place copies of the annual reports of the Milford Haven port authority for (a) 1994–95, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1992–93, (d) 1991–92 and (e) 1990–91 in the Library. [32959]

Mr. Norris: I understand that the Milford Haven port authority makes its annual reports publicly available on request. I have asked the authority to send copies to the hon. Member.

College Farm

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the progress of his consideration about the future of College farm. [33288]

Mr. Norris: Specialist advisers have been appointed to look into all the options for College farm with a view to establishing the planning position for the site. They are expected to report to us by the end of July, following which we shall determine the way forward for the farm.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Cattle Exports

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cattle exported from Northern Ireland in 1995 and not certified for export for (a) breeding and (b) slaughter were (i) under and (ii) over six months of age. [31117]

Mr. Ancram: Cattle exported from Northern Ireland and not certified for (a) breeding and (b) slaughter are certified for further fattening.

In 1995, 7,587 further fattening cattle under six months of age and 78 over six months of age were exported to other member states.

Elections (Identification)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy to amend the electoral rules to permit either part of a Northern Ireland driving licence to be sufficient identification for voting purposes. [32079]

Mr. Ancram: The list is kept permanently under review, but I have no plans to alter the requirement for both parts of the driving licence to be presented. I believe it is clearer simply to request that the complete driving licence be produced.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people, by constituency, in the 30 May elections were turned away by election staff for failing to produce required identification. [32078]

Mr. Ancram: The Chief Electoral Officer for Northern Ireland does not keep a record of the number of people turned away by election staff for failing to produce required identification. The Government are confident, however, that both of the leaflets specifying the precise identity documents and the legal requirement for them which were delivered to each household in Northern Ireland in April and May will have made it unlikely that many of the electorate were unaware of the statutory requirements.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will arrange for the details of required identity documents to specify in future the need for both parts of a Northern Ireland driving licence to be produced at a polling station when used as evidence of identity. [32080]

Mr. Ancram: I am happy to take the hon. and learned Gentleman's suggestion on board. In future, the NIO information leaflets prior to elections will make it clear that both parts of the Northern Ireland driving licence are required at the polling stations. The chief electoral officer is also prepared to ensure that this clarification is included on the polling cards that he issues.

Elections (Invalid Votes)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many votes in each constituency in the 30 May elections were invalidated for lack of the official mark or perforation; what were the equivalent figures in the 1992 general election; and if he will make a statement. [32076]

Mr. Ancram: There was a 45 per cent. drop in the number of invalidated papers at the elections on 30 May as opposed to the 1992 general election. The figures are as follows:

Constituency	1992	1996
Belfast, East	Nil	36
Belfast, North	Nil	3
Belfast, South	Nil	38
Belfast, West	11	47
North Antrim	9	17

Company Directors

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have been disqualified from being directors of companies in each of the past five years. [32178]

Mr. Ancram: The following table shows the number of people disqualified from acting as directors of Northern Ireland companies:

Financial year	Number of directors disqualified
1991–92	Nil
1992–93	Nil
1993–94	Nil
1994–95	2
1995–96	24

Population Growth

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the population growth in (a) the catchment area for the Ulster hospital since its construction and (b) the town of Bangor in the same period; and what were the forecast figures. [32082]

Sir John Wheeler: The population in the catchment area of the Ulster hospital has grown from 207,000 in 1961 to 257,000 in 1991. The population of the municipal borough of Bangor in 1961 was 24,000. The population of this area has since increased to 54,000. In 1961 there were no population forecasts made at the level of geographical disaggregation requested.

Schools (Capital Expenditure)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the total capital expenditure of schools in (a) Strangford constituency and (b) Northern Ireland in each of the past five years. [32176]

Mr. Ancram: Capital expenditure by education and library boards on controlled schools and grants paid by the Department of Education on approved capital expenditure incurred by voluntary and grant-maintained integrated schools for each of the financial years 1989–90 to 1993–94 is as follows:

Year	Strangford £	Northern Ireland £
1989–90	2,015,000	38,570,000
1990–91	4,118,000	56,339,000

1993–94	1,797,000	64,962,000

Water Supply (Asbestos Cement Pipes)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library a copy of the Water Research Centre report on asbestos cement pipes for the Mourne to Belfast water supply; and what monitoring the department of the Environment intends to carry out on the Mourne scheme. [32087]

Mr. Moss: The Department has stated that the report of the water research centre on the use of asbestos cement pipes will be made publicly available when it makes a policy announcement on this topic. It expects to do this in the near future. A copy of the report will then be placed in the Library. Monitoring of the Mourne conduit will continue as is operationally appropriate. This monitoring takes account of the state of the conduit and the quality of water it delivers.

Public Inquiries

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the cost to public funds of public inquiries held by the Planning Appeals Commission in each of the past five years. [32177]

Mr. Moss: The information is not available in the form requested. The total cost of the planning appeals commission to public funds in each of the last five years is set out in vote 4 of the Department of the Environment's appropriation accounts, copies of which are available in the Library.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Assets

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what plans the Church Commissioners have to reduce the value of the assets in their care. [32601]

Mr. Alison: The Church Commissioners' assets were valued at £2.7 billion as at 31 December 1995. The commissioners' liabilities include clergy pensions, the cost of which is currently met from income. Under the arrangements being discussed within the Church of England, about half of the commissioners' assets, if the proposed pensions measure is passed, will, upon the death of the last beneficiary, be fully spent out on the payment of pensions in respect of service up to 1998. The remaining assets will continue to be used to support the commissioners' other commitments, mainly to supporting the ministry in needier dioceses, bishops and cathedral staff.

HEALTH

Local Care Services (Costs)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the relative level of costs of providing local care services in rural areas. [32490]

Mr. Bowis: A number of indicators of per capita expenditure and unit costs by individual social services departments in England for 1993–94 (the latest year for which the information is available—can be found in tables E4 and E6 of the 1995 edition, and table U1 of the 1996 edition of "Key Indicators of Local Authority Social Services", copies of which are available in the Library.

Private Patients

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private patients in NHS pay beds received treatment in each specialty in 1990–91 and each year since then. [31936]

Mr. Horam: The information available centrally relates to finished consultant episodes. The table shows the number of episodes, for each specialty, where a private patient underwent treatment during their first episode of care within a hospital spell.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of the possible new strain of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease are currently under investigation by the CJD surveillance unit at Edinburgh. [32171]

Mr. Horam: All cases of suspected Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease referred to the CJD surveillance unit are investigated. It is impossible to differentiate between new variant and other cases while they are still under investigation.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people under 42 years have died of CJD in the last five years; and of those how many had growth hormone treatment. [33181]

Mr. Horam: From 1991 to date the Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease surveillance unit in Edinburgh have confirmed 20 deaths from CJD of people aged under 42 years, of which 10 had had human growth hormone treatment.

Medicines Control Agency

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to examine the efficiency and quality of the operation of the Medicines Control Agency. [31839]

Mr. Horam: Key tasks and targets for the Medicines Control Agency, including efficiency and quality targets, are agreed each year by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and placed in the Library. Performance against these targets is monitored throughout the year and a record of the agency's performance is published in "Next Steps Review".

A review of the agency, covering its performance since it was established in 1991 and options for its future, was completed last year. A summary of the results of that review were placed in the Library.

AIDS Conference, Vancouver

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people working in community-based organisations in the United Kingdom are being sponsored to attend the eleventh international conference on AIDS in Vancouver in July. [32350]

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people living with HIV/AIDS in the United Kingdom are being sponsored to attend the eleventh international conference on AIDS in Vancouver in July 1996. [32003]

Mr. Horam: The Department is not directly sponsoring anyone from community-based organisations nor anyone living with HIV/AIDS to attend the conference.

The Department is providing £1.6 million to HIV/AIDS voluntary organisations this year and it is for them to decide if they wish to send anyone to the conference.

General Practitioners

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) general practitioners and (b) whole-time equivalent general practitioners there were in each of the last three years. [32560]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table.

	1993	1994	1995
Number of unrestricted principles	26,289	26,567	26,702
Number by contractual commitments	25,327.5	25,430.25	25,429.25

Data collected on 1 October each year for England.

Data shown for contractual commitments does not equate to whole time equivalents since general practitioners may work longer hours than those they are contracted to undertake.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the latest figures for shortages of general practitioners by (a) region, (b) health authority and (c) county. [32562]

Mr. Malone: The recent Medical Practices Committee survey confirmed that overall there are enough good applicants to enable appointments to be made and we have no information which suggests that general practitioner shortages exist.

NHS Pension Schemes

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to extend NHS pension schemes to all employees in primary care. [32564]

Mr. Malone: Opening up the national health service pension scheme to practice staff employed by general practices is under consideration.

Pensioners' Homes

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the advantages of enabling pensioners who go into permanent care to hand over their homes to their children free from charges from local authorities relating to their parents' care; and if he will make a statement. [32753]

Mr. Bowis: We recognise that elderly people want independence, choice and dignity. They do not want to be a burden on their families or the state, and many want to help their children by passing on some of their savings or other assets. The proposals in the Government's consultation paper "A New Partnership for Care in Old Age" are intended to help people make better provision for their own long-term care, so that they can both meet their own care costs and bequeath assets to their children.

London Ambulance Service

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which contracts of the London ambulance service for accident and emergency services with the health authorities in the London area will include performance requirements for activation and response that are at least equal to the national Orcon standards. [32704]

Mr. Horam: The information is not available centrally. Each health authority is responsible for ensuring that appropriate services, including accident and emergency, are provided for its residents. The hon. Member may wish to contact health authority chairmen for specific information about their contracts.

Pharmacies

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the value of high street pharmacies to the health of local communities; and if he will make a statement. [32943]

Mr. Malone: Community pharmacists have a very important role to play in a primary care led national health service. Community pharmacy's position in the high street offers a readily accessible NHS dispensing service to the community and an opportunity to provide other services which use pharmacists' professional skills for the benefit of patients.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of pharmacies in England by year since 1979. [33082]

Mr. Malone: The table shows the number of pharmacies in England by year since 1979. Figures for 1995–96 are not yet available.

Year	Number of community pharmacies in England in contract to supply NHS prescriptions
1979	8,698

1985	9,490
1986	9,741

NHS Managers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) contracts managers, (b) other contract staff, (c) public relations managers, (d) other public relations staff, (e) risk managers, (f) other risk management staff and (g) business managers work in national health service trusts; and what is the cost of employing each category of manager. [33119]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the current (a) M1 management costs, (b) M2 management costs and (c) management consultancy costs (i) in total and (ii) as a percentage of income for each NHS trust. [33120]

Mr. Malone: Individual trusts' out-turn 1994–95 M1 management costs and spending as a proportion of income were published on 5 December 1995 in "Management Costs in NHS Trusts Financial Year 1994–95" copies of which are available in the Library. Trusts' out-turn 1994–95 M2 management costs are not available centrally. Trusts will be publishing their out-turn 1995–96 M1 and M2 costs in their annual accounts later in the year.

Information on trusts' spending on management consultancy is not available centrally.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general and senior managers there were in the national health service (a) in 1989–90 and (b) at the latest available date. [32921]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 6 November 1995 at columns 624–25.

Child Abuse

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements he has made to review the safeguards against harm to children in residential care and in other placements away from home. [33435]

Mr. Dorrell: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced on 13 June, I have asked Sir William Utting, the former chief inspector of the social services inspectorate in England, to review the existing safeguards for children living away from home.

I have today written to Sir William in the following terms:

Letter to Sir William Utting from Stephen Dorrell, Secretary of State for Health

CHILDREN'S SAFEGUARDS REVIEW

The government is grateful to you for agreeing to undertake this review. I enclose a copy of the terms of reference.

The new safeguards introduced in recent years for the protection of children living away from home following the Children Act were the outcome of careful thought and consultation, and of scrutiny in Parliament. Since then, however, it has become clear from court cases and criminal justice investigations that the scale of abuse and of abuse risks was higher than generally appreciated.

An important purpose of your review is to assess whether the safeguards now in place provide so far as is possible protection against these risks as they are now recognised. We are therefore concerned that it should be thorough, and that it should cover the enforcement of the safeguards as well as their principles I know that you will make the review accessible to all those with views and ideas to put across.

There are as you know a number of areas where the Government is planning further initiatives relevant to the protection of all children and other social services users. As already announced, we shall be consulting later this summer on the ethical regulation of the social services professions. Home Office Ministers are announcing today proposals for improved arrangements for checking criminal records and new measures to prevent further crimes by convicted sex offenders after their release from prison. And we shall soon be receiving Tom Burgner's review of social services regulation. If while you are conducting your review there are any points you wish to convey to us as we take the various matters forward I and the other responsible Ministers would be very glad to know of them.

It is equally important that local authorities and all others with the responsibility for ensuring the safety of children and other vulnerable people in their care should discharge that responsibility scrupulously within the framework of safeguards as it now exists. You may find ways of improving the framework, but it is essential that while your review is in progress all concerned should enforce the existing safeguards with the necessary diligence and wariness.

STEPHEN DORRELL CHILDRENS'S SAFEGUARDS REVIEW

to review the safeguards introduced for England and Wales by the Children Act 1989 at its implementation in 1991 and the further measures since taken to protect children living away from home, with particular reference to children's residential homes, foster care and boarding schools; to assess whether these safeguards are the most effective that can realistically be designed to protect such children from abuse and other harm and whether they are being satisfactorily enforced; to make recommendations accordingly to the Secretary of State for Health and the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will institute an immediate public inquiry into the alleged abuse of children in Cheshire homes. [32920]

Mr. Bowis: Investigations are continuing and prosecutions still pending in the north west. Until these are completed no decision regarding further inquiries can be made.

Supervision Registers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, column 536, if he will break down the numbers on supervision registers by district within each region. [33099]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 14 December 1995 at column 809.

Home Help Services

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to encourage the provision of home help services by the private sector. [33052]

Mr. Bowis: Local authorities are required to include proposals for purchasing non-residential care services from the independent sector in their community care plans. We have encouraged providers in the independent sector to contribute to the consultation stage of these plans.

Residential Homes

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the United Kingdom are in residential homes in the most recent year for which figures are available in the (a) 16 to 64, (b) 65 to 74, (c) 75 to 84 and (d) 85 years and over age groups; and in each of those categories if he will list the numbers funded by (i) the local authority on a means tested basis, (ii) the individuals themselves and (iii) the Department of Social Security through preserved rights; and if he will make a statement. [33056]

Mr. Bowis: Centrally available information for England is provided in the table. Questions relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales, and for Scotland, and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

We estimate that around 25 per cent. of elderly people in residential care currently meet their own costs in full. It is not possible to obtain the number of self-funders by subtracting local authority supported residents and people with preserved rights from the number of residents, since some people receive funding from both Department of Social Security through preserved rights and a local authority.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the United Kingdom are in nursing homes in the most recent year for which figures are available in the (a) 16 to 64, (b) 65 to 74, (c) 75 to 84 and (d) 85 years and over age groups; if he will list in each of those categories the numbers funded by (i) the local authority on a means tested basis, (ii) the individuals themselves, (iii) the Department of Social Security through preserved rights and (iv) NHS contract; and if he will make a statement. [33055]

Mr. Bowis: Centrally available information for England is provided in the table. Question relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the United Kingdom were living in (a) residential homes and (b) nursing homes for the most recent year for which figures are available for (i) less than six months, (ii) between six months and a year, (iii) between one and two years, (iv) between two and three years and (v) three years and more; and if he will make a statement. [33057]

Mr. Bowis: Latest centrally available information on length of stay in residential care in England is published in table 3 of "Survey of age, sex and length of stay characteristics of residents of homes for elderly people and younger people who are physically handicapped in England at 31 March 1988", copies of which are available in the Library. Information on length of stay in nursing homes is not centrally available.

Committee on Safety of Medicines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who acts as chairman of the Committee on Safety of Medicines in the absence of Professor Rawlins. [32721]

Mr. Malone: Professor Breckenridge is the vice-chairman.

Licensing Authority

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date the Licensing Authority last met. [32744]

Mr. Malone: The Licensing Authority as constituted by section 6 of the Medicines Act 1968 does not hold formal meetings dedicated to consideration of its functions under the Act.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received from members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines relating to desogestrel and gestodene. [32719]

Mr. Malone: None.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 318, on how many occasions since 1 January 1990 Ministers have used powers conferred by section 3(2) (c) of the Medicines Act 1968 to make requests to the Medicines Commission. [32720]

Mr. Malone: Since 1990 the Medicines Commission has been asked to review the committees established under section 4 of the Medicines Act 1968, with regard to changes in their numbers, on three occasions and following the commission's advice, statutory instruments were made as follows:

The Medicines (Committee on the Review of Medicines) (Revocation) Order 1992 (No. 606)

The Medicines (Committee on Dental and Surgical Materials) (Revocation) Order 1994 (No. 3120)

The Medicines (Advisory Board on the Registration of Homeopathic Products) Order 1994 (No. 102)

GP Prescribing

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to his letter of 1 April and his answer of 4 June, Official Report, column 382, what were (a) the total prescribing costs in cash terms in each year and for each category of general practitioners and (b) the total prescribing costs in 1989–90 for first wave fundholders; [33090]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 4 June, Official Report, column 382, if he will list the net ingredient cost per prescribing unit in 1989–90 for first wave fundholders; and when he expects data on prescribing costs for 1995–96 to be available. [33088]

Mr. Malone: Data for 1990–91 are shown in the table. Information on total prescribing costs by wave of fundholders for each year for 1990–91 to 1994–95 is shown in the table. The available data for 1989–90 are not held in a form which allows analysis by wave of fundholder. Data for 1995–96, as I indicated in my earlier reply, will be available shortly.

Prescribing data for General Practitioners: Non-Fundholders and Fundholders by Fundholding wave
Financial years 1990–91—1994–95

Net ingredient cost (£ million)

Year	Non-FH	FH	Continuing Non-FH	1st wave	2nd wave	3rd wave	4th wave	5th wave
1990–91	2,267	0	1,375	150	133	251	222	137
1991–92	2,424	168	1,566	168	153	289	258	158
1992–93	2,552	350	1,757	184	165	326	290	179
1993–94	2,467	732	1,943	202	181	349	323	200
1994–95[1]	2,118	1,039	1,913	204	179	350	307	204

[1] For technical reasons, a proportion of items and their associated NIC values have been excluded from the 1994–95 data. The 1994–95 figures for NIC (£ millions) are not therefore comparable with those for earlier years. The 1994–95 figures for NIC per Prescribing Unit, items per PU and NIC per item are comparable with those for earlier years.

1. Prescribing budgets for both fundholders and non-fundholders are initially set in NIC (net ingredient cost, or basic price). Fundholders' budgets are then converted to actual cost and monitored on this basis. Actual cost is not exactly equivalent to "cash", as, for example, VAT is excluded.

2. All figures in the table are given in NIC, which is the common currency normally used to compare relative prescribing costs of fundholders and non-fundholders. To convert figures for individual waves into cash would involve substantial data manipulation and would not affect the comparison of different waves.

3. Timing differences mean that the figures do no correspond to national NIC figures published elsewhere. The table should therefore be used only to compare the prescribing of fundholder waves and non fundholders relative to each other.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to encourage financial institutions to participate in PFI projects with NHS trusts and to minimise the financial difficulties in doing so. [33028]

Mr. Horam: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health is committed to the private finance initiative in the national health service. The PFI offers investment opportunities to the private sector, while enabling NHS bodies to obtain best value for money for the taxpayer when developing capital schemes. Fifty-seven PFI projects—including four major district general hospitals—with a capital value of more than £500 million have been approved since the PFI was launched in November 1992. A further 40 schemes with a total capital value of about £1.5 billion are testing private finance options as part of the procurement process.

Officials in the Department of Health's private finance unit meet with financial institutions regularly to smooth the PFI process. Where potential difficulties have arisen action has been taken promptly. For example, the National Health Service (Residual Liabilities) Act 1996 which was passed in May this year and is now in force, makes it clear to financial institutions that, should an NHS trust be dissolved, whether as a result of financial difficulties or for any other reason, its liabilities will be transferred to the Secretary of State or to some other NHS body. Also, a potential difficulty with the availability of VAT refunds in NHS PFI projects was addressed recently by a new Treasury direction which came into force on 26 April.

Vacant Doctor Posts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 14 May, Official Report, column 418, on vacant doctor posts when the information will be available. [33121]

Mr. Malone: Information for 1995 should be available in the autumn.

Rochdale Health Care Trust

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure that future developments by the Rochdale health care NHS trust will be safeguarded following the local health authority's review of health services; and if he will make a statement. [33175]

Mr. Horam: This is a matter for Bury and Rochdale health authority. The hon. Member may wish to approach Mr. Alan Maden, Chairman, for more information.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for health what is the stage reached for the planned private finance initiatives for each of the proposed new hospitals in (a) Norfolk and Norwich, (b) Amersham, (c) Carlisle, (d) Swindon, (e) North Durham, (f) Bishop Auckland, (g) the Royal London hospital and (h) St. Thomas's hospital. [31876]

Mr. Horam [pursuant to his reply, 7 June 1996, column 587]: I regret that my previous answer was incorrect. It should have read as follows:

"Full business cases for Norfolk and Norwich, Amersham, and Swindon have all been approved. Outline business cases for the remaining schemes have been approved. At Carlisle, North Durham and Bishop Auckland the Trusts concerned have identified preferred bidders and are preparing full business cases. At the Royal London hospital and St. Thomas' hospital, the trusts concerned have prepared shortlists, from which they will identify their preferred bidder".

Health Authorities (Guidance)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is provided by his Department to health authorities in respect of reorganising health services in a manner which entails the serious reduction of health service provision in one area within a health authority so as to increase health services in another area within the health authority. [33174]

Mr. Horam: Departmental guidance makes clear that health authorities are responsible for assessing the health needs of their population and purchasing services to meet those needs, and the consultation requirements where this involves a substantial variation in services. Copies of relevant guidance are in the Library.

Medical Locums

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 14 May, Official Report, column 419, when the information on medical locums will be available. [33126]

Mr. Malone: The data from the census of hospital and community health service medical and dental staff in post at 30 September 1995 should be available in the autumn.

Trust Mergers

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what powers are available to health authorities to merge trusts. [33176]

Mr. Horam: None.

Trusts and Health Authorities (Debts)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 21 May, Official Report, column 93, if he will analyse the last set of annual returns from each area and health authority to show the level of total debt (a) in financial terms and (b) as a percentage of income. [33098]

Mr. Horam: The information will be placed in the Library.

New Hospitals (PFI)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many bids for the proposed private finance initiatives have been received for the proposed new hospitals in (a) Norfolk and Norwich, (b) Amersham, (c) Carlisle, (d) Swindon, (e) north Durham, (f) Bishop Auckland, (g) the Royal London hospital and (h) St. Thomas's hospital. [31881]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 7 June 1996]: Under EC directives and public procurement regulations, national health service trusts must publish a series of advertisements and notices in the supplement to the Official Journal of the European Community for all potential contracts exceeding specified thresholds. All the schemes referred to in the question exceeded the threshold. Trusts pre-qualify a smaller number of potential partners from the list of initial responses to the OEJC advert and issue an invitation to negotiate document to the pre-qualified consortia. Trusts draw up a shortlist of the most promising potential partners following rigorous evaluation of the responses and negotiation from which the best obtainable solution involving private finance is eventually identified. The numbers of bidders involved at the various stages of the process for the trusts referred to in the question are as follows:

	Responses to OEJC	Pre-qualification	Shortlisted	Bidders remaining
Norfolk and Norwich Health Care NHS Trust	31	8	3	1
South Buckinghamshire NHS Trust (Amersham)	38	12	4	1
Carlisle Hospitals NHS Trust	15	8	3	1
Swindon and Marlborough NHS Trust (Swindon)	42	6	5	1
North Durham Acute Hospitals NHS Trust (North Durham)	13	10	5	1
Bishop Auckland Hospitals NHS Trust	16	11	4	1
Royal Hospitals NHS Trust (Royal London Hospital)	18	3	3	2
Guy's and St. Thomas' NHS Trust (St. Thomas' Hospital)	8	3	2	2

DEFENCE

Bourlon Barracks, Catterick

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the advice obtained by his Department about the specifications for (a) the support rails for the crane, (b) the motor for the crane, (c) the local exhaust ventilation system, (d) the doors and (e) the space allocated for storage and specialist trades for the LAD building (No. 36) at Bourlon barracks, Catterick. [31613]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is as follows:

(a) My Department provided the crane specification and, as the contract included both the "design and build", it was the contractor's responsibility to install appropriate support rails.

(b) The statement of requirement provided by my Department in January 1993 included a requirement for exhaust extraction. The specification for the local exhaust ventilation system was developed by the design team, on advice from GKN Defence the makers of Warrior. A general extraction system was also included in the specification.

(c) The specification for the doors was written by the design team.

(d) The specification for the space allocated for storage and specialist trades were also included in the statement of requirement, and followed JSP 315 Scales 27(4) and 45.

Chemical Weapons (Devon)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what monitoring has been carried on since 1966 in respect of the safety for its current use of the site used as a chemical weapons training and trials facility at South Molton, north Devon, during the second world war; what action has been taken following such monitoring; and if he will make a statement. [31768]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department has no record of any monitoring having been carried out at the South Molton site. The land in question is no longer part of the defence estate and prior to its return to civilian use any identified contamination relating to its former use involving chemical weapons activities would have been removed. Should the MOD have been alerted to any such contamination being revealed subsequently, we would have taken the measures necessary to remedy the problem. In the case of South Molton we have no record of any such incident.

Military Attachés

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries in which Her Majesty's Government have a military attaché. [32915]

Missiles

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to make an announcement concerning the contract for a conventionally armed stand-off missile; how many missiles are to be purchased; and what criteria he will use in making his decision. [32652]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 13 June 1996]: I hope to be in a position to announce the successful bid for the conventionally armed stand off missile competition shortly. The quantity of missiles being procured is classified information and cannot be released. Many factors have been considered during our assessment, including industrial factors the total cost to public funds, operational effectiveness, and such technical aspects as performance, reliability and compatibility with our delivery aircraft.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the sites (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in British territories abroad where chemical weapons have been manufactured or stored since 1966; and if he will places in the Library a copy of the declarations made to date under the chemical weapons convention; [33066]

(2) if he will list the sites on which chemical weapons have been manufactured or stored since 1966 to which Crown immunity applies. [33079]

Mr. Soames: The United Kingdom relinquished its offensive chemical weapons capability in the mid-1950s and no chemical weapons have been manufactured since that time in either the United Kingdom or dependent territories. Stocks of chemical weapons held were destroyed and storage sites decommissioned prior to 1966.

Any items of chemical ordnance subsequently discovered at sites in the UK where such weapons were formerly stored or trailed, are made safe and transferred to PLSD Porton Down for temporary storage prior to destruction. Porton Down is the only site at which these items have been stored since 1966.

The chemical weapons convention requires states parties to make declarations of their chemical weapon activities since 1946. Declarations are to be made within 30 days of entry into force of the convention which is likely to occur early in 1997. No UK declaration has yet been made.

The Chemical Weapons Act 1996 implements the CWC in the United Kingdom. The Act will be commenced before the convention enters into force. The Act expressly binds the Crown subject to certain qualifications.

Computer Hackers

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in each of the last five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in each of the services; and if he will make a statement. [32459]

Mr. Soames: As a result of the robust security policy on connectivity to public data networks such as the Internet, enforced throughout my Department, there is no evidence of any incursion, from an external source, to any departmental information technology system.

Records of unauthorised incursions by departmental staff have been maintained centrally only for the past 18 months. None of the four recorded instances has had any operational impact and appropriate disciplinary measures were taken in each case.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which areas of his Department's property are being used to (a) store and (b) dispose of cattle as part of the Government's BSE eradication programme; how much his Department is receiving for the use of this property; how many cattle have been destroyed on his Department's property; when this practice first began; and if he will make a statement. [32695]

Mr. Soames: RAF Quedgeley is being used for the storage of rendered meat and bone meal as part of the BSE eradication programme. Use of this site started on 20 May 1996. However, deliveries have now ceased. In accordance with our normal policy, the rental paid for use of this site is commercially confidential. No cattle have been or will be stored, disposed of or destroyed on my Department's property as part of the BSE eradication programme.

Boards of Inquiry

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 April, Official Report, column 462, when the board of inquiry system was instituted; and if boards of inquiry are automatically set up after an accident or suspected accident involving British-controlled nuclear weapons. [32760]

Mr. Soames: The authority to convene naval boards of inquiry is exercised under the royal prerogative; there are no statutory rules requiring or relating to them. Records of naval boards of inquiry go back at least as far as the 18th century. The Army Act of 1881 made provision for courts of inquiry to be set up. These were adopted and adapted by the Royal Air Force when it was formed in 1918.

The rules and regulations relating to service boards of inquiry lay down a number of circumstances in which they must be convened: these do not specifically indicate nuclear weapon-related matters, although they are not necessarily excluded.

Any accident or suspected accident involving British-controlled nuclear weapons is investigated, but the appropriate form of inquiry is decided upon in the light of the particular circumstances.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who has been responsible for compiling and updating the central record of accidents and suspected accidents involving (a) British-controlled nuclear weapons and (b) United States-controlled nuclear weapons within British territory since 1966. [32762]

Mr. Soames: Such information is held on a central database maintained by the staff of the nuclear weapon safety adviser.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the nuclear weapons safety committee was set up; how many people are on the committee; and how many of members are drawn from outside his Department. [32761]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Nuclear Weapons Safety Committee was established in 1959. It comprises 12 Members, including the chairman. All are drawn from outside my Department but currently include four who have served previously in it. They are assisted by officials from my Department and other Government Departments who also attend meetings of the committee as and when necessary.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who is responsible for compiling reports on accidents and suspected accidents involving (a) British-controlled and (b) United States-controlled nuclear weapons on British territory; if the nuclear weapons safety committee receives the reports; and if reports are compiled on each accident and suspected accident. [32764]

Mr. Soames: There are established procedures for reporting any unplanned occurrence involving a nuclear weapon on British territory which has resulted in actual or potential hazard to life or property or which may have impaired nuclear safety. Responsibility for compiling an immediate report would rest with the unit which has custody of the weapon. The Nuclear Weapons Safety Committee would of course be advised of any such incidents.

Departmental Function

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will name the persons who were admitted to his office on 5 June to attend a function held during the beating of the retreat ceremony by the Household cavalry. [33054]

Mr. Portillo: It is not my practice to give such information.

WALES

Inward Investment

15. Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many jobs he estimates were (a) created and (b) safeguarded by inward investment in Wales in the year to 31 March. [31661]

Mr. Hague: Inward investment recorded for Wales last year promises the creation of 6,800 new jobs and the safeguarding of 5,848 existing jobs, an increase of almost 40 per cent. on the previous year's total.

19. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new inward investments have recently come to south Wales. [31665]

Mr. Hague: Welcome announcements and openings have recently been made, including Ford's £300 million expansion at Bridgend; Newport Wafer-Fab's £230 million expansion near Newport; Halla's £17 million investment at Pentrebach; STS's £5 million expansion at Imperial Park; Ringtel's project at Cwmbran; the Showa Corporation's new investment at Aberaman Park in the Cynon Valley; and General Electric's £27 million expansion at Nantgarw. These projects alone account for almost 5,000 new and safeguarded jobs.

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made in encouraging inward investment from Taiwan. [31666]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend has recently announced the official opening of an important Taiwanese manufacturing investment—Ringtel Electronics at Cwmbran. Taiwan is a very promising market and we are confident that this important investment will be followed by others.

RAF Valley

16. Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on resources for training at RAF Valley related to the contractorisation programme. [31662]

In addition, new planning guidance for Wales has been published, setting out the planning framework which we expect will underpin the protection of the built heritage. Both documents are available in the Library of the House.

[31542]

Mr. Hague: During the last 12 months my Department has held development training for senior women and a series of seminars on specific equal opportunities topics for all senior officers. This training is open to staff in the executive agency Cadw.

My Department has been a member of Opportunity 2000 since 1992 and actively supports its aims.

[32765]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is not collected centrally.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has for the reorganisation of ambulance trusts in Wales; what public access there is to the plans; what are the main proposals; and if he will make a statement. [32766]

Mr. Hague: None. I would expect any proposals for trust reconfigurations to come from the boards themselves with the full support of their commissioning authorities. If such proposals are received, the application document would be subject to public consultation and a copy placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to amalgamate ambulance services in Powys with Powys NHS Healthcare trust; and if he will make a statement. [32767]

Mr. Hague: None. These are operational matters for the NHS.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to close ambulance stations in powys; and if he will make a statement. [32768]

Mr. Hague: None. This is an operational matter for the South and East Wales Ambulance NHS trust.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on proposals to reduce operational manning levels by the South and East Wales Ambulance trust. [32769]

Mr. Hague: All NHS trusts in Wales publish their annual report and accounts in September each year. My officials have had a number of discussions with the chairman about the work he is doing to put the trust on a firm financial footing. The trust will continue to provide monthly financial progress reports to the Department as part of the regular monitoring process.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total amount spent on consultancy fees by the South and East Wales Ambulance trust for the last two financial years for which figures are available. [32771]

Mr. Hague: Expenditure by the trust on external contract staffing and consultancy services is shown in its audited accounts for the following years as:

1993–94: £ Nil

1994–95: £123,000

The audited accounts for 1995–96 are not yet available.

Robert Powell (Medical Treatment)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 470, if he will place in the Library a copy of the report of the inquiry into the keeping of the general practitioner records pertaining to the appeal concerning the medical treatment of Robert Powell; and what plans he has to make changes to the rules governing the holding of general practitioner records which are the subject of official action under NHS procedures. [33091]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to my letter of 10 June, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 470, what representations he has received from the family of the late Robert Powell or their legal representatives concerning ministerial meetings with the general practitioners of the late Robert Powell. [33089]

Mr. Hague: I have received a letter from Mr. Powell's solicitors which raises the issue. During his time as a Welsh Office Minister, my hon. Friend the Member for Clwyd, North-West (Mr. Richards) was not involved with the case because he was acquainted with some of the individuals concerned.

Health Services (Market Testing)

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with chairmen of health commissions in Wales about market testing of services. [31658]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: None. NHS trusts are required to market test catering, laundry and domestic services, and are expected to look at other services which would benefit from market testing, which is a proven and successful tool for achieving high quality and flexible services, and for obtaining better value for money.

SCOTLAND

Women (Promotion)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures his Department has implemented during the last 12 months to encourage the promotion of women into senior positions with his Department and its executive agencies; and what progress his Department has made in encouraging the promotion of women over the last five years. [31540]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My Department continues to support policies which enable and assist women to reach senior positions. Flexible working patterns and family-friendly policies are well established and women in particular find this facility helpful in enabling them to further their careers.

The proportion of women is increasing at all management levels. In 1992, the earliest for which these data are available, there were 81.5 women in a total of 627.5 staff in grades 1 to 7 in the Scottish Office and its executive agencies. By 1996, a comparable figure was 102.3 women in a total of staff of 569.4.

Water Authorities

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent in the last year for which figures are available on the remuneration of the members of the (a) West of Scotland Water Authority, (b) East of Scotland water authority and (c) the North of Scotland water authority. [32475]

Mr. Kynoch: The information is set out in the table and relates to remuneration paid to members by the authorities from their establishment on 17 July 1995 up to the end of March 1996.

West of Scotland water authority
Chairman	26,807
Chief executive	53,561
Other members (each)	4,021
East of Scotland water authority
Chairman	16,968
Chief executive	53,333
Counsellor Ann Dickson	2,984
Other members (each)	4,242
North of Scotland water authority
Chairman	28,413
Chief executive	46,667
Other members (each)	4,242

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which members of Scotland's water authorities have declared interests under schedule 7 to the Local Government Act 1994 at meetings of these bodies. [32428]

Mr. Kynoch: There have been no such declarations to date.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what legal obligations exist on Scotland's water authorities in relation to the fluoridation of public water supplies. [32408]

Mr. Kynoch: The Water (Fluoridation) Act 1985, as amended, provides that water authorities may, on receipt of an application from a health authority, increase the fluoride content of the water which they supply within the area of that health authority.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will arrange for copies of the declarations of interests of the members of Scotland's water authorities to be placed in the Library. [32429]

Mr. Kynoch: A note of the declarations made by the members of each water authority will be placed in the Library at the same time as the authorities' annual reports.

Bible John Case

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when Strathclyde police will report their investigations into the Bible John case. [33124]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate informs me that Strathclude police have continued to keep the regional procurator fiscal at Glasgow informed of progress with their investigations. Forensic tests have been carried out on their behalf by expert scientists at Cambridge university and a full report by the scientists to Strathclyde police is awaited shortly. Very soon thereafter, a comprehensive police report, including the results of the forensic scientific tests, will be submitted to the regional procurator fiscal, who in turn will report to Crown counsel for instructions.

Marine Mammals (Bycatchers)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the estimated harbour porpoise population in the Celtic sea area is represented by the bycatch level recorded in the United Kingdom and Irish large mesh monofilament gillnet fisheries in this area in 1992 to 1994; and what percentage bycatch of harbour porpoise populations was adopted in 1995 by the scientific committee of the International Whaling Commission as being a reasonable threshold for concern about the sustainability of catches. [31772]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 7 June 1996]: Based on available data on gillnet bycatches, the estimates are 6 per cent. and 1 per cent. respectively. The scientific committee of the IWC is currently considering criteria for assessing the status of the harbour porpoise population.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what commitments to harbour porpoise conservation the Government made in their response to the biodiversity action plan; and what is his Department's policy towards its provisions on fisheries bycatch. [31778]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 7 June 1996]: The Government endorse the main proposals in the biodiversity action plan steering group report as a basis for follow-up action by country groups for England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland. These groups will be responsible for implementing individual action plans, including that for the harbour porpoise, and a UK group will co-ordinate this process. The Scottish Office is committed to fulfilling its obligations for harbour porpoise conservation.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many harbour porpoises were killed annually in large mesh monofilament gillnet fisheries (a) in United Kingdom and Irish gillnets in the Celtic sea observed during 1992 to 1994 and (b) in Danish gillnets in the North sea during 1993. [31769]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 7 June 1996]: The estimated number caught in these gillnet fisheries are 2,237 and 7,000 respectively.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many marine mammals were recorded as bycaught under the national voluntary reporting scheme in each of the last five years (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in Scotland; and if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of this scheme. [31779]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 7 June 1996]: Under this scheme, three common dolphins and three common seals were recorded as bycaught in 1992 and 1993 by UK fishing vessels. No bycatches have been reported in Scottish waters under these voluntary arrangements. Research is under way to determine the extent of cetacean bycatch in the bottom-set gillnet fishery in the North sea.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bull Semen

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the countries outside the European Union which ban the importation from the UK of bull semen; and what steps have been taken in each case to persuade those countries to lift the ban. [31617]

Mrs. Browning: The following countries are known to have banned the importation of bull semen from the UK prior to the introduction of the EC ban:

Argentina
Australia
Bulgaria
China
Costa Rica
Iran
Jamaica
Japan
Kenya
Mexico
Paraguay
United Arab Emirates
Uruguay

In addition, the former USSR had imposed a ban. Lithuania and the Ukraine have effectively carried this forward by requiring five-year country freedom from BSE as a condition of import.

The health conditions for the importation of bull semen into third countries from the United Kingdom are determined by the countries concerned. Prior to the introduction of the EC ban, the Department was conducting negotiations with those countries for which we had trade interest.

Now that the EC ban—as it affects semen exports—has been lifted, the Department is writing to the veterinary authorities of those third countries to which UK businesses have expressed a wish to resume exports of bull semen.

Share Fishermen

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what additional payments (a) exist and (b) are planned for supplementary decommissioning awards with compensation for share fishermen who took their jobs when their vessels were laid up. [32535]

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 4 June 1996, Official Report, column 437.

Seeds

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those species of tomato the buying and selling of whose seeds is permitted. [32272]

Mr. Boswell: Sale of seed of all species of tomato is permitted in the United Kingdom. However, sale of seed of varieties of tomato species Lycopersicon lycopersicum (L.) Karsten is controlled by the Seeds (National Lists of Varieties) Regulations 1982, as amended. The effect of the regulations, which implement EC directives, is that seed of varieties of this particular tomato species may be marketed only if they are on a national list of varieties of vegetable species or the EC "Common Catalogue of Vegetable Varieties."

There are currently 50 varieties of this tomato species on the UK national list and some 1,500 on the EC common catalogue.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) for what reasons the Butcher's disease-resisting cucumber is omitted from the list of species which are allowed to be commercially bought or sold as seeds; and if he will make a statement; [32276]

(2) for what reasons the Brown Bath Cos lettuce is omitted from the list of species which are allowed to be commercially bought or sold as seeds; and if he will make a statement. [32275]

Mr. Boswell: The Seeds (National Lists of Varieties) Regulations 1982, as amended, which implement EC directives, require a variety on the UK national list or EC common catalogue to have a "maintainer", responsible for maintaining it true to its original description. "Butchers disease-resisting" cucumber and "Brown Bath Cos" lettuce were deleted from the UK national list in July 1986 and April 1979, respectively, because no one could be found to maintain them.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons John's Purple carrot is omitted from the list of species which are allowed to be commercially bought or sold as seeds; and if he will make a statement. [32277]

Mr. Boswell: There is no record of a carrot variety "John's purple" being entered as a candidate for the UK national list under this name.

Organic Farming

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 505, on agricultural systems, if the comparative study his Department is considering of organic farming against conventional farming will include (a) the internalisation of agriculturally derived pollution clear-up and water treatment, (b) energy use, (c) soil erosion, (d) the internalisation of wildlife loss, (e) the impact of the BSE situation and (f) the job creation potential of each system; and if he will make a statement. [32476]

Mr. Boswell: Our general aim is to explore over time the relative environmental impact of organic and conventional farming. Because of the complexity of the issues raised, the work we have in mind at this stage is necessarily of a preliminary nature. We need to assess the available methods for comparing farm systems and valuing the differences, so that we have a reliable basis on which to take forward in-depth research. Our current plan is therefore to commission two short-term desk studies on these technical aspects. We will then consider the options for further, substantive work in the light of these initial studies.

Animal Feedstuffs

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the cattle feed manufacturers who (a) now specify the full ingredients of their feeds on packaging and (b) do not do so, identifying those manufacturers who have additionally included the (i) estimated and (ii) actual amount of each ingredient; and if he will make a statement. [32271]

Mrs. Browning: The precise information is not available. The Government, however, welcome the recent announcement by the trade organisation that most compounders are to switch to full ingredient listing for most compound feeds at the earliest opportunity. It is estimated that this change will result in some 85 per cent. of compound feed sales being subject to full ingredient listing.

Land Management

Mrs. Ann Campbell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to encourage farmers, conservationists and local authorities to work together on land management. [32425]

Mr. Boswell: The Ministry has recently established new consultation arrangements to bring together key farming, conservation and local authority interests to work with us in developing our programme of agri-environment schemes. These include the National Agri-Environment Forum, the first meeting of which I chaired in March, which includes representatives from around 25 major national bodies. We have also established regional agri-environment consultation groups in each of the nine MAFF regions. These groups bring together local farming, conservation and Government bodies to ensure that schemes are responsive to local and regional needs.

Beef Exports

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what tonnages of British beef were exported to each European Union member country in 1994. [32902]

Mrs. Browning: Provisional data on exports of beef from the United Kingdom in 1994, as recorded in the overseas trade statistics, are as follows. Beef originating from the United Kingdom is not separately identifiable.

	Tonnes
France	102,030
Belgium-Luxembourg	3,960
Netherlands	25,135
Germany	2,739
Italy	21,103
Irish Republic	22,893
Denmark	2,788
Greece	1,025
Portugal	1,155
Spain	8,421
Sweden[1]	1,176
Finland[1]	31
Austria	nil
Total	192,456

[1] Countries joining EC in 1995.

Decommissioned Fishing Vessels

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the fishing vessels (a) Pict and (b) Sir Fred Parkes were decommissioned; how much was paid by his Department for each; to what (i) company and (ii) liquidator; and who owned the vessels at the time they were decommissioned. [32901]

Mr. Baldry: The fishing vessel Pict was decommissioned on 8 August 1986. A total of £728,000 was paid to Hellyer Bros. Ltd. who owned the vessel when it was decommissioned.

The fishing vessel Sir Fred Parkes was decommissioned on 11 March 1985. £620,000 was paid to Putford Enterprises Ltd. who owned the vessel when it was decommissioned.

Institute of Animal Health

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the future of the Institute for Animal Health at Compton. [32036]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

As I announced on 22 February 1996, the Institute for Animal Health is currently undergoing a prior options review, alongside reviews of other research establishments which carry out research in similar or related fields. I await the outcome of these reviews, which are due to be completed by end-July 1996.

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the policy of the United Kingdom Government on safeguarding the welfare of animals being exported to third countries. [32327]

Mrs. Browning: We have a long standing policy of permitting the export of food animals only to those countries with standards at least equivalent to those in force within the European Union on the protection of animals during transport and at slaughter.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what response he has received from the Dutch Government in respect of transportation of sheep from the Netherlands on 12 to 16 August 1995 and 5 to 7 September 1995; if he will (a) list and (b) make available the representations he has received on this subject; and what action the Dutch Government have reported to him that they have taken. [32098]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 June 1996]: The details are still under consideration in the Netherlands. We receive many representations about the transport of animals, but records are not kept separately on the number in every category.

Disabled People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action is being taken to address the problem of discrimination against disabled people in agriculture where the employer is not covered by the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. [32267]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 13 June 1996]: Employers, including agricultural employers, who employ fewer than 20 employees are not covered by the employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. Such employers will be encouraged to follow the guidance in the employment code of practice. My noble Friend the Minister of State, Department for Education and Employment will be deciding when and how to promote this in due course.

Beef Industry

Mr. French: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has received Coopers and Lybrand's second report on the United Kingdom beef industry; and if he will make a statement. [33237]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am placing in the Library copies of Coopers and Lybrand's second report on the United Kingdom beef industry. The report examines the problem of unsaleable stocks in the beef chain against the background of my statement on 16 April, Official Report column 515, when I said that the Government did not consider that financial assistance equivalent to that being made available to the slaughtering and cutting sectors should be paid to other sectors.

Coopers and Lybrand notes that many parts of the UK beef industry are entering a period in which realignment and downsizing will take place, but state that they could not suggest any public interest argument to justify Government financial intervention at this stage.

As foreshadowed in my statement of 16 April, the Government will introduce a scheme to support the disposal and, where necessary, the storage of unsaleable beef and beef products held in the supply chain outside the slaughtering sector. This aims to help rebuild market confidence and ensure that appropriate disposal methods are used in the interests of the environment and public health. My Department will shortly issue a consultation document asking for expressions of interest in the scheme. It will be entirely voluntary and no payments will be made to companies for ownership of the stocks.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 18 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the present plans for the refurbishment of A and B wings at Wandsworth prison.

The Prison Service is considering three options for the refurbishment of A and B wings at Wandsworth prison which are not used at present. They are:

(i) comprehensive refurbishment at an estimated cost of £14m;

(ii) refurbishment and the installation of sanitation at an estimated cost of £11m;

(iii) installation of basic sanitation at an estimated cost of £6m.

The start date for whichever option is chosen will depend on capital availability. Our aim is to start the work as soon as possible, given the general pressure on space in the prison system.

Prison Places

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average cost of a place in each prison for the financial year 1995–96. [32353]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. George Howarth, dated 18 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the average cost of a place in each prison for the financial year 1995–96.

These figures are not yet available. They will be sent to you as soon as they are ready.

Firearms Acts (Home Office Circulars)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library an index of all Home Office circulars since 1967 relevant to the administration of the Firearms Acts 1968, 1992 and 1994, giving the number of circular, dated of issue and title. [32870]

Mr. Maclean: I have today placed an index of such circulars in the Library as requested.

Domestic Violence

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when is the next scheduled meeting of the ministerial group on domestic violence. [32697]

Mr. Maclean: I expect the group to meet again soon, once a range of work that has already been commissioned for it has been completed.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons it is not possible for his Department to identify separately offences of domestic violence within the regular recorded crimes series collected centrally by the Home Office; and what plans he has to collate such statistics. [32698]

Mr. Maclean: There is currently no specific legislation which defines offences of "domestic violence" and therefore such incidents cannot be separately identified in the recorded crime data collection.

"Domestic violence" incidents could be recorded within one of several recorded crime classifications, that is public order offences, assault occasioning actual bodily harm, wounding or inflicting grievous bodily harm, indecent assault, rape or attempted rape, threats to kill, attempted murder homicide.

In terms of the recorded crime series, police forces are required to supply information by offence type rather than by victim and no data on the relationship of victim and suspect are routinely collected.

The ministerial group on domestic violence is currently considering ways of improving the statistical knowledge of the nature and extent of domestic violence.

Shotguns

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many semi-automatic and pump action shotguns have been certified as shotguns after being modified from section 1 firearms classification under the terms of the Firearms Act 1988 in each year since the Act came into operation. [32882]

Mr. Maclean: Since the provisions of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988 came into force, I understand that the proof houses at London and Birmingham have certified a total of 61,169 shotguns as modified in this manner. An annual breakdown of this figure is available only at disproportionate costs.

Crime Statistics (West Midlands)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the clear-up rate of (a) threats or conspiracies to murder, (b) rape, (c) attempted rape, (d) attempted murders and (e) woundings with intent in the west midlands for each year since 1990; and he will express the figures as a percentage change from 1990. [32878]

Mr. Maclean: The available information is given in the tables. The clear-up rate for offences of attempted rape is included within the clear-up rate for the substantive offence and is not separately identifiable.

[32880]

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) the customer charters which are currently in use within his Department and its executive agencies and (b) the charters which have been withdrawn. [32838]

Mr. Howard: The UK Passport Agency, the Fire Service College and the Prison Service all have charter standard statements. I have today published a new charter for victims of crime, superseding the charter issued in 1990. No charters, or charter standard statements, have been withdrawn.

Prisons

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the Coopers and Lybrand report into the comparative costs of publicly and privately run prisons. [33086]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Secure Establishments (Young People)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the present number of secure establishments for young people in England and Wales in which a person can be held while awaiting trial or sentence; and where these establishments are sited. [32877]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Justice and Home Affairs Council held on 4 June. [33615]

Mr. Howard: I represented the United Kingdom at the Council in Luxembourg. In accordance with the policy outlined in my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's statement to the House on 21 May, Official Report, columns 99–101, I was unable to agree to any decisions requiring unanimity in the Council other than those which were purely formal or procedural.

Eleven agenda items, listed in the table, were blocked as a result of the Government's policy of non-co-operation in the European Union. However, I participated fully in negotiations on the substantive issues covered by the agenda. The main matters dealt with at the Council were as follows.

The presidency reported progress in negotiations on the draft external frontiers convention and noted that two major political problems—a role for the European Court of Justice and territorial application of the convention—were outstanding.

The Council examined the three draft directives proposed by the Commission for abolishing frontier controls and giving third country nationals a right to travel in member states, known as the "Monti Package". In addition to the United Kingdom's reserve of substance on these proposals, a number of issues of concern to other member states remain to be settled. The presidency undertook to consider whether negotiation on these instruments should be primarily a matter for the Internal Market Council or the Justice and Home Affairs Council.

The Council agreed that officials should continue work on developing Eurodac, a project to establish a database of asylum seekers' fingerprints.

The Council considered a compromise proposal for conferring on the European Court of Justice optional jurisdiction to interpret the Europol convention. The presidency concluded that this matter would be studied again at the European Council in Florence.

The Council approved a report on the implementation of the Europol drugs unit budget in 1995, and deferred a decision on the development of a computer system for Europol.

The Council considered the question of participation by the European Union in the International Law Enforcement academy in Budapest (ILEA), which is managed jointly by Hungary and the USA. The presidency concluded that, in the light of opposition by France to European Union involvement in the academy, this matter required further thought.

The Council noted progress in the structured dialogue with the central and eastern European states, and a report outlining continuing action by the European Union against drugs in Latin America and the Caribbean.

The Council discussed a number of outstanding issues arising from negotiations on the draft Convention on improved extradition procedures, and concluded that further work was required on these points by officials.

The Council discussed the question of jurisdiction for the European Court of Justice in the draft convention on corruption, and noted progress in drafting a second protocol to the convention on the protection of the Communities' financial interests.

The presidency invited member states' views on the main issues of principle remaining to be settled in relation to the draft convention on service of documents in civil and commercial matters, and referred the text for further work by officials.

Measures blocked by the United Kingdom at the Justice and Home Affairs Council, 4 June 1996

Recommendation on trafficking in works of art.

Recommendation on fight against counterfeiting.

Joint position on pre-frontier missions of assistance and information.

Joint action on liaison officers.

Decision on measures implementing Article K.1 of the Treaty on European Union.

Work programme for the Europol Drugs Unit, July-December 1996.

Budget of the Europol Drugs Unit for 1997.

Recommendation on combating illegal employment of third country nationals.

Joint action establishing the Directory of counter-terrorist competences.

Resolution laying down the priorities for co-operation in the field of justice and home affairs for the period from 1 July 1996 to 30 June 1998.

Joint position on the Hague Convention on the protection of minors.

Anti-terrorist Legislation

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive the conclusions of Lord Lloyd's review of anti-terrorist legislation. [32923]

Mr. Howard: I understand that Lord Lloyd expects to submit his report by the autumn.

CJD and BSE Research

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what Home Office approval of licensing arrangements exist in the case of testing (1) of milk for the purposes of Crentzfeldt-Jakob disease or bovine spongiform encephalopathy research; [32924]

(2) of urine for the purposes of CJD or BSE research. [32925]

Mr. Sackville: Any testing which might cause harm or suffering to animals, including the inoculation of tissues and fluids into laboratory animals, would need authorisation under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will issue guidelines to electoral registration officers encouraging the registration of those with no fixed abode at an accommodation address in circumstances where the requirements of permanence and the qualifying date for registration are met; and if he will make a statement. [32968]

Mr. Sackville: No; accommodation addresses are not permitted under current legislation.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken concerning electoral registration arrangements for homeless persons following the decision in the case of Lippiatt v. the Electoral Registration Officer, Penwith district council. [32969]

Mr. Sackville: We aim to issue guidance in time for this year's electoral registration canvass.

Sentences

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the relative cost of custodial and non-custodial sentences for similar offences; and if he will make a statement. [33128]

Mr. Maclean: The target annual unit costs for 1996–97 for the principal disposals available to the courts are:

Prison place: £24,388

Probation order: £2,510

Community service order: £1,840

The decision whether to impose a custodial or non-custodial sentence is a matter for the courts, within the statutory limits taking into account all the circumstances of the offence and the offender. It is not determined by the costs of these disposals.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has evaluated which identifies a relationship between marginal increases in the prison population and marginal decreases in crime rates; and if he will make a statement. [33129]

Mr. Maclean: The Home Office research and statistics directorate continuously monitors research in this area. Its most recent evaluation of such research is contained within "Analysing Offending: Data. Models and Interpretations" by Roger Tarling (HMSO. 1993).

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has published to encourage judges to give shorter average sentences; and if he will make a statement. [33184]

Mr. Maclean: The Government have no plans to encourage judges to pass sentences which would mean offenders spending less time in prison. The proposals for mandatory minimum sentences for persistent burglars and drug dealers set out in the White Paper "Protecting the Public" would mean many offenders receiving significantly longer sentences than they do at present.

Prison Population Statistics

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of the prison population for (a) the last date for which figures are available, (b) five years before that date, (c) 10 years before that date, (d) 15 years before that date and (e) 20 years before that date, by those imprisoned for (i) non-violent property crime, (ii) violent property crime, (iii) violent crimes against the person, excluding murder and manslaughter, (iv) murder and manslaughter, (v) illegal drug possession, (vi) illegal drug trafficking and (vii) other offences; what percentage of each were men under the age of 25 years; and if he will make a statement. [33130]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. Carlile, dated 18 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking for a breakdown of the prison population for (a) the last date for which figures are available, (b) five years before that date, (c) 10 years before that date, (d) 15 years before that date and (e) 20 years before that date, by those imprisoned for (i) non-violent property crime, (ii) violent property crime, (iii) violent crimes against the person, excluding murder and manslaughter, (iv) murder and manslaughter, (v) illegal drug possession, (vi) illegal drug trafficking and (vii) other offences; and what percentage of each were men under the age of 25 years.

Information on the historical sentenced prison population is published in "Prison statistics, England and Wales" for 30 June each year, by sex and offence. No detailed information on the prison population is published before 1976. Table references for the years requested are: 10990-table 1.7 (Cm1800), 1985-table 1.5 (Cmnd 9903), 1980-Table 1.5 (Cmnd 8372). Information for 1976 is given in table 1.5 of the statistical tables of the "Report on the work of the Prison Department" (Cmnd 6884). Summary information for 1995 is given in the table attached. A breakdown of these statistics by age is not available. Copies of these publications are available from the library.

The available information on drugs offences is published in table 1 (c) of the 1986 edition and table 1 (b) of the 1994 edition of "Prison statistics, England and Wales" (Cm 210 and 3087).

Conviction Rates

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on relative conviction rates across European countries; and if he will make a statement. [33131]

Mr. Maclean: No information is currently collected centrally on conviction rates across all European countries. My Department is participating in a Council of Europe initiative to collect such information and other crime and criminal justice statistics for all member states. The first limited results from this study have been made available in the "Draft Sourcebook on Crime and Criminal Justice Statistics" published earlier this year, a copy of which is in the Library.

Electronic Tagging

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the electronic tagging pilot scheme. [33183]

Mr. Sackville: The electronic monitoring equipment continues to work well in all three trial areas; and the participating courts are making increased use of the curfew order. As of 13 June, 71 orders have been made since the trials began, with over 50 of these being made in the last six months.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the circumstances in which a crime is considered cleared up for official purposes. [33186]

Mr. Maclean: An offence is deemed to be cleared up if any of the following conditions are met:

1. a person has been charged or summonsed for the offence (irrespective of any subsequent acquittal);
2. the offence has been taken into consideration by the court or if the unequivocal consent of the offender is obtained by way of statement of admission and desire to have further offences taken into consideration;
3. the offender has been proceeded against in another police force area for the offence;
4. the offender dies before proceedings could be initiated or completed;
5. the offender has been cautioned by the police;
6. the offender is ill and is unlikely to recover or is too senile or too mentally disturbed for proceedings to be taken;
7. the complainant or an essential witness is dead and the proceedings cannot be pursued;
8. the guilt of the offender is clear but the victim refuses, or is permanently unable, or if a juvenile is not permitted, to give evidence;
9. the offender admits the offence but it is decided that no useful purpose would be served by proceeding with the charge;
10. it is ascertained that an offence has been committed by a child under the age of criminal responsibility;
11. an offence is admitted by a juvenile of the age of criminal responsibility and police take no action other than reporting the particulars to a local authority for action under the Children and Young Persons Act 1969;
12. There is sufficient evidence to charge the offender but

    (a) The police prosecuting department, the Crown Prosecution Service or a senior police officer decide that no useful purpose would be served by proceeding with the charge; or

    (b) for summary offences of unauthorised taking of a motor vehicle or criminal damage value over £20 the time limit of six months for commencing prosecution has been exceeded.

WPC Yvonne Fletcher

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) pursuant to his answer of 21 May, Official Report, column 96, about WPC Fletcher, when he expects the review of the contents of the television programme to be complete; [31915]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 20 May, Official Report, column 19, about the video in respect of WPC Fletcher, when he expects the Metropolitan police to conclude their consideration of the question. [31945]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 7 June 1996]: I understand from the Metropolitan police that they hope to have reached their conclusions on these matters in the near future.

USAF Mildenhall

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from, or on behalf of, the Suffolk constabulary concerning the definition of the powers of the American visiting forces outside USAF Mildenhall. [31952]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 10 June 1996]: None.

Mr. Gultasab Hussain

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what requests he has received from the British high commission in Islamabad to undertake inquiries into the application by Mr. Gultasab Hussain (ref: HO C8645) to join his wife in the United Kingdom; on what date the request was received; what information has been requested; and when the inquiries will be completed. [32957]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 17 June 1996]: The entry clearance officer in Islamabad wrote to the Home Office on 20 June 1995 asking for some inquiries to be made. These were completed and a report was sent to the entry clearance officer in October 1995.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions were brought by the police relating to animal welfare; how many were successful in the last available year; and if he will make a statement. [32810]

TREASURY

Plastic Banknotes

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to introduce plastic banknotes. [31821]

Mrs. Angela Knight: There are no current plans to introduce plastic banknotes, but the Bank of England keeps all aspects of banknote production under constant review.

Statistics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which statistics his Department has discontinued (a) the collection and (b) the publication of since 1989. [32869]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Numerous changes in the basis of compilation, presentation and publication of statistics occur in response to the requirements of Government, business and the wider community, including international organisations, for statistical information. Other changes reflect changes in administrative systems on which some series are based, the development of new statistical techniques and technological developments affecting the compilation and dissemination of statistical data.

When such changes are made, they are fully documented in the relevant statistical publications. Also, for example, the published annual reports of the former Central Statistical Office since 1991–92 have listed all the surveys of businesses carried out. To bring together all the relevant information on statistics collected and published would involve disproportionate cost.

Northern Ireland Companies (Employee Schemes)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many companies in Northern Ireland have set up and operated (a) profit-related pay schemes, (b) employee share ownership plans and (c) approved employee share schemes in each of the past five years; and what has been the estimated tax saving in each of those five years. [32179]

Mr. Jack: I regret that the information is not available centrally, since the registered addresses of companies—which could, in principle, be analysed—may differ from the regions in which their employees work.

Balance of Payments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the next contribution of financial services excluding investment income to the United Kingdom balance of payments in each year since 1992. [32343]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The net contribution of financial services—excluding investment income—to the UK balance of payments, in each year from 1992, was as follows:

	£ million
1992	4,713
1993	5,286
1994	5,572
1995	5,528

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department spent on postage in the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96; and how many items were posted during these periods. [32854]

Tax Fraud

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the budget and staffing level, for the investigation of tax fraud in the last financial year; and what amounts were detected or reclaimed as a direct result of these investigations. [32903]

Mr. Jack: It is not possible to isolate the resources and yield which relate to fraud investigations from other tax investigation work. But I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 26 October 1995, Official Report, columns 727–28, and 3 November 1995, Official Report, column 503. Later figures are not yet available.

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 13 June 1996]: Information on percentage rates of claimant unemployment is not available by parliamentary constituency. However, information on numbers of people claimant unemployed are published in "Labour Market Trends", and on the Nomis database, available in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 17 June 1996]: A functional breakdown of general government expenditure from 1978–79 to 1995–96 is given in cash, in real terms and as a percentage of gross domestic product in tables 1.2, 1.3 and 1.4 respectively of the "Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 1996–97", Cm 3201. A more detailed breakdown of the general government expenditure can be found in table 1.5 of the same publication for the 1990–91 to 1995–96 years. Figures for other functional headings are available only at disproportionate cost.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Statistics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which statistics his Department has discontinued (a) the collection and (b) the publication of since 1989. [32856]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The Overseas Development Administration collects and reports aid statistics in accordance with internationally agreed directives, which have changed little since 1989; and publishes a selection to meet the needs of customers, including Parliament and others with an interest in the UK aid programme. Some statistics on numbers of experts, students and trainees funded by UK aid are not presently published, pending system reorganising.

The FCO diplomatic wing collects a range of statistical information for internal management purposes. The nature of this has evolved to support more efficient management of resources. However, no central record is kept of which statistics are discontinued.

In the past few years, the volume of information published has increased considerably, in line with open government policy. In particular the FCO's departmental report, a copy of which is in the Library of the House, contains a wealth of statistical material.

Gulf War

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards securing compensation for those British citizens held hostage by Iraq during the Gulf war. [33058]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The governing council of the UN Compensation Commission—UNCC—last met in Geneva on 28 and 29 May and approved the second instalment of 62,122 category 'C' claims—which include compensation for having been held hostage. Some 235 British claimants in this instalment have been awarded a total of $4.6 million.

Payment of compensation will not be possible until UN Security Council resolution 986—oil for food—is implemented and sufficient money has accumulated in the compensation fund.

European Initiatives

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the European initiatives which have been blocked by the United Kingdom Government since the current policy of non-co-operation commenced. [33033]

Beef Imports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the date of implementation of (a) the EU ban on imports of United States beef and (b) the United States ban on imports of British beef. [31764]

Mrs. Browning: I have been asked to reply.

There is no EU ban on imports of United States beef. The United States of America appears on the list of countries approved for the export of bovine animal and meat, amongst other products, to the EU. However, Council directive 88/146/EEC prohibits the importation from third countries of animals and meat from animals which have been administered hormones as growth promoters. The use of such hormones is permitted in the United States and the US authorities are challenging the EU import restriction through World Trade Organisation procedures.

The UK has not received any formal notification from the United States Department of Agriculture of a ban on imports of British beef. However, the United States has not accepted imports of British bone-in beef since 1989. In view of the clear unwillingness of the US authorities to accept such imports, subsequent negotiations have concentrated on securing access to the American market for boneless beef. These were successfully concluded in July 1994 when health certification for the import of British boneless beef was agreed with the USA.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Developing Nations

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries that are currently classified by his Department as developing nations and are receiving Government aid. [33273]

Mr. Hanley: The 27 members of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development are generally regarded as the world's developed or industrialised countries. Countries in the rest of the world are broadly divided into two categories—the developing countries and "transition" countries. The latter category comprises Latvia, Lithuania, Ukraine, Slovak Republic, Poland, Czech Republic, Russia, Estonia, Belarus, Hungary, Moldova, Bulgaria and Romania. The Government give aid to around 160 developing and transition countries.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries that have been classified as developing nations since 1966 indicating the total amount each country has received in aid. [33272]

Mr. Hanley: The ODA publication, "British Aid Statistics"—published annually since 1965—provides comprehensive information on UK aid flows. Information on aid flows to and from other countries is contained in the World Bank's "World Development" report—it includes aid receipts by all countries—and in the OECD's publication "Geographical Distribution of Financial Flows to Aid Recipients". Historical data in these publications date back to the late 1960s only. All three publications are held in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria determine the eligibility of a country to qualify as a developing nation for ODA aid; and which body determines which countries are eligible. [33274]

Mr. Hanley: The OECD's Development Assistance Committee maintains a list of countries to which donors give aid. Part 1 of the DAC list is made up of developing countries. Help to these countries counts as official development assistance. Part 2 of the list is made up of transition countries, plus six graduated countries—Bahamas, Brunei, Kuwait, Qatar, Singapore and United Arab Emirates.

Governments are free to give aid to whichever countries they wish, but only aid to part 1 countries on the DAC lists counts as "official development assistance".

ENVIRONMENT

Volatile Organic Compounds

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will meet the Environmental Industries Commission for the purpose of reviewing the VOC pollution deadlines; and if he will make a statement; [32598]

(2) if he will now meet the Environmental Industries Commission for the purpose of reviewing the VOC pollution deadlines; and if he will make a statement. [32595]

Mr. Clappison: My right hon. Friend is meeting my hon. Friends the Members for Bromsgrove (Mr. Thomason) and for Wyre (Mr. Mans), together with representatives of the Environmental Industries Commission, on 9 July, when any such matters can be discussed.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will commission a further report on the costs of reducing VOC emissions with the remit to consider definitive cost estimates for individual sectors. [32593]

Mr. Clappison: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade published a detailed study of costs of reducing VOC emissions from industry on 3 May. A copy is in the Library of the House. My Department will shortly be publishing a study of the costs of implementing the proposed EC solvents directive in relation to three industry sectors. My Department has no current plans for any further studies, but we will keep the position under review.

Energy Advice Centres

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the aims of the three-year energy advice centres pilot study. [32945]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The study aimed to test the cost-effectiveness of the provision of free, impartial advice on energy efficiency.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what plans he has to fund the energy advice centres after March 1997; [32949]

(2) what future funding plans he has made for the energy advice centres. [32948]

Mr. Jones: The Government passed control of the local energy advice centre pilot study to the Energy Saving Trust at the beginning of April. It is preparing proposals for the future and will pass them on to my Department for consideration shortly.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the 10 top performing local energy advice centres in order of achievement of their targets; and what percentage of their targets they (a) achieved and (b) exceeded. [32947]

Mr. Jones: The following 10 LEACs were the top performers in order of achievement of their targets:

Tyneside
Cardiff
Bristol
Swansea
Greenwich
Plymouth
Tayside
Lothian and Edinburgh
Aberdeen
Belfast

All 10 LEACs achieved and exceeded their targets.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the energy advice centre pilot scheme; and if he will make a statement. [32950]

Mr. Jones: The Government passed control of the local energy advice centre pilot study to the Energy Saving Trust at the beginning of April 1996. The trust is assessing the pilot study, which will be completed at the end of September.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of the energy advice centres have (a) achieved and (b) exceeded their targets. [32946]

Mr. Jones: Some 24 of the 33 local energy advice centres achieved and exceeded their targets.

Water Supply (Yorkshire)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking to ensure that dairy farmers in the counties of Yorkshire will have a constant supply of mains water, with particular reference to those whose mains supply is also connected to other domestic households in the vicinity. [32907]

Mr. Clappison: Save for small areas at the borders of the counties, Yorkshire Water Services Ltd. and The York Waterworks plc are the appointed water undertakers serving the counties of Yorkshire. These and all water undertakers have the statutory duty to maintain supplies to all existing consumers and I expect them to take all the measures necessary to do so.

Housing Starts

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total number of housing starts in England in the first quarter of 1996; and what percentage change this was over the equivalent period in 1995. [32956]

Mr. Clappison: It is estimated that in England during the first quarter of 1996 there were 31,800 new dwellings started. This represents a fall of 12 per cent. compared to the first quarter of 1995 when 36,100 starts were reported.

Cemfuel

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the level of heavy metals in cemfuel when tested at Ribblesdale, Clithero, in October 1994. [32823]

Mr. Clappison: The concentrations of heavy metals in two samples taken during these trials are on the public register and were as follows.

Metal	Sample M1348, mg/kg	Sample 1349, mg/kg
Cadmium	4.3	4.57
Thallium	<0.05	<0.05

Manganese	28	18.2
Nickel	7.3	2.19

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the environmental values given to each of the individual emissions from burning cemfuel at Castle Cement, Clitheroe; and which increased as compared to burning coal. [32835]

Mr. Clappison: The attached tables show the emissions when burning coal or coal plus cemfuel, the environmental assessment level values and the calculated environmental quotient.

Water Byelaws

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when he will complete the consultation over the revision to water byelaws; and when he plans to put draft regulations to replace water byelaws before the House; [33376]

(2) if he will list the areas covered by the consultation over revising water byelaws; [33377]

Mr. Clappison: My Department issued a consultation document on the general arrangements for replacement of the water byelaws in January 1995. In the light of the comments received, I announced on 26 March the establishment of a Water Regulations Advisory Committee, whose membership I hope to announce shortly.

Regulations to replace the water byelaws will deal with the prevention of contamination, waste, undue consumption and misuse of water in premises. They are expected to include requirements on water usage by fittings and appliances.

There will be a further consultation on draft proposals, the timing of which will be determined in the light of advice from WRAC, which will also be asked to advise on the extension of the current water byelaws.

Details of performance in 1995–96 will be published in the Scottish Court Service's first annual report.

Incapable Adults

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what response he proposes to make to the Scottish Law Commission report on incapable adults, Scot Law Com. No. 151. [33703]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have given careful consideration to the Scottish Law Commission's report on incapable adults. The report raises a number of issues which are both important and sensitive, and proposes many changes in the law relating to legal procedures for looking after the property, financial affairs and personal welfare of mentally incapable adults. Although I fully acknowledge the consultation which has already been carried out by the commission in coming to the conclusions it has reached, I also recognise that many people will have strong views on the proposals which the commission has made.

Consequently, I have decided that before legislating on the basis of the commission's proposals there should be further consultation. I propose to issue a consultation paper this summer.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) pursuant to his answer of 28 March, Official Report, column 672, how much his Department estimated it would have cost to provide the information requested; [31454]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 22 March, Official Report, column 343, how much his Department estimated it would have cost to provide the information requested. [31446]

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many designated sites of the Inverclyde enterprise zone are still awaiting industrial development; and if he will make a statement. [30176]

Mr. Kynoch [pursuant to his reply, 4 June 1996 c. 403–404]: Four of the 11 designated sits within the Inverclyde enterprise zone do not, at present, have any enterprise zone activity.

HEALTH

Paediatric Intensive Care Beds

13. Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what monitoring he is undertaking of the provision of paediatric intensive care beds. [31706]

Mr. Horam: On 29 May, we published a report on provision of paediatric intensive care. This was produced by the chief executive of the national health service executive. Copies are available in the Library.

The report shows that for most of the year current provision is enough to meet demand, but more beds are needed in the winter. The chief executive will be monitoring the implementation of regional plans to increase provision.

28. Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the chairmen of the national health service trusts to discuss the provision of paediatric intensive care beds. [31723]

Mr. Horam: My right hon. Friend has not met chairmen of national health service trusts on this issue. However, my right hon. Friend has had recent detailed discussion with the chief executive of the NHS executive, whose report to him on the provision of paediatric intensive care was published on 29 May. Copies are available in the Library. The report describes plans made by NHS trusts and health authorities to develop this service, and to provide additional beds. The chief executive will keep in close touch with these plans, and will report to my right hon. Friend later this year on progress towards their implementation.

General Practitioner Fundholders

14. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GP fundholders there are currently in the north-west. [31707]

Dentists' Contracts

16. Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to meet representatives of the British Dental Association to discuss dentists' contracts. [31709]

Mr. Malone: We have no plans for such a meeting. As I announced last week on 12 June, Official Report, columns 313–23, we have agreed a series of reforms of the dental remuneration system with the profession's representatives. The reforms underline our commitment to improving child oral health and seek to ensure value for money.

Smoking-related Deaths

17. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his current estimate of the numbers dying in the last year from smoking-related illnesses. [31710]

22. Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the Association of Directors of Social Services to discuss the provision of care to elderly people living in the community. [31715]

Mr. Bowis: I regularly meet representatives of the Association of Directors of Social Services to discuss a wide range of issues, including community care. My next formal meeting with the association is on 19 June.

23. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the effect on the funding of the Wiltshire health authority of the closure of the Princess Alexandra hospital at Wroughton. [31716]

Mr. Horam: We are aware of the difficulties facing Wiltshire health authority as a result of the closure of the Princess Alexandra military hospital. The needs of the health authority is being considered alongside those of other health authorities facing special circumstances in 1996–97 and a decision will be made shortly.

Bury and Rochdale Health Authority

24. Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with the Bury and Rochdale health authority about the timetable for its current review of health services. [31718]

Mr. Horam: The infant mortality rate in 1995 was 6.1 per 1,000 live births, the lowest ever. The perinatal mortality rate in 1994, the latest figure available, was 8.9 per 1,000 live births—again, the lowest ever.

The confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy aims to improve our understanding of factors which contribute to infant deaths and in particular ways in which the risks of death might be diminished. The next report will be published shortly.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of how the health of babies and very young children has changed since 1979. [32106]

Mr. Horam: The health of babies and young children has improved, as is demonstrated by the fall in infant and perinatal mortality rates. Deaths in children under one year of age—the infant mortality rate—fell by over half to 6.1 per 1,000 live births between 1979 and 1995. Stillbirths and deaths of babies less than a week old—the perinatal mortality rate—fell by nearly 40 per cent. to 8.9 per 1,000 live births between 1979 and 1994, the latest figure available.

Private Finance Initiative

26. Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the role of private finance in the national health service. [31720]

Mr. Horam: The role of the private finance initiative in the national health service is to enable NHS bodies to obtain best value for money for the taxpayer when developing capital schemes. It gives the NHS access to private capital and to the full range of private sector skills and experience in constructing facilities and providing supporting services. A private finance option has to be tested against a public sector comparator and is used if the overall package—which includes consideration of factors such as risk transfer, building maintenance and facilities management—offers better value for money.

Hospitals (Beef)

27. Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has issued to national health service trusts about serving beef in hospitals. [31722]

Mr. Horam: Whether to offer beef products on patient menus, as part of a varied and balanced diet, is a matter for national health service trusts to determine locally, responding to patient choice. The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee considered the risks to human health from eating beef or beef products and concluded that any risk was likely to be extremely small. It also concluded that if human infection with the bovine spongiform encephalopathy agent occurs, which has not been proven, hospital patients were not likely to have increased susceptibility to infection.

Health of the Nation

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what conclusions he has drawn about the health of the nation from the last census. [31712]

Mr. Horam: Census information along with other information helps us to monitor the nation's health. It continues to improve. For example, mortality rates have substantially fallen and life expectancy has increased.

The 1991 census contained a specific health related question on limiting long-term illness which showed that, overall, 13 per cent. of the total resident population in England had a long-term illness, health problem or handicap which limited the daily activities or the work that a person could do.

This research will be overseen by the Medical Research Council, which will ensure an objective, impartial and scientific approach. The MRC issued a call for research proposals including epidemiological studies at the end of May. Mr. Roger Evans: Like other social fund payments, funeral payments are not subject to annual uprating. However, we keep the level of all social fund payments under review.

Asbestos-related Diseases

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the number of (a) men and (b) women who are, at present, receiving social security benefits for asbestos-related illnesses. [32873]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is not available.

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have had their reduced earnings allowance reduced since 24 March; and if he will list their former occupations. [33258]

Mr. Roger Evans: Since 24 March, approximately 18,000 over pensionable age reduced earnings allowance recipients who have given up regular employment have been transferred to retirement allowance.

Information about the former occupations of these retirement allowance recipients could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the estimated savings to his Department as a result of the recent changes in reduced earnings allowance; and what proportion of his Department's total expenditure this represents. [33259]

Mr. Evans: The estimated savings from the changes to reduced earnings allowance introduced with effect from 24 March 1996 are £25 million in 1996–97. This is, approximately 0.03 per cent. of the Department's total expenditure.

Means-tested Benefits

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the administrative costs of each main group of means-tested benefits including income support and housing benefit in cash terms for the last three complete financial years; and if he will express these costs as a percentage of the total of benefit payments. [30404]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the tables in 1995–96 prices.

The information requested is published, in cash terms, in the social security departmental report. The last year that figures are available is 1994–95.

Benefits Agency (Information Officers)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many district information officers are or were employed by the Benefits Agency (a) at present and (b) one year ago by region. [32703]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Chris Smith, dated 17 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many District Information officers are or were employed by the Benefits Agency (a) at present and (b) one year ago by region.

The information is not available in the format requested. With the creation of the Benefits Agency in 1991 former regions were grouped into Area and Territorial Directorates.

The attached Annex give details of the number of District Information Officers for each Area Directorate. Some of these officers may combine other duties with their role of information officers.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

District information officers

Area directorate	Number as at 31 May 1995	Number as at 31 May 1996
East London and Anglia	25	20
Chilterns	25	11
London South	39	27
West Country	22	18
Mercia	20	13
West Midlands	21	12
Wales	15	13
North West Coast	26	19
Greater Manchester	25	18
Yorkshire	21	13
Tyne Tees	21	15
West of Scotland	20	11
East of Scotland	28	14

Figures are provisional and subject to amendment.

Headquarters Staff

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will detail the number of staff at his headquarters in each year since 1992; and if he will group the staff by the benefit for which they have responsibility in each of these years. [33046]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Information regarding the resources allocated to particular areas of policy in the current year is contained in the headquarters business plan for 1996–97, a copy of which is in the Library.

Total staff in DSS (HQ)

Year	Staff
1992–93	1,527
1993–94	1,615
1994–95	1,635
1995–96	1,481
1996–97	1,541

1. Figures include professional staff.

2. It is not possible to provide precise figures for the number of staff working on individual benefits over this period.

3. A substantial proportion of staff are not responsible for any specific benefit or are engaged in management and supportive activities.

Statistics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which statistics his Department has discontinued (a) the collection and (b) the publication of since 1989. [32861]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table:

Statistical series	Date collection ceased	Date publication ceased
Retirement pension (RP) movements	[1]March 1989	[1]March 1989
Widows benefit (WB) movements	[1]March 1989	[1]March 1989
Income support annual statistical enquiry (ASE)	[2]Still collected	May 1993
Monthly analysis of new claims for unemployment benefit	[3]—	December 1994
Quarterly analysis of unemployed claimants.	[4]—	November 1994
Half yearly analysis of unemployed claimants.
Analysis of adjudication officers' decisions—unemployment benefit	[5]—	December 1991

[1] RP/WB movements were discontinued from March 1989 to September 1992 because of the change from the existing pensions system to the pensions strategy computer system. They were introduced from March 1993.

[2] The income support annual statistical inquiry was replaced by the IS quarterly statistical inquiry.

[3] This was discontinued at the end of 1994, as the data were also collected and published by the (then) Employment Department.

[4] These were replaced by unemployed claimants summary statistics—a quarterly publication—from February 1995.

[5] The collection and publication of this data was transferred to the Employment Service (part of the then Employment Department) from the end of 1991.

[6] The table excludes a number of other statistics which are no longer collected through lack of demand. However, these mainly provided extra detail on benefits for which the main statistics are still published.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many former recipients of reduced earnings allowance are also in receipt of (a) state retirement pension and (b) income support; and what proportion of total claimants this represents. [33260]

Mr. Evans: The information is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Child Support

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will make an announcement on his plans to change the level of benefit deductions for parents with care who do not co-operate with the Child Support Agency without a good cause exemption; and what is the shortest period in which he estimates these changes could be introduced. [32899]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: We hope to make an announcement shortly. It should be possible to implement any changes in the autumn of this year.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what amount of benefit savings were made by the reduced benefit direction under the Child Support Act 1991 in each year since the implementation of the Act. [33060]

Mr. Mitchell: Benefit savings resulting from the reduced benefit direction have not been separately identified. However, it is estimated that the value of reduced benefit directions in income support is currently between £5 million and £10 million per annum.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the benefit savings that would be made if (a) the reduced benefit direction under the Child Support Act 1991 was increased to 40 per cent. of the adult personal allowance for a duration of 18 months and (b) the reduced benefit direction was increased to 40 per cent. and applied until the benefit claim ceased. [33059]

Mr. Mitchell: It is estimated that the long-term benefit savings would be around £10 million and £15 million respectively.

TRANSPORT

Motorway Lighting

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 10 June, Official Report, columns 28–29, if he will place in the Library a copy of a map showing the locations of all sections of motorway in England that have overhead lighting. [33084]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Frank Field, dated 18 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about a map of motorway lighting in England.

A copy of the Highways Agency Motorway Lighting Map is being forwarded to the Library and a copy is also enclosed for your information.

Network SouthEast

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many and what percentage of trains arrived more than five minutes late during peak hours on each of the former Network SouthEast lines in (a) each four-week period during 1995–96 and (b) for 1995–96 as a whole; [33036]

(2) how many and what percentage of trains were cancelled on each of the former Network SouthEast lines in (a) each four-week period during 1995–96 and (b) 1995–96 as a whole. [33035]

Mr. Watts: The information requested is available from citizens charter records and is shown in the following tables.

Highways Agency

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) which properties occupied by the Highways Agency have access for the disabled; [32434]

(2) if he will list the names of the site supervisors for the current building works being carried out at the Highways Agency office in Birmingham. [32435]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 18 June 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about disabled access in Highways Agency buildings and the current building works in the Broadway office, Birmingham.

Firstly, I can list the buildings under Highways Agency management which have access for people with disabilities. These are as follows:

St Christopher House, Southwark Street, London.

Federated House, London Road, Dorking.

City House, New Station Street, Leeds.

Jefferson House, Park Place, Leeds.

Falcon Road, Exeter.

Heron House, Goldington Road, Bedford.

In addition, we are looking at a list of improvements made as a result of a recent RADA inspection at our offices in the Broadway, Birmingham.

The current building works at the Broadway offices in Birmingham comprise of a window replacement programme undertaken by the Landlord of the building, Pillar Properties. They are being supervised by Richard Ellis, Surveyors. Mrs Jayne Cresswell of Richard Ellis is currently the main site supervisor for this work.

Driving Instructors

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to change regulations whereby unvetted theory trainers for driving instruction can legally give unremunerated practical driving lessons; and if he will make a statement. [32772]

Mr. Norris: The current law regulates persons giving ordinary driving instructions for money's worth as well as money. I do not believe the courts would accept that the loophole suggested does, in fact, exist.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what restrictions apply in respect to those eligible to be employed as theory trainers for driving instruction; and if he will make a statement. [32773]

Mr. Norris: The current law regarding car driving instruction does not apply to theory tuition given, for example, in a classroom or undertaken via distance learning methods. I am not persuaded that imposing a new regulatory regime on persons such as lecturers or authors dealing with driving theory would be justified.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Arts Spending

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the current level of Government expenditure per capita on the arts. [29930]

Mr. Sproat: The arts benefit from a complex system of plural funding. Direct central Government funding for the arts in the UK amounts to £242 million in 1996–97. In addition, local authorities spend an amount on the arts in the region of that provided by central Government through the four arts councils which in 1996–97 is more than £233 million. On top of this, it is anticipated that the arts' share of lottery awards will exceed £300 million this year. This adds up to public funding in the UK for the arts in excess of £775 million. Based on these figures, the current level of Government expenditure per capita on the arts is at least £13.27. There are, however, other sources of arts funding generated through Government expenditure, either directly or indirectly, and it is therefore difficult to give a per capita figure which is a true reflection of the overall picture.

Civil Servants (Duties Abroad)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much her Department spent during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 on sending civil servants accompanying Ministers from her Department on official duties abroad. [32413]

Mr. Sproat: My Department spent £23,000 in the financial year 1994–95 and £18,000 in the financial year 1995–96.

Statistics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage which statistics her Department has discontinued (a) the collection and (b) the publication of since 1989. [32866]

Mr. Sproat: None.

Television Licences (Second Homes)

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what representations she has received regarding the change in policy by the television licensing office to charge owners of second homes licence fees; and if she will make a statement; [32951]

(2) if she will introduce changes in the television licence charges at the annual review to allow licences for holiday homes belonging to pensioners to be charged at the same rate as an accommodation for residential care licence; and if she will make a statement. [32944]

Mr. Sproat: The Department of National Heritage has received representations on this subject from Members of the House, the general public and organisations representing caravan owners and the caravan park trade. The Government have no plans to introduce any changes in the television licence fees for holiday homes belonging to pensioners.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if a second television licence is required for temporary use of a television in a mobile home; and if he will make a statement. [33158]

Mr. Sproat: The BBC, which is responsible for the administration and enforcement of the television licensing system, recently announced that a licence is required for use of a television in a second dwelling, including mobile homes. Licensing requirements in specific circumstances are a matter for the BBC.

Customer Charter

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list (a) the customer charters which are currently in use within her Department and its executive agencies and (b) the charters which have been withdrawn. [32825]

Mr. Sproat: The information the hon. Member has requested is as follows:

(a) The Royal Parks agency has a charter standard and the Historic Royal Palaces agency has a visitors charter.

(b) No charters have been withdrawn.

English Heritage

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much income English Heritage generated from ticket sales in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what percentage of the organisation's running costs this represented. [33075]

Mr. Sproat: English Heritage generated £7.5 million from ticket sales at its historic properties in 1995–96. It also generated £3.5 million from its membership scheme and a further £4.7 million from retail and catering activities. The total visitor and membership income of £15.7 million represents over 30 per cent. of English Heritage's total running costs of £50.9 million in 1995–96 and over 50 per cent. of the costs of running and maintaining its 407 historic properties.

Postage Costs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much her Department spent on postage in the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96; and how many items were posted during these periods. [32841]

Mr. Sproat: My Department spent £47,920 posting 98,696 items in 1994–95 and £56,119 posting 110,226 items in 1995–96.

British Tourist Authority Chairman

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what factors underlay the appointment of David Quarmby as chairman of the British Tourist Authority and the English Tourist Board; how many days a week he will work in this capacity; and at what salary. [32708]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 13 June 1996]: The qualities that my right hon. Friend sought for the chairman of the British Tourist Authority and the English tourist board were a proven track record in strategic planning in a large-scale organisation; leadership and management skills; the ability to represent British tourism effectively through the media; and an understanding of the public sector.

My right hon. Friend appointed David Quarmby after extensive consultations, a search assisted by an executive search agency and an interview process assisted by representatives of the tourism industry.

Mr. Quarmby will be employed for three days per week, one and a half days for each board and his salary will be £54,000 per annum.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by her Department. [32673]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 13 June 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson) on 3 April 1996, Official Report, columns 227–28.

Sports (Insurance)

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what assessment she has made of the impact of civil actions for damages, against members of voluntary and community operated amateur sports clubs with particular reference to the cost of insurance cover; [33094]

(2) what assessment she has made of the impact of civil actions for damages against individuals engaged in competitive sports at an amateur level with particular reference to the cost of insurance cover; [33093]

(3) what assessment she has made of the financial liability that may be faced by sports clubs, sports officials and individuals engaged in competitive sport where actions for damages are raised against them in the courts. [33092]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 17 June 1996]: None. However, I would expect all those involved in sport to ensure that their insurance is in order.

Council of Europe Meetings

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to the answer on 22 May, Official Report, columns 299–300, if he will make it his policy to keep a separate record of attendance by Ministers and officials of her Department at meetings of, or organised by, the Council of Europe, and if she will make a statement. [33027]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 17 June 1996]: In future, attendance by Ministers and officials of my Department at meetings of, or organised by, the Council of Europe will be recorded separately.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Specified Bovine Offals

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the (a) recorded and (b) calculated level of specified bovine offal in each year since 1989. [26432]

Mrs Browning: Before the introduction of the Specified Bovine Offal Order 1995, all SBOs had to be dealt with in accordance with the Bovine Offal (Prohibition) Regulations 1989, as amended. Enforcement of these regulations lay with the local authorities up until 1 April 1995, when the Meat Hygiene Service took over this responsibility in premises licensed under the Fresh Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) Regulations 1995. The bovine offal regulations required all consignments of SBO to be accompanied by a movement permit, detailing amongst other things the quantity being moved. Once the SBO had reached its intended destination, the completed permit had to be returned to the originating local authority, which then had to keep it for a period of two years. No central records were kept.

Since the introduction of the Specified Bovine Offal Order in August 1995, which was replaced by the Specified Bovine Material Order 1996 in March, movement permits for SBO are no longer required, in view of tighter controls which have been introduced on approval and record keeping. Persons consigning SBO to an approved premises are required to keep a record of all consigned SBO material for a period of two years. The programme of state veterinary service audits of records kept under the legislation has not yet been running for a full year, so annual data from this source are not yet available. Our best estimates based on returns from the rendering industry show that just over 78,000 tonnes of SBM was handled by it in the 12 months to March 1996. In addition, a small amount will have been destroyed by incineration.

It is not possible to calculate an exact figure for the weight of SBM that would be generated by the slaughter of a given number of animals. This is because the weight generated per animal is dependent on the dressing procedures in the slaughterhouse concerned. The effects of, for example, whether the guts are sent off full or empty, or whether head meat was removed, when that was permitted, can result in a weight of SBM generated per animal that can vary by a factor of two or more. Based on date extrapolated from the MLC kill figures for the period August 1995 to March 1996, the figure of 78,000 tonnes above lies well within the range of the maximum of about 130,000 tonnes and the minimum of about 57,000 tonnes of SBM that we would expect to have been produced.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many dealers are registered as engaging in intra-Community trade; and in what form information on that registration is held. [30717]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 4 June 1996]: The Animals and Animal Products (Import and Export) Regulations 1995 provide for notices to be served on a dealer engaging in intra-Community trade requiring him or her to be registered with the Ministry. Registered dealers are required to keep records of deliveries of animals and their subsequent destination. As at June 1 1996, 95 dealers in Great Britain were registered. Registers of dealers are maintained by divisional veterinary managers.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what response he has received from the authorities in the Netherlands following his inquiry about those authorities permitting British sheep to travel from premises in the Netherlands direct to Greece in contravention of EU directive 91/628. [32474]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Glanford and Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley) on 17 June 1996.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the value on 2 June of the foodstuffs known to be contaminated by BSE whose possession he proposes should be made a criminal offence. [31610]

Mrs. Browning: It is not correct to assume that all mammalian meat and bone meal contains the BSE agent but to address the possible risk, the feeding to all livestock of feed incorporating it has been prohibited since 4 April. This has the effect of removing any risk of recycling the disease through its accidental inclusion in cattle rations.

It is difficult to identify any legitimate use for such material remaining on farms, at feed mills and at feed merchants. Rather than having any value, it represents a storage and future disposal cost for the holder. On 10 June, we announced a feed recall scheme which will provide for its collection and disposal free of charge.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if (a) farmers and (b) others holding BSE–contaminated foodstuffs are to be compensated; and if they will be required to state if they have fed the meal to bovines. [31618]

Mrs. Browning: It would be wrong to presume that all mammalian meat and bonemeal is infectious or contains the BSE agent. No compensation will be paid to farmers or others holding animal feed incorporating MBM. Farmed animal feed containing MBM is being collected and disposed of free of charge under the free recall scheme, announced on 10 June.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the amount and location of contaminated feedstuff suspected of carrying the BSE agent. [31609]

Mrs. Browning: It has been estimated that 5,000 to 15,000 tonnes of pig and poultry feed incorporating mammalian meat and bone meal may be awaiting collection and disposal at feed mills and at feed merchants. It is impossible to estimate how much, if any, of this feed harbours the BSE agent and so poses a risk of recycling the disease if it were fed to cattle, which would be an illegal act. The recall scheme will target all feedingstuffs containing MBM.

The amount of this material remaining on farms after its feeding to all farmed animals became illegal on 4 April is thought to be relatively small.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what factors underlay his proposal to EU Agriculture Ministers to make possession of BSE–contaminated feedstuff a criminal offence; and for what reasons this policy was not introduced earlier. [31759]

Mrs. Browning: The proposed offence to which the question refers would be for farmed animal feed containing mammalian meat and bone meal or for MBM itself to be present on farms, at feed mills or feed merchants, since some MBM may harbour the BSE agent and so pose a risk of recycling the disease if it, illegally, found its way into cattle rations.

As feed incorporating mammalian meat and bone meal now has no legitimate use on farms and as any residual stocks in the non-ruminant farmed animal feed chain present a possible source of cross-contamination to cattle rations, it is best that it is removed. Making its possession illegal from 1 August, together with a Government-funded recall scheme, will encourage early removal.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what date the Government were first informed of BSE-related contaminated feed being fed to cattle. [31249]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 4 June 1996]: Early epidemiological investigations carried out in 1987 and 1988 showed that the only common facts in herds with confirmed cases of BSE was the use of concentrated animal feed containing, in particular, concentrate containing meat and bone meal. As a result of these findings, the ruminant protein feed ban was introduced in July 1988.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what procedures he has evaluated to identify whether animal feed contains the infective agent responsible for bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [31631]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 June 1996]: The ELISA test is currently being used to ensure that animal feed does not contain mammalian protein. Bioassay tests on feed to test for infectivity are possible but the sensitivity of the test at present is such that it is extremely unlikely that infectivity could be detected.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many samples of commercial feed have been found to be contaminated with a BSE agent. [31632]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 June 1994]: No attempt has been made to detect infectivity in commercial feed. Bioassay tests on feed to test for infectivity are possible but the sensitivity of the test at present is such that it is extremely unlikely that infectivity could be detected.

Testing has however been carried out to detect the presence of mammalian protein in animal feed. This is not synonymous with infection, but its presence would be in contravention of past and current prohibitions.

Of 928 samples of feedingstuffs tested in February and March, eight were positive for the presence of ovine or porcine protein. None showed any evidence of bovine protein. In April, samples taken following an incident at a poultry mill and investigations into the supplier, led to the disclosure of four further positive samples. Again no bovine protein was isolated.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what quantity of material from rendering plants, potentially contaminated with BSE has been disposed of by (a) burial in landfill sites and (b) spreading on open ground. [31634]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 June 1996]: All BSE suspect cases are incinerated. Council regulation 716/96 requires that cattle in the over-30 month scheme be incinerated or processed at rendering plants and destroyed. A number of options for the disposal of meat and bonemeal produced at plants are under active consideration and in all cases full weight will be given to protecting the environment. The options include incineration, use as fuel in power generation and eventual landfill.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what opinion surveys he has conducted relating to the impact of failures by animal feed mills, rendering plants and abattoirs fully to implement BSE-related regulations on public confidence in beef products. [32308]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 17 June 1996]: None.

Local Veterinary Inspectors

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 140, which provision of paragraph 4g of part II of the code of practice on access to Government information he refers to when withholding the names of local veterinary inspectors. [32526]

Mrs. Browning: Paragraph 4g of part II of the code of practice on access to Government information permits the withholding of information whose disclosure could endanger the life or physical safety of any person, or identify the source of information or assistance given in confidence for law enforcement or security purposes.

Postage Costs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much his Department spent on postage in the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96; and how many items were posted during these periods. [32843]

Mr. Boswell: The Department's expenditure on postage in 1994–95 was £1,853,970.64 and in 1995–96 was £1,596,147.88. No record was kept of the number of items posted.

Wildlife Trusts

Sir Kenneth Carlisle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the wildlife trusts; what issues were raised; and if he will make a statement. [33020]

Mr. Boswell: The Minister met the wildlife trust in Lincolnshire on 10 June and visited various sites.

Issues raised included pesticides; soil erosion; set-aside; countryside stewardship; the common agricultural policy and the intergovernmental conference; farmland birds; and agri-environmental schemes.

In a subsequent interview with the "Natural World", the Minister was asked about reconciling food production with protection of the environment; CAP reform; biodiversity; the uplands; wildlife legislation; and the Government's achievements and aims for wildlife. He emphasised the considerable achievements of the expanded agri-environmental programme.

Customer Charters

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list (a) the customer charters which are currently in use within his Department and its executive agencies and (b) the charters which have been withdrawn. [32827]

Mr. Boswell: The following customer service standards have been produced under the citizens charter and are currently in use within this Department and its executive agencies:

Statistics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which statistics his Department has discontinued (a) the collection and (b) the publication of since 1989. [32858]

Mr. Boswell: The Ministry regularly reviews the statistics which are collected and disseminated to ensure that needs are met cost effectively. Information is not held in a form which could identify all changes since 1989 except at disproportionate cost, but the following regular statistical surveys have been discontinued:

1995: The Production of Syrup and Treacle.

1994: The Structure and Extent of the Turkey Population.

1993: The Consumption of Potato Crisps and Snacks.

1993: The Production of Processed Potatoes.

1993: The Stocks of Cocoa Beans and Cocoa Products.

1992: Agricultural Machinery.

1992: Import Commitments for Sugar within the EU.

1990: The Structure of the Egg Industry.

1990: The Canning and Bottling of Fruit and Vegetables.

Tobacco Producers

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the countries of the European Union in receipt of EU funds to subsidise their tobacco producers and the total such expenditure to each country for the most recent 12-month period. [33182]

Mr. Baldry: Details of expenditure on the tobacco regime by the Community, broken down by member state, are contained in annex 2 of the annual financial reports on the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund, EAGGF, guarantee section, copies of which have been deposited in the Library of the House.

Provisional figures for 1995 are:

	Mecu	£ million[1]
Belgium	3.5	2.8
Germany	26.2	21.2
Greece	411.4	332.4

	Mecu	£ million[1]
Spain	125.7	101.6
France	81.2	65.6
Italy	331.6	267.9
Netherlands	0.1	0.1
Portugal	13.3	10.7
Total	993.0	802.4

[1] £1=1.23759 ecu. Figures may not add to totals shown because of rounding.

Animal Feed

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions in each year since 1989 animal feed producers were prosecuted for failure to comply with regulations relating to bovine spongiform encephalopathy governing the production, distribution and supply of cattle feed. [31248]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 4 June 1996]: No producers of animal feed have been prosecuted for failure to comply with BSE regulations relating to the production, distribution and supply of cattle feed.

Action has been taken in conjunction with the animal feed producers where problems were identified to put these right. Feed mills are now being visited on a regular basis and samples taken for analysis. This involves tests for mammalian protein which had to be specially developed and were not available for full use until February 1996.

Beef Supplies

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in what circumstances he will make over 30 months' prime beef available to the United Kingdom consumer. [31829]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 7 June 1996]: Proposals for the establishment of a voluntary beef assurance scheme for those specialist beef herds reared mainly on grass which had not come into contact with meat or bonemeal and where no cases of BSE have occurred were issued on 3 May. Under the proposed scheme, participants will be able to sell cattle over 30 months for slaughter for human consumption purposes. The detailed rules of the scheme are being drawn up with a view to introducing it in July.

Animal Feedstuff

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the measures taken by the Government to ensure that no feed containing meat and bone meal was fed to farm animals over the past 30 months. [31383]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 June 1996]: The Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (Amendment) Order 1996, which came into effect on 29 March, prohibits in Great Britain the sale or supply of any mammalian meat and bone meal, for the purposes of feeding to farmed animals, including poultry, horses and farmed fish. The order also made it an offence, from 4 April, to use any mammalian meat and bonemeal, or feed containing it, for feeding to farmed animals. These measures are being reinforced by a programme of inspection and sampling on farms and at feed mills. This programme is due shortly to be widened in scope and intensity to increase the current rate of sampling.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what agency will be responsible for identifying proscribed animal feed and for initiating legal proceedings against those holding it; and what estimate he has made of the manpower and budget consequences of this proposal. [31626]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 June 1996]: The state veterinary service and local authorities will be responsible for identifying proscribed mammalian meat and bonemeal and feed containing meat and bonemeal and will initiate proceedings in accordance with the appropriate legislation. Such activities will be carried out as part of their normal enforcement responsibilities.

Rendering Plant, Thruxted

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the past and present disposal methods of the rendering plant at Thruxted, Kent, when dealing with potentially BSE-contaminated materials; if he will undertake an investigation into possible contamination of the environment at Eggringe wood arising from this plant; and if he will make a statement. [31629]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 June 1996]: This Department has not made an assessment of the effluent disposal methods of the rendering plant at Thruxted Mill, Kent which is the responsibility of the Environment Agency.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the potential for materials extracted from specified bovine offal entering the water supply at Eggringe wood, near Thruxted Mill, in Kent. [31630]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 June 1996]: A water treatment plant for effluent from the offals has been installed at Thruxted Mill and it is for the Environment Agency to decide if the disposal of treated water to land complies with the Water Resources Act 1991. This Department has not made such an assessment.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what quantity of residue from specified bovine offal is being stored at Thruxted Mill in Kent. [31633]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 June 1996]: Approximately 110 tonnes of meat and bonemeal and 90 tonnes of tallow—the resultant material from rendering—is currently stored at Thruxted Mill.

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many notices under articles 15 and 16 of the Welfare of Animals during Transport Order 1994 have been issued since the order came into force by local veterinary inspectors in the vicinity of Dover in respect of animals destined for export through the ports of (a) Brightlingsea and (b) Dover where they have identified sheep, calves or pigs which are unfit to travel; and if he will make a statement. [32509]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 12 June 1996]: None. I also refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave him on 13 May, Official Report, columns 379–80, and on 4 June, Official Report, column 436.

Rabies

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the circumstances surrounding the discovery of a suspected rabid bat in Newhaven recently. [32710]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 13 June 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to the hon. Member for Staffordshire (Mr. Fabricant) on 11 June 1996, Official Report, column 139.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of bats infected with rabies have been confirmed in England during the past five years; how many were among native populations; and how many were suspected of coming from abroad. [32709]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 13 June 1996]: There has never been a confirmed case of rabies in a bat in England before the case in East Sussex confirmed on 10 June this year.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the species of bat with suspected rabies discovered in Newhaven recently; when the bat was first noticed; by whom; what action was taken; and when it came into the possession of his Department. [32707]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 13 June 1996]: The bat is believed to have been a Daubenton's bat. It was reported to a local bat conservation society by a member of the public in Newhaven in East Sussex as being weak and unable to fly. It was collected by a wildlife ranger on 31 May who took it to the society's premises in Shoreham in West Sussex that day. The bat was euthanased on 3 June following a display of uncharacteristic aggression, a spontaneous abortion and an apparent epileptic fit. The carcass was posted to the Veterinary Laboratory Agency at Addlestone on 4 June and arrived on 5 June. Routine tests were under taken for rabies. Rabies was confirmed on 10 June following positive test results to a fluorescent antibody test and a rapid tissue culture isolation test. The results of a heminested RT-PCR mouse innoculation test are still awaited.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what strain of rabies is suspected in the bat discovered in Newhaven recently; if the strain is capable of being passed on to humans; how long it will take to confirm the bat was rabid; and what methods are used to confirm rabies. [32711]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 13 June 1996]: Following positive test results to a fluorescent antibody test and a rapid tissue culture isolation test rabies, European bat lyssavirus strain 2 was confirmed on 10 June. This strain is capable of being passed on to humans. The results of the heminested RT-PCR mouse innoculation test are expected in the week beginning 24 June.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the bat found in Newhaven and suspected of carrying rabies died. [32717]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 13 June 1996]: The bat was euthanased on 3 June.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment has been made of the cost effects of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by his Department. [32671]

Mr. Boswell: Work is currently under way in the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to assess the impact and likely costs of the millennium date change on the computer systems operated by the Department. Initial planning has been undertaken and a project—which covers applications and systems software, as well as hardware, from our suppliers—has been established under the auspices of the Ministry's information technology steering group. Early activities include an assessment of the impact on selected pilot systems, but until this and other related preliminary work has been completed, likely costs cannot be assessed.

Dietary Supplements

Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what response he has made to the Shrimpton report on "Essential Nutrients in Supplements"; and what assessment he has made of its recommendations relating to consumer choice dietary supplements. [33177]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 17 June 1996]: We have noted this report commissioned by the European Federation of Associations of Health Product Manufacturers and will take its conclusions into account in considering issues related to the safety of dietary supplements.

Beef Ban

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the extent to which the German Government will be able to delay the partial lifting of the beef ban while not being in conflict with EU law; and what mechanisms are available to the German Government to delay the partial lifting of the ban. [33053]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 17 June 1996]: The ban on the export of cattle, bovine semen and embryos, meat from cattle slaughtered in the United Kingdom, certain other products of such cattle and mammalian meat and bonemeal has been lifted in respect of semen, and subject to conditions of production, labelling and supervision, in respect of gelatine, tallow and certain other products. That partial lifting of the ban was done by a Commission decision that is binding on all member states of the European Community. Any member state that fails to give effect to the decision will be in breach of EC law.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those countries which have banned the import of British beef since 1987. [29036]

Water Treatment

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the annual cost of water treatment to remove pollutants derived from agricultural activity from (a) United Kingdom waterways and (b) United Kingdom drinking water supplies; and if he will make a statement. [32289]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

Government policy is to take measures to reduce the risk of pollution from agricultural sources. Some costs are incurred in dealing with pollutants arising from agricultural activity but information is not collected centrally. Water suppliers in the United Kingdom have spent around £150 million per annum between 1990–91 and 1994–95 on treatment to remove pesticides and nitrates from drinking water supplies.

WALES

Cattle Slaughter

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the locations his Department is (a) using and (b) considering using for the storage of the remains of cattle aged 30 months or over following processing of carcasses at rendering plants prior to final disposal; what is the estimated (a) maximum and (b) minimum periods these remain will be at these storage sites; and if he will make a statement. [31557]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Intervention Board executive agency is currently storing the resultant material from animals rendered under the 30-month scheme at stores in Exeter, Belfast, Liverpool and Gloucestershire.

Other locations will be considered in due course as it becomes apparent that more storage facilities are required. As announced by my hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture on 16 April, a number of options for the disposal of meat and bonemeal produced at plants are under active consideration and in all cases full weight will be given to protecting the environment. The options include incineration and energy recovery. The period of storage will vary between stores and will be dependent upon the final disposal route chosen.

Mobile Homes (Council Tax)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the application of the council tax upon mobile homes. [32886]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A mobile home that is someone's sole or main residence and is stationed with a degree of permanence, with its pitch, constitutes a dwelling liable to council tax.

Health Authorities

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations he has received from health authorities concerning the level of funding provided to them by the Welsh Office for 1996–97 and the implications for contracts with the providing trusts; and if he will make a statement. [32269]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Since October 1995, six letters have been received by my right hon. Friend and four parliamentary questions have been answered. Contracts are a matter between NHS trusts and health authorities.

Postage Costs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department spent on postage in the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96; and how many items were posted during these periods. [32848]

Mr. Hague: The information is as follows:

Financial year	Postage (£)	Number of items
1994–95	496,869	1,178,038
1995–96	427,616	1,203,371

Enterprise Zones

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy on enterprise zones in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [32884]

Mr. Hague: In December 1987, the Government announced that the enterprise zone scheme would not be extended other than in exceptional circumstances.

Cattle Database

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to establish a national (Wales) cattle database. [32892]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: In the Government's response to the Agriculture Select Committee report on the identification and registration of farm livestock last year, we recognised that a national database might be an appropriate solution to the new arrangements to be introduced by the EU after 1996. This will need to be looked at in more detail. In the meantime, interested organisations are being consulted about the Government's proposals for compulsory cattle passports. These documents will improve animal identification and traceability and are an important element in the measures being taken by the Government to restore confidence in British beef.

Pharmacies

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of pharmacies in Wales by year since 1979. [33081]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is given in the following table

Cardiff Airport

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future prospects for Cardiff airport. [33162]

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Driving Offences

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Attorney-General on how many occasions in the last five years a charge of manslaughter has been brought as a result of a driving offence. [32802]

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

The information available to me shows that 64 manslaughter charges were brought in England and Wales during the period 1990 to 1994, following the commission of a motoring offence.

Information for 1995 is not yet available.

[31551]

Mr. Ancram: (a) The Intervention Board is currently storing rendered remains of Northern Ireland cattle aged 30 months or over at stores in Belfast and Liverpool.

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr. W. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from G. P. Fraser to Mr. Seamus Mallon, dated 18 June 1996:

[32081]

Sir John Wheeler: I have asked the chief constable to consider the feasibility of collating this information. I will then consider whether the costs of producing the figures outweigh the benefits of having them. Mr. Miller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what guidelines he has issued to research councils as to the use of money allocated for expenditure on indirect costs. [31588]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has not issued any guidance to the research councils concerning the use of money allocated for expenditure on indirect costs within research grants to higher education institutions. The indirect costs awarded in these grants was set at 40 per cent. of the staff component of the grant in 1992 by the then Secretary of State for Education and Science.

Arms Exports

Miss Lestor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures the United Kingdom will propose to the forthcoming G7 summit on 28 and 29 June to limit export credits for arms. [32700]

Mr. Oppenehim: The UK continues to press in international forums that export credits and other financial support extended to the poorest developing countries should be focused primarily on goods and services which will foster and sustain their economic rehabilitation and development.

Milk Marque

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the Office of Fair Trading started its inquiry into Milk Marque; and when it is expected to report. [32645]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Office of Fair Trading has been closely monitoring developments in the milk market since its deregulation in November 1994. During this time, the office has received a number of complaints about alleged abuses of monopoly power by Milk Marque. It is for the Director General of Fair Trading to consider whether there are grounds for him to use his powers under the provisions of the Fair Trading Act 1973 to make a monopoly reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. He hopes to reach a decision at the earliest opportunity.

Recruitment

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much his Department spent in recruiting staff to his Department and its executive agencies during the 1994–95 and 1995–96 financial years; and how many staff were recruited in each of these years. [31401]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have asked the agencies to reply directly to the hon. Member. As for the remainder of my Department, in 1994–95 46 staff were recruited to permanent positions at a cost of £386, 129. All these staff were at grade 7 or below. Letter from John S. Holden to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 18 June 1996:

I have been asked by the President of the Board of Trade to reply on behalf of Companies House to your recent Parliamentary Question (as/2400) concerning recruitment numbers and costs.

The numbers recruited during 1994–95 and 1995–96 were as follows, itemised by grade:

Recruitment Analysis: By substantive grade. Financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96

	1994–95		1995–96

SGB2	69	58.38	61	49.83
Totals	104	87.65	155	133.0

I should explain that the majority of those particularly at the AA and SGB2 grades were casual staff on short term appointments.

All recruitment at Companies House is undertaken by our Personnel Section. Recruitment costs are not itemised separately but are included within the general costs of that section.

Mr. Shaw: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action his Department is taking to protect the interests of owners of ostriches purchased from the Ostrich Farming Corporation Ltd. [32930]

Mr. Taylor: Following inquiries under part XIV of the Companies Act 1985, the Secretary of State presented a petition for the winding-up of the company in the public interest and, at the same time, sought and shortly afterwards obtained the appointment of the official receiver as provisional liquidator of the company. The official receiver is in communication with the farming companies to which the company contracted out the day-to-day care of such ostriches and with owners and representatives of owners, and is continuing to seek the directions of the court in relation to this.

Mr. Shaw: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the compliance of the accounting records kept by the directors of the Ostrich Farming Corporation Ltd. with Companies Act legislation; and what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the company's records of assets and liabilities. [32933]

Mr. Taylor: Following inquiries under part XIV of the Companies Act 1985 the Secretary of State presented a petition to the court for the winding-up of the company in the public interest and has applied for and obtained the appointment of the official receiver as provisional liquidator of the company. The official receiver has taken into his possession the known books and records, including those which are computerised and will, if appropriate, report on any deficiencies he may find in such records to the appropriate authority.

Mr. Shaw: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on how many occasions the marketing of ostriches by the Ostrich Farming Corporation Ltd. and the operation of the company contravening (a) financial services, (b) companies and (c) banking legislation. [32931]

Mr. Taylor: If the Department discovers possible contraventions of legislation in the course of its inquiries, it considers these carefully and, if appropriate, takes action or reports its findings to those with responsibility for such action, but I cannot comment on individual cases.

Mr. Shaw: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what investigations he has conducted into newspapers which carried advertisements for the sale of ostriches by the Ostrich Farming Corporation Ltd. (a) in respect of their carrying out appropriate investigations prior to accepting the advertising and (b) the compliance of the advertisements with the financial services legislation. [32928]

Mr. Taylor: In respect of (a) none.

Under the self-regulatory system of advertising controls in the UK, it is the responsibility of the Advertising Standards Authority to ensure that the advertising industry complies with its agreed codes of practice.

Mr. Ian Taylor: The contract runs to 31 December 1996 in the first instance, with the possibility of renewal for a further two years if all parties are content.

Framework IV Programmes

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations have been made to the European Commission on funding for research and development under the European framework IV programmes. [33133]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Information on representations made to the European Commission on this subject is not held centrally. The budgets for the fourth framework programme for research and technological development were established in decisions 1110/94/EC and 94/268/Euratom and the decisions which subsequently amended them to take account of the enlargement of the European Union. The Commission has recently proposed an increase of 700 mecu in the funding of the programme. The UK has opposed this through the usual negotiation machinery both because of its implications for the European Union's financial perspectives and because no convincing case has been made for the additional expenditure on its merits.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his policy in respect of the principle and structure of the research and development task forces under the European framework IV programmes. [33134]

Mr. Taylor: The UK has welcomed the task force initiative. Task forces can play a useful role in improving prioritisation and co-ordination in the fourth framework programme as long as they are not too prescriptive. Experience suggests that they are most effective when they involve member states closely, focus on clearly defined areas where publicly funded R and D can make a real contribution to resolving a market failure and consult widely and meaningfully with industry and other relevant interests. It is important that framework programme IV's established decision-making procedures are fully respected in any implementation of task force recommendations.

Business Links

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many business links have a design consultant or consultancy as part of the service they offer to small and medium enterprises. [33548]

Mr. Page: All business links are to offer design services and have been invited to bid for funding.

To date, proposals from 50 business links partnerships have been approved and 27 design counsellors are in post.

Customer Charters

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list (a) the customer charters which are currently in use within his Department and its executive agencies and (b) the charters which have been withdrawn. [32828]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The information requested on customers charters currently in use within my Department and it executive agencies is as follows:

(a) Charters:

The Redundancy Payments Service

Charter Standard Statements:

Companies House

The Insolvency Service

Patent Office

Radiocommunications Agency

Overseas Trade Services

Commissioners for the Rights of Trade Union Members

(b) None.

Statistics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which statistics his Department has discontinued (a) the collection and (b) the publication of since 1989. [32867]

Mr. Lang: In 1989 responsibility for the collection and publication of economic statistics was transferred from my Department to the Central Statistical Office—now the Office for National Statistics. Since that, there have been no major changes in the collection orf publication of the statistics that remain within the control of my Department. Minor changes in statistical series are made from time to time in response to the requirements of Government and international organisations for statistical information.

Postage Costs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much his Department spent on postage in the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96; and how many items were posted during these periods. [32842]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Expenditure on postal services in each of the years was as follows:

1994–95: £793,000

1995–96: £718,000

Volumetric data are not available for 1994–95. In 1995–96, 1,175,698 items were despatched from headquarters offices. These items account for 92 per cent. of the postal expenditure.

Companies (Financial Assistance)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if a financial interest was declared by Mr. Z when he was a director of company Y, the identities having been supplied to him, at a time when this company received financial assistance from his Department; which form this declaration took; if the declaration was voluntary; if Mr. Z absented himself from the relevant meetings; what procedures were followed by his officials in vetting the application(s); and if he will make a statement. [30038]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 20 May 1996]: Members of the South West industrial development board are required as a matter of routine to declare directorships and other financial interests, and Mr. Z complied with this principle in respect of his directorship of company Y. He absented himself from the discussion by the board of the one regional selective assistance case involving the company arising during his period as a member, and officials additionally ensured that he did not see papers relating to that case. The application was appraised by the Department's south-west regional office following the usual procedures for cases of that size.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those individuals and consultancies that have advised his Department's south-west regional office on applications from companies for financial assistance since 1980. [28752]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 13 May 1996]: In addition to those listed in my answer of 4 June 1996, Official Report, column 308, the following external advisers have assisted the Department's south-west regional office—now the Government office for the south-west—on applications from companies for financial assistance since 1980:

Mr. J. A. Strzelecki, Accounting and Marketing Services Ltd.

Mr. K. E. Holmes, Dellcourts Ltd.

Mr. J. Thornhill

Mr. Andrew Holton

Others may also have provided advice on an occasional basis in the earlier part of the period, but we have been unable to confirm this from surviving records.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the applications to his Department's south-west regional office for regional selective assistance that are prepared by company W, whose identity has been supplied to him, by (a) number and (b) percentage; what measures he has taken to ensure that such services are fairly distributed among other accountancy firms; and if he will make a statement. [30027]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 20 May 1996]: It is for applicants to decide whether to retain advisers and, if so, which. The identity of advisers is not necessarily evident from the face of the application and the total number and percentage of applications prepared with the help of company W could therefore be researched only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what financial assistance has been given by his Department since 1980 to (i) company A, (ii) company B, (iii) company C, (iv) company D, (v) company E, (vi) company F and (vii) company G, whose identities have been supplied to him by (a) type of grant and (b) date, including month. [27737]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 2 May 1996]: Four of the companies have received assistance under the Department's principal regional, enterprise and technology schemes:

Company	Scheme	Payment £	Date
A	Consultancy initiative	4,835	November 1992
D	Consultancy initiative	4,681	July 1991

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what financial assistance has been given by his Department since 1980 to (i) company H, (ii) company I, (iii) company J, (iv) company K, (v) company L, (vi) company M and (vii) company N, whose identities have been supplied to him by (a) type of grant and (b) date, including month. [27738]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 2 May 1996]: Three of the companies have received assistance under the Department's principal regional, enterprise and technology schemes:

Company	Scheme	Payment £	Date
J	Consultancy initiative	2,562	November 1990

	First project	181,229	6 payments from February 1993 to August 1994
	Second project	50,000	4 payments from March to October 1995

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what financial assistance has been given by his Department since 1980 to (i) company O, (ii) company P, (iii) company Q, (iv) company R, (v) company S, (vi) company T and (vii) company U, whose identities have been supplied to him by (a) a type of grant and (b) date, including month. [27739]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 2 May 1996]: Two of the companies have received assistance under the Department's principal regional, enterprise and technology schemes:

Company	Scheme	Payment £	Date
O	Consultancy initiative	2,513	July 1989
U	Support for innovation—first project	68,314	4 payments from January to October 1983
	Second project	58,431	4 payments from March to December 1984

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 29 April, Official Report, columns 363–64, what was the value of the offer to Porthcurno Management Company Ltd.; on what date (a) the application and (b) the offer were made; and what was the nature of the financial assistance offered. [28302]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 7 May 1996]: The offer to Porthcurno Management Company Ltd. was for £500,000 regional selective assistance grant and was made in December 1993, the application having been made two months earlier.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 29 April, Official Report, column 365, on what date regional selective assistance was granted for each of the three mentioned projects undertaken by Marine Projects (Plymouth) Ltd.; and what part of this financial assistance was made under the terms of the previous offers. [28303]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 7 May 1996]: In clarification of my earlier answer, the dates of offer and first payment of grant in respect of each of the three projects are as follows:

	Offer	First payment
First project	December 1983	January 1984
Second project	October 1986	July 1988
Third project	March 1989	January 1991

These grants were unrelated to the earlier offers of regional selective assistance made to the company.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what role was played by Mr. Kenneth Holmes in the granting of DTI financial assistance to Marine Projects (Plymouth) Ltd. since 1980. [28267]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 7 May 1996]: None.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 29 April, Official Report, column 363, if he will state (i) the advice offered by Mr.Kenneth Holmes on application for DTI financial assistance by Rodelco China Ltd. (ii) the outcome of this application, (iii) the value of the offer made to the company, (iv) if the subsequent offers made to Character Ceramics Ltd. were made in conjunction with the original offer to Rodelco China Ltd. and (v) what was the value of the offers made in 1992 and 1993 to the business when trading as Character Ceramics Ltd. [28298]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 7 May 1996]: Mr. Kenneth Holmes identified various shortcomings in the initial application by Rodelco China which led the Department's south-west regional office to reject the application in June 1992. A second subsequent application was made by Rodelco China in July 1992, which resulted in an offer of £88,000 regional selective assistance in November 1992 to the business, by the then incorporated as Character Ceramics Ltd. A third application resulted in a further offer of £20,000 in March 1993.

Europa Tool Co.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many representations he has had concerning the location of the Europa Tool Co. [32244]

Mr. Ancram: I have been asked to reply.

Thirty-eight representations have been made to the Northern Ireland office concerning the Europa Tool Co.

South West Regional Development Board

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the average attendance for his Department's South West regional development board for each year since 1990; what number constitutes a quorum; and what changes (a) have been implemented since 1990 and (b) will be implemented in the future. [30028]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 20 May 1996]: The average number of members attending is as follows:

1990: 5.75
1991: 5.00
1992: 5.67
1993: 5.50
1994: 6.67
1995: 6.30
1996 (to date): 5.50

Members who are unable to attend a meeting may submit views in writing in advance which are circulated to those attending.

The board has throughout this period generally regarded four members, including the chairman or acting chairman, as constituting a quorum, but it has occasionally agreed to discuss cases—usually as an extraordinary meeting not making formal recommendations—despite attendees falling below this level.

The Department is reviewing, in the light of the internal report on the implications of the ROM-Data case, the quorums set for regional industrial development boards and the procedural rules covering circumstances in which numbers fall below quorum. The Government office for the south-west hopes to increase membership of its board which should, as well as strengthening the board's expertise, increase average attendance levels.

Nuclear Industry (Privatisation)

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for East Lothian (Mr. Home Robertson) of 30 January, Official Report, column 657, and the Government's reply to the second report of the Trade and Industry Committee, Session 1995–96, HC 383, on nuclear privatisation, what is the division of third-party liability for British Energy between the operator and public funds; what is the extent of the liability for compensation from public funds; which other private industries are liable for compensation to be paid out of public funds; and what plans he has to establish the maximum liability of the private operator at 300 million special driving rights. [32502]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 11 June 1996]: Under the Nuclear Installations Act 1965, as amended, the third party nuclear liability of a licensed nuclear operator is limited to £140 million per incident. The Act requires the operator to make provision, through insurance or other means, as approved by Government, for sufficient funds to be available at all times to ensure that duly established claims are satisfied up to £140 million in respect of each of the cover periods specified in the Act. The Act also provides that Government shall make available such sums, as when aggregated with funds available through insurance, or from contributions made by other parties to the Brussels convention on civil nuclear liability, or other means, may be necessary to ensure that claims up to an amount equivalent to 300 million special drawing rights—currently equivalent to £286 million—may be met. Parliament may also vote further funds.

These arrangements, which derive from the Brussels convention, are specific to the nuclear industry which is subject to strict liability and legal channelling. They apply whether an operator is in the public or private sector. When the UK limit of operator liability was set at £140 million, it took into account the capacity of commercial insurance available in the market. There has been no significant change in insurance capacity since then. The Government continue to monitor the situation.

South West Industrial Development Board

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the occasions since 1990 on which members of his Department's South West industrial development board have absented themselves from board meetings because of potential conflicts of interests, indicating the (a) date, (b) board members, (c) relevant company, (d) value of the financial assistance applied for and (e) value of assistance subsequently offered. [28753]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 13 May 1996]: The table lists the occasions on which members of the South West industrial development board are recorded as having, since 1990, absented themselves—because of potential conflicts of interest—from discussions of cases which have subsequently resulted in offers. On two occasions, as noted, they did not physically withdraw. Members have also absented themselves on 14 other occasions after which applications have been rejected or withdrawn without an offer being made.

[1] Mr. Gregory was absent from the meeting on 25 May 1994; but he remained for the discussion of the application at the meeting on 27 July 1994 when having declared an interest, it was deemed sufficient for him to remain silent.
[2] Mr. Harris having declared an interst, it was deemed sufficient for him to remain for the discussion without participating in any vote on the application.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many offers of financial assistance have been made since 1985 by his Department's South West industrial development board which have remained unpaid due to the liquidation, receivership or dissolution of the relevant companies by (a) date, (b) type of offer, (c) company and (d) reason for withdrawal of the offer. [30037]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 20 May 1996]: The following eight offers of grant under the regional selective assistance scheme have been made following advice from the South West industrial development board but will not as a consequence of the companies concerned having gone into liquidation or receivership or having been dissolved, be paid out in full:

[30036]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 20 May 1996]: Yes, although for one case it was exceptionally deemed sufficient, Mr. X having declared an interest, for him to remain provided that he did not take part in any vote on the case.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Overcrowding

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the 10 prisons with the highest levels of overcrowding in the last year. [30496]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Barry Sheerman, dated 19 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question requesting a list of the ten prisons with the highest levels of overcrowding in the last year.

Details of the ten prisons with the highest levels of overcrowding during 1995–96 are given in the attached table.

Table 1

Prison	Peak overcrowding in year (percentage)	Month peak occurred	Average for year percentage
Leicester	83	April 1995	58
Shrewsbury	74	January 1996	63
Exeter	71	November 1995	57
Chelmsford	65	February 1996	53
Durham	54	March 1996	47
Canterbury	53	November 1995	42
Swansea	53	March 1995	44
Preston	53	October 1995	41
Birmingham	50	April 1995	39
Lincoln	50	February 1996	36

Overcrowding has been calculated by dividing the population by the in use certified normal accommodation for each establishment.

At the end of May 1996, 15.5 per cent. of the population were held two to a cell designed for one, compared to 21 per cent. in April 1992.

'Trebling' (the holding of three prisoners in a cell designed for one) was eliminated in March 1994 and has not occurred at any time since then.

Prison Assaults

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average assault rate in each prison for the financial year 1995–96. [32352]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 19 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the average assault rate in each prison for the financial year 1995–96.

The attached tables show the annual rate of assaults, proven at adjudication per 100 population, in each Prison Service establishment between April 1995 and March 1996. Copies of the tables have been placed in the Library.

Television Licences

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were imprisoned following non-payment of the television licence fee in each year since 1990; and what was the average length of sentence for those imprisoned. [33318]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Michael Brown, dated 19 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about people who were imprisoned following non-payment of their television fee for every year since 1990; and what was the average length of sentence for those imprisoned.

Information on the number of fine defaulters received into Prison Service establishments in England and Wales for the years 1991–1994, by offence group is published in "Prison statistics, England and Wales" (Table 7.3 of the 1994 edition, Cm 3087), a copy of which is available in the library. No information is available prior to 1991 for non-payment of fines for using a television without a licence because the offence was not separately identified in the prison statistics. Provisional information for 1995 shows that some 730 persons (500 males and 230 females) were received into prison for defaulting on a fine after conviction for using a television without a licence. The average time imposed was 10 days for males and 9 days for females.

Asylum and Immigration Bill

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost to small firms of implementing the measures contained in the Asylum and Immigration Bill. [32112]

Miss Widdecombe: Clause 8 of the Bill is the only provision which will involve costs for business. Details were set out in the reply to a question from the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche) on 21 May, Official Report, column 97.

Liquor Licensing

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the organisations his Department involved in the consultation process on (a) apprenticeship schemes in the drinks industry and (b) proposed changes to the liquor licensing legislation to extended permitted hours. [33384]

Mr. Kirkhope: Table A lists the organisations which were consulted or which offered comments on allowing 16 to 17-year-olds on approved apprenticeship schemes to work in bars.

Table B lists the organisations which were sent the 30 May consultation paper about extending licensing hours. Comments from any other organisation or individual would be welcome. The consultation lasts until 30 August.

Copies of the tables have been placed in the Library.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Judicial Review

Ms Hodge: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on how many occasions in each Session since 1991–92 legislation has been introduced into Parliament by his Department, with the purpose of (a) removing the effects of a judicial review decision or (b) implementing a judicial review decision; and if he will list the relevant legislative provisions. [33589]

Mr. Streeter: No such legislation has been introduced.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many decisions by his Department were challenged by way of judicial review in each Session since 1991–92; and if he will list in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld by the court, (b) the court found for the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgment and (d) the Department appealed successfully against the judicial review decision. [33573]

Mr. Streeter: Excluding applications for judicial review of decisions of courts and tribunals, and of bodies exercising a judicial discretion such as the Legal Aid Board, there were three applications for judicial review in the Session 1992–93, one in 1994–95 and two in the current Session. One of the applications this Session has been stayed; all others were dismissed.

TREASURY

Customs and Excise Investigation

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if (a) Metta Trading Ltd. and (b) Metalchem International Ltd. are the subject of current investigations by HM Customs and Excise; [33298]

(2) on what occasions (a) Metta Trading Ltd. and (b) Metalchem International Ltd. were the subject of investigations by HM Customs and Excise between 1991 and 1996. [33299]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: It is not the normal practice of the Commissioners of Customs and Excise to reveal, other than in the course of legal proceedings, details of whether particular companies or individuals are, or are not, the subject of investigation. Provision of such details might be both unfair to those caught up in customs inquiries and prejudice current or future investigation.

Gross Domestic Product

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give for 1979 and for each year since 1986, (a) gross domestic product at current factor cost (b) gross domestic product at constant factor cost and (c) gross domestic product per capita for (i) Merseyside and (ii) each region of the United Kingdom. [33287]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The latest county estimates of gross domestic product at current prices for the years 1989, 1991 and 1993, and regional estimates for 1984, were published in the March 1996 issue of "Economic Trends". This publication, as well as data for earlier years, are available in the House of Commons Library. Estimates of regional and county gross domestic product are not calculated at constant prices, as there are no regional price deflators available.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the rate of VAT or comparable tax for each of the countries of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development. [33339]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The standard rates of VAT in the member countries of the OECD which apply VAT are set out in the table.

Rates of VAT in OECD member countries

Country	Standard rate (per cent.)
Austria	20
Belgium	21
Canada	7
Czech Republic	22
Denmark	25
Finland	22
France	20.6
Germany	15
Greece	18
Iceland	24.5
Ireland	21
Italy	19
Japan	3
Luxembourg	15
Mexico	15
Netherlands	17.5
New Zealand	12.5
Norway	23
Portugal	17
Spain	16
Sweden	25
Switzerland	6.5
Turkey	15
United Kingdom	17.5

The two remaining member countries of the OECD, Australia and the United States, do not have VAT. Australia levies a wholesale tax, WST, on certain Australian manufactured goods and certain imported goods. A wide range of goods are exempt from WST, and those which are taxable are subject to different rates. The majority of goods are taxable at the rate of 22 per cent., although there are also rates of 12 per cent. and 32 per cent. In the United States, the majority of states impose a retail sales tax, RST, which generally applies to sales of goods to final consumers within the state's jurisdiction. Rates of RST vary according to the state concerned.

Taxation

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of national income is currently taken in taxation; and what was the figure in 1979. [33361]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Budget estimate of total taxes and national insurance contributions as a percentage of gross domestic product, GDP, in 1995–96 was 36 per cent. In 1979–80, the comparable figure was 35½ per cent. An outturn estimate for 1995–96 is not yet available.

Since 1979, public sector borrowing has averaged 2½ per cent. of GDP. Under the last Labour Government, public sector borrowing averaged nearly 7 per cent. of GDP. If Labour had kept borrowing down to the same level that this Government have achieved, taxes would have been higher under Labour by an average of nearly 3 per cent. of GDP.

Population Statistics

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the population were men under the age of 25 years in each of the last 20 years for which figures are available. [33185]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 18 June 1996]: The information is given in the table.

Research and Economic Performance

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the report on the "Relationship between Publicly Funded Basic Research and Economic Performance" submitted to his Department by the science policy research unit at the university of Sussex. [33380]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 18 June 1996]: The Treasury intends to publish this report shortly. I shall arrange for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Millennium Commissioners

Mrs. Clywd: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) on which dates, to which location, for what purpose and at what cost, the millennium commissioners have visited areas of the United Kingdom outside London; [32432]

(2) on which dates, to which location, for what purpose and at what cost, the millennium commissioners have visited Wales; [32431]

(3) on which dates, to which location, for what purpose and at what cost, the millennium commissioners have visited countries outside the United Kingdom. [32433]

Mrs. Virgina Bottomley: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall reply to the hon. Member in my capacity as chairman of the commission and place copies of my reply in the Library of the House.

British Library

Mr. Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what she estimates to be the final cost of the new British library building at St. Pancras. [33972]

Mrs. Virgina Bottomley: The final outturn of the project will not be known until all final accounts have been settled. Our estimates is that this will be at least a year after practical completion, which is targeted for December 1996. However, the latest estimate of the outturn for the project is £511.1 million, which represents a 3 per cent. increase over the present ceiling of £496 million. The Chief Secretary to the Treasury has agreed an increase to the project ceiling to reflect this.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Chessington Computer Centre

Mr. Butler: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make an announcement on the progress of the sale of Chessington computer centre. [33837]

Mr. Freeman: I informed the House on 15 May of the identity of the three organisations that had been invited to submit final offers for Chessington computer centre. Final offers were received on 12 June. I have now considered these offers, and have selected a partnership comprising the Chessington management and employee buy-out team, Integris UK and financial backers as the preferred bidder. Detailed discussions with the partnership will now commence with the intention of reaching final agreement for an early completion of the sale of the business.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Butler: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement about the arrangements for printing statutory instruments. [33838]

Mr. Freeman: Some of the printing of statutory instruments has been contracted out by HMSO for over 30 years as the most cost-effective way of producing them. A careful examination has recently been made of the legislation which refers to HMSO and the Queen's printer. This has revealed that while the Queen's printer can contract out the printing of statutes, this may not be the case for statutory instruments. The Queen's printer is currently also the controller of HMSO. After privatisation, the Queen's printer and controller will remain in the public sector responsible for residual HMSO.

HMSO's records show, for as far back as they are available, that statutory instruments were being printed by commercial contractors in January 1965. It is likely that the practice is somewhat older. Currently, around half the printing work for statutory instruments is contracted out at an annual cost of some £200,000. In order to put the validity of this practice in relation to statutory instruments beyond doubt, the Government intend to legislate before the summer recess. The legislation will be retrospective in effect in order to cover existing statutory instruments printed for, rather than by, HMSO.

The privatisation process, subject to meeting the safeguards required by Parliament, will continue as planned with completion during the summer and on the basis that the Queen's Printer would be able to print all statutory instruments. Meanwhile, HMSO will enter into no more external printing contracts for statutory instruments.

Information Superhighways

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement regarding the ethical issues relating to information superhighways. [33013]

Mr. Freeman: The development of information superhighways and the growth of multimedia applications raise a number of issues which are relevant to the responsibilities of several Government Departments and other bodies. The CCTA in particular has been working on research which has made an important contribution to consideration within Government. Since questions of information superhighways regulation bear particularly strongly upon the responsibilities of the Department of Trade and Industry, I have agreed with my hon. Friend the Minister for Science and Technology that his Department will take the lead in any Government statements in this area. On 21 May 1996, my hon. Friend made a speech to the Internet Service Providers Association setting out the Government's views on these matters. A copy of the speech has been placed in the House Library.

Deregulation

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what measures he is proposing at the EU intergovernmental conference to promote deregulation. [32621]

Mr. Freeman: Making less, but better EC legislation remains a priority for the Government. As we made clear in the IGC White Paper, we will continue our efforts to achieve this both inside and outside the IGC.

Ministerial Relationships

Mr. Allen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the rules or guidance which govern the relationship between Secretaries of State and junior Ministers. [33111]

Mr. Freeman: "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" describes the roles of Ministers in charge of Departments and Ministers outside the Cabinet. The distribution of ministerial responsibilities is published in the "List of Ministerial Responsibilities".

Century House

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to the answer of 16 February 1995, Official Report, column 805, what has been the cost of maintenance, including figures for fees and VAT payments, of Century house since 16 February 1995; and what plans there are for the building. [33383]

Mr. Freeman: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to Property Advisers to the Civil Estate, under its chief executive, Mr. Neil Borrett. I have asked him to reply to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mr. N. E. Borrett to Mr. Harry Barnes, dated 18 June 1996:

The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster has asked me to reply to your question about Century House.

Since 16th February 1995 the cost of maintenance, including fees and VAT, has been £146,140.

A planning application for conversion to residential use has been made. Following the grant of planning permission, it is proposed that the property will be sold in the open market for conversion to residential use.

ENVIRONMENT

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local government contracts subject to compulsory competitive tendering have been awarded (a) in-house and (b) to private companies. [33286]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information is not held centrally by the Department but the latest Local Government Management Board survey shows that the private sector currently has 24.8 per cent. of contracts by value, in-house teams have 73.3 per cent. and the other 1.7 per cent. are held by a management buy-out companies or joint venture companies.

Judicial Review

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many decisions by his Department were challenged by way of judicial review in each Session since 1991–92; and if he will list in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld by the court, (b) the court found for the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgment and (d) the Department appealed successfully against the judicial review decision. [33566]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information is not held centrally in a form which would enable the Secretary of State to answer this question without incurring disproportionate cost.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions in each Session since 1991–92 legislation has been introduced into Parliament by his Department, with the purpose of (a) removing the effects of a judicial review decision or (b) implementing a judicial review decision; and if he will list the relevant legislative provisions. [33585]

Sir Paul Beresford: There has been one instance in which legislation has been introduced into Parliament with the purpose of partially reversing a decision of the court in a case of judicial review against a local authority. This was the case of R. v. London borough of Ealing ex parte Lewis, where it was held that the local housing authority did not have power to include certain expenditure on sheltered accommodation in its housing revenue account. Sections 126 and 127 of the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 were introduced to change this effect of the decision. Parallel provisions were introduced for Scotland in sections 149 and 150 of that Act.

There have been no instances of legislation introduced to implement a judicial review decision.

Joint Nature Conservation Committee

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many core posts there were in the Joint Nature Conservation Committee in (i) 1994–95 and (ii) 1995–96; and how many are projected for 1996–97. [33320]

Mr. Clappison: The average number of permanent posts and fixed-term appointments assigned to the JNCC in the financial years in question is:

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Permanent	53	49	43
Fixed term	44	34	34

Mineral Sites

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list (a) the mineral sites on the first lists of sites prepared by all mineral planning authorities in compliance with mineral planning guidance note 14 where the sites are wholly or partly within sites of special scientific interest and (b) the names of the sites of special scientific interest concerned. [33529]

Sir Paul Beresford: This information is not held centrally. It can be obtained from individual mineral planning authorities who are statutorily responsible for preparing the first lists of mineral sites in their areas.

Environmental Education

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made with preparing a strategy for environmental education. [33900]

Mr. Gummer: I commissioned Jennifer Jones, a secondee to my Department, to carry out a review of education, training and awareness about the environment. She prepared a report which made a range of recommendations to the key players in environmental education. We have drawn up a strategy for environmental education on the basis of this report which takes account of the recommendations in it, and provides a framework within which to consider how they should be taken forward.

Government Strategy for Environmental Education in England

Introduction

Education is a central means of furthering the Government's commitment to sustainable development. Education can give people that capacity to address environmental issues which is vital to achieving a sustainable society. Education in its broadest sense includes not just formal study, but personal awareness, experience and interests developed over a period of time—at home, at school, college or university, at work, and in the wider community. This strategy therefore provides a general framework which encompasses the national curriculum, the 16 to 19 sector, further and higher education, training and informal education. It accommodates the scale and diversity of environmental education which is already taking place, and provides a focus for encouraging its further development.

Objective

To instil in people of all ages, through formal and informal education, and training, the concepts of sustainable development and responsible global citizenship; and to develop, renew and reinforce their capacity to address environment and development issues throughout their lives, both at home and at work.

This will be achieved by continuing to promote and encourage environmental education and training through relevant programmes and policies and as part of the continuing dialogue with business and industry, local authorities, the education sector and non-governmental organisations.

helping to ensure that appropriate materials for each phase of the education and training process are readily available; facilitating and supporting initiatives which promote sustainable development and responsible global citizenship to people in the course of their daily lives;

continuing to ensure that the education process is alive to the needs of employers; establishing suitable arrangements to monitor and encourage progress in the application of sustainable development principles and the integration of environmental issues in education so that activities may be changed, redirected, or reinforced where necessary.

Progress to date:

Three exercises to facilitate environmental education through the national curriculum are nearing completion;

references to the importance of sustainability and responsible global citizenship have been included in the Dearing review of qualifications for 16 to 19-year-olds;

a report on the implementation of the recommendations of the 1993 Toyne report has been completed;

work has commenced by the Department for Education and Employment, with cross departmental support, to oversee the preparation of occupational standards in environmental management;

financial support for environmental education. This includes support for the Council for Environmental Education, the National Association for Environmental Education, Forum for the Future and environmental education projects, including some in schools, through the environmental action fund; the Centre for Research, Education and Training in Energy, the eco-schools programme and an energy efficiency award scheme for schools in partnership with British Gas; support for the going for green campaign and for local agenda 21.

Future action:

The Government will continue to encourage, promote, support and facilitate environmental education initiatives;

the Government will establish suitable arrangements to monitor and encourage progress in the application of sustainable development principles and the integration of environmental issues in education. These arrangements will need to cover the nine Government Departments with an interest;

the Government will also consider whether to convene an external panel, perhaps through going for green, including representatives from education and training, business and industry and environmental specialists. The panel's role would be to facilitate co-ordination of the activities of all the sectors involved, and to make recommendations to the key players; a seminar will be held for invited participants on the review of the 1993 Toyne report.

Copies of the report on environmental education, training and awareness have been placed in the Library of the House, and are available from my Department on request.

We shall consider how to respond to the detailed recommendations in the report in the context of implementing the strategy for environmental education.

Environment Agency

Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to lay before Parliament a draft of the guidance that Ministers are required to give to the Environment Agency under section 4 of the Environment Act 1955. [33973]

Mr. Gummer: With my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales, I am today laying before the House a draft of the guidance which Ministers are required under section 4 of the Environment Act 1995 to give to the Environment Agency on its objectives, including the contribution it is to make towards the achievement of sustainable development.

We will also provide to the Environment Agency an explanatory document which sets the statutory guidance into context and offers a commentary on the agency's duty to take account of likely costs and benefits. Copies of this document have been placed in the Library.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on the payment of housing benefit to banks and building societies to meet the costs of housing association loans. [31982]

Mr. Roger Evans: I have been asked to reply.

Housing benefit may be paid by a local authority directly to a claimant's landlord in order to protect public funds. Regulations also provide local authorities with discretion to determine the appropriate method of payment which may result in payments being made directly into a bank or building society account. It is for landlords to decide how they wish to use these funds, which may include the repayment of a loan.

Local authorities do not pay housing benefit to banks or building societies to meet housing association loans. It is available to help tenants meet their reasonable rent liability.

PRIME MINISTER

Honours

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Prime Minister what proportion of those recommended for honours were civil servants, members of the armed forces and Government employees (a) in each of the two years prior to the changes of 1993 and (b) in each year thereafter. [33051]

The Prime Minister: Figures for civil servants are not available separately. The proportions of state servants[1] awarded honours in the new year and birthday lists of around 1,000 names each, are listed. The number of military awards[2] shows the number of awards in the defence services lists, which are purely military, issued at the same time following recommendations to the Queen by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Defence:

Year	Percentage of state servants[1]	Number of military awards[2]
1991	19	533
1992	19	527
1993	18	475
1994	17	424
1995	16	320
1996	17	315

[1] Figures are for state servants which include not only civil servants in headquarters, professional and local posts, but also those giving wider state service, for example in the museums and galleries field; to both Houses of Parliament; and as circuit judges.

[2] The numbers of military awards include members of the regular and reserve forces but exclude special lists for awards in a designated theatre (during the period from 1991 these have included Northern Ireland and the Gulf). Between 1994 and 1996, 56 meritorious awards were taken from the honours lists and were published separately in operational lists.

Since March 1993, any automatic recognition to staff in particular posts has ceased. Awards for state servants are selected on merit, reflecting service beyond what might normally be expected.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Health and Safety

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what was the cost in each of the past five years of (a) sick pay and (b) compensation paid to employees of his Department or their families, or members of the public, as a result of (i) minor, (ii) major and (iii) fatal injuries related to the work of his Department, detailing incidents involving information technology and those involving expenditure of more than £5,000; [33482]

(2) what was the cost in each of the past five years of rectifying working conditions that were the responsibility of his Department and its agencies, to bring them up to acceptable health and safety standards, detailing incidents involving information technology and those involving expenditure of more than £5,000. [33483]

Mr. Hanley: The information is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions in each of the past five years health and safety problems in his Department and its agencies have been reported via internal monitoring; and on how many occasions the Health and Safety Commission has become involved. [33480]

Mr. Hanley: Comprehensive figures are not available. Problems reported in the last three years by FCO and ODA staff working in the UK were as follows:

1993: 27

1994: 146

1995: 161

In addition, on-going training and workplace risk assessment programmes have identified other problems, but figures are not recorded centrally.

The Health and Safety Commission has not become involved with any problems.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) minor, (b) major and (c) fatal injuries have been suffered by staff in his Department and its agencies in work-related incidents in each of the past five years, showing in each year how many were related to information technology and giving details of all incidents involving fatalities. [33481]

Mr. Hanley: Comprehensive figures for reported accidents suffered by FCO and ODA staff working in the UK are available for only the last three years. Details are as follows:

	1993	1994	1995
Minor	131	131	101
Major	19	11	12
Fatalities	—	—	—

Information technology related accidents are included in these statistics, but are not separately identifiable.

Gibraltar

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the average time taken for vehicle crossings from (a) Gibraltar to Spain and (b) Spain to Gibraltar in each of the last eight weeks for which figures are available. [33242]

Mr. David Davis: Average delays are:

(a) Gibraltar to Spain

17–23 April: 90–180 minutes

24–30 April: 90–120 minutes

1–7 May: 90–12 minutes

8–14 May: 45–90 minutes

15–21 May: 45–120 minutes

22–28 May: 60–180 minutes

29 May—4 June: 80–180

5–11 June: 10–20

(b) Spain to Gibraltar

17–23 April: 20–30 minutes

24–30 April: 45–60 minutes

1–7 May: 10–45 minutes

8–14 May: 10–60 minutes

15–21 May: 0–60 minutes

22–28 May: 0–60 minutes

29 May—4 June: 0–30 minutes

5–11 June: 10–40 minutes

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the European Commission in respect of delays in vehicle crossings between Spain and Gibraltar. [33241]

Mr. Davis: We have raised with the European Commission our strong concerns about these delays.

Nuclear Materials

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's policy concerning a nuclear fissile material cut-off convention; and what assessment he has made of the impact of such a convention on international security. [33189]

Mr. David Davis: We supported the mandate agreed at the conference on disarmament in Geneva in March 1995 for an ad hoc committee to begin work on a treaty banning the future production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices—fissile material cut-off treaty, FMCT.

Such a ban could be a significant contribution to non-proliferation and international security, provided that it enjoyed wide support including from those countries which have not yet signed the nuclear non-proliferation treaty. We therefore continue to urge all members of the conference on disarmament to support an early start to negotiations to conclude a satisfactory and universally applicable FMCT.

Visas (Russia)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many applications for the issue of visas to Russian citizens to visit the United Kingdom were received by (i) the British embassy in Moscow and (ii) the consulate in St. Petersburg. [33436]

Mr. Hanley: The number of UK visit visa applications received from Russian citizens by our posts in Moscow and St. Petersburg in 1995 were.

1995

Moscow: 95,474

St. Petersburg: 18,019

Total: 113,493

Haiti

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has taken part in about the future of the United Nations peacekeeping mission in Haiti. [33538]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The United Kingdom mission in New York has participated fully in Security Council discussions on the future of the UN mission in Haiti.

Judicial Review

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many decisions by his Department were challenged by way of judicial review in each Session since 1991–92; and if he will list in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld by the court, (b) the court found for the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgment and (d) the Department appealed successfully against the judicial review decision. [33565]

Mr. Hanley: This information is not held centrally. So far as I have been able to ascertain, six applications for judicial review have been decided in the period in question, in two of which the applicants were successful. The Department did not appeal in either case.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions in each Session since 1991–92 legislation has been introduced into Parliament by his Department, with the purpose of (a) removing the effects of a judicial review decision or (b) implementing a judicial review decision; and if he will list the relevant legislative provisions. [33586]

Mr. Hanley: None.

Iran

Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the National Council of Resistance of Iran; and if he will make a statement. [33714]

Mr. Hanley: It is our long-standing policy not to have any official contact with the National Council of Resistance of Iran. The NCRI is a coalition dominated by the Mojahedin-e-Khalq—MKO—Islamic group, which has a long history of involvement with Iraq.

The MKO has been seeking western support by portraying itself as a "democratic" alternative to the present Iranian regime. It is difficult to reconcile this with the MKO's history of violence. Our European and US partners share our general approach to the MKO. We have no intention of recognising it as an alternative to the present Government in Tehran.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Postage Costs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much her Department spent on postage in the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96; and how many items were posted during these periods. [32840]

Mr. Robin Squire: Expenditure on postage in the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 was £1,363,741 and £1,274,376. Figures for the number of items posted in 1994–95 are not available but the 1995–96 figure is approximately 4 million.

GCSE Scores

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will provide (i) the percentage of pupils achieving a grade G or higher, (ii) the percentage achieving a grade C or higher, and (iii) the average point score per pupil in (a) GCSE English language, (b) GCSE mathematics and (c) both English language and mathematics; and if he will provide the same by gender in each case, for all 15-year-old pupils in the maintained sector of each local education authority area for 1992 and 1995, on the same basis as the DFEE school performance tables. [32954]

Mr. Paice: The data are contained in a number of tables, copies of which will be placed in the Library.

The tables for 1992 and 1995 give (i) the percentage of pupils achieving a grade G or higher, (ii) the percentage of pupils achieving a grade C or higher, (iii) the average point score per pupil in (a) GCSE English, (b) GCSE mathematics and (c) both English and mathematics by gender of 15-year-old pupils in the maintained sector of each local education authority area in England. The average GCSE point scores are based on A* equal to 7.

Statistics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which statistics her Department has discontinued (a) the collection and (b) the publication of since 1989. [32857]

Mr. Robin Squire: Changes in the basis of compilation, presentation and publication of statistical series are made from time to time in response to the requirements of the Government and international organisations for statistical information. Others reflect changes in administrative systems on which some series are based, the developments of new statistical techniques and technological developments affecting the compilation and dissemination of statistical data. When such changes are made, they are fully documented in the relevant statistical publications. It would be disproportionately costly to identify all the changes in our surveys and publications since 1989, therefore this reply covers those regular surveys and publications which have entirely ceased.

Exams

The last school examinations survey, SES, which provided statistics on school leavers was conducted for the academic year 1991–92. Also discontinued at that time were surveys associated with the SES—the form 113FE survey, which collected information on the academic achievements (A-level and AS) of students in further education; and the advanced supplementary, AS, survey of entries and achievements of pupils in schools.

Schools

The security in schools and ethnic monitoring of school children surveys have been discontinued since 1989. The ethnic monitoring survey collected information about ethnicity, mother tongue and religious affiliation. Ethnicity is still collected via the annual schools' census, but mother tongue and religious affiliation have been discontinued.

Teachers

Data on the ethnic origin of teachers were collected on a supplement to form 618G from 1990 to 1993. Returns were incomplete and statistics were never published.

Higher and Further Education

Shortly after the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council, PCFC, was set up in 1989, some collection and publication of data on staff and finance for these institutions previously conducted by the Department through the annual monitoring survey, AMS, and the further education revenue account survey, FERAS was taken on by the PCFC. The Department continued to conduct these surveys for Local education authority-funded institutions, although FERAS was discontinued in 1992–93.

Following the creation of the unified higher education sector in 1993 and the setting up of the Higher Education Funding Council for England, HEFCE, responsibility for the collection and publication of higher education statistics passed in 1994–95 from the Department and the universities statistical record, USR, to the Higher Education Statistics Agency, HESA. Similarly, the creation of the a new further education sector in 1993 and the setting up of the Further Education Funding Council for England, FEFC, led to the transfer to it of responsibility for the collection and publication of further education statistics from the end of 1994–95.

Consequently, a number of surveys previously conducted by the Department were discontinued and replaced by systems introduced by HESA and FEFC. The surveys discontinued were the further education statistical record, FESR, the examination results and first destinations survey, ERFDS, the annual monitoring survey, AMS, the short course record, SCRS, and the return of students enrolled at the Worker's Educational Association—the AE2 return.

Employment

The confirmed redundancy series was discontinued after the publication of statistics for June 1992. After changes in the payment of rebates from the redundancy fund in 1986 removed the financial incentive for employers to provide the information, it was found to be seriously understating the number of redundancies taking place.

Nursery School Inspections

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many inspections have been undertaken of registered establishments in the first two months of the current financial year; and what proportion of establishments these costs represent within each authority participating in the pilot scheme for nursery vouchers. [33271]

Mr. Robin Squire: No inspections of private and voluntary sector institutions participating in the nursery education voucher scheme can take place until the Nursery Education and Grant-Maintained Schools Bill has been given Royal Assent and has been commenced.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the qualifications required of the inspectors of under-fives establishments who have been newly recruited; and what proportion of these inspectors have each of the required qualifications. [33269]

Mr. Squire: In recruiting candidates for training to be registered nursery inspectors, the chief inspector of schools takes into account both relevant experience and qualifications as well as personal references.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many additional new inspectors have been recruited by The Office for Standards in Education in (a) February, (b) March, (c) April and (d) May to undertake inspection of establishments for nursery education. [33270]

Mr. Squire: For phase 1, the chief inspector invited 100 candidates to be nursery education inspectors to attend training courses in May 1996, and a further 120 and 100 in June and July 1996.

Science and Technology (Funding)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what criteria are used in the allocation of funding by the Higher Education Funding Council in the areas of science and technology; and if she will make a statement. [33169]

Mr. Forth: The Higher Education Funding Council for England allocates funds for science and technology research selectively to higher education institutions on the basis of competition. The main criterion is departments' relative strengths in research according to national and international standards, as measured in the periodic research assessment exercises. Other criteria include success in collaborating with industry and other users on research, leading to expertise and knowledge which can be used by higher education, industry and the community at large.

Internet

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 4 June, Official Report, column 398–99, how many schools in Gloucestershire have made use of the guidance available from the National Council for Educational Technology on the use of the Internet. [33127]

Mr. Robin Squire: Advice and training sessions on the Internet have been offered to all local education authority and grant-maintained schools in Gloucestershire through the school library service libraries of the future project which is supported by the National Council for Education Technology, NCET. During the project, 24 secondary schools, seven primary and two special schools in Gloucestershire took part in the sessions. In addition, four schools requested information sheets on the Internet from the NCET.

Young People (Hemsworth)

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many young people with an educational qualification below national vocational qualification level 2 in the Hemsworth constituency (i) have been and (ii) are being trained by the Wakefield training and enterprise council. [33239]

Mr. Paice: I understand that, since April 1995, 157 young people in the Hemsworth constituency have attended courses organised by Wakefield training and enterprise council, leading to a qualification below NVQ level 2. Of these, 32 young people are being trained by the TEC at present.

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many young people in the age range 18 to 25 years (a) resident in the Hemsworth constituency and (b) in related travel-to-work areas have attained national vocational qualification level 2. [33238]

Mr. Paice: The information is not available in the format requested.

I understand that, since April 1995, (a) 102 young people resident in the Hemsworth constituency have attained NVQ level 2 or above through training organised by the Wakefield training and enterprise council, and (b) 240 young people in surrounding areas have attained NVQ level 2 through training organised by the Wakefield TEC.

Other young people will have achieved NVQ level 2 or above as a result of education and training not organised by the TEC. Figures for this are not available at constituency level.

Higher Education Funding

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the public expenditure on higher education in England (a) including and (b) excluding expenditure on student maintenance in (i) cash terms, (ii) real terms and (iii) expressed as percentage of United Kingdom gross domestic product for each financial year since 1989–90; and what is planned for 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99. [33344]

Mr. Forth: The information for 1989–90 to 1995–96 is as follows:

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) primary or infant and (b) secondary schools are now grant-maintained; how many applications in each sector are pending; and if she will make a statement. [33146]

Mrs. Gillan: As at 12 June, there are 457 grant-maintained, GM, primary and 646 GM secondary schools operating. Nursery schools are not eligible to become GM . A further 24 primary schools and 11 secondary schools either have published, or are due to publish, applications for GM status following ballots in which the parents voted in favour of the school becoming GM.

St. Mary's School, Southend-on-Sea

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when her Department was advised of the proposal advanced by Church of England education authorities to transfer the St. Mary's school in East street, Southend-on-Sea to vacant premises owned by the Essex county council in Boston avenue, Southend; on what grounds her Department's permission is required for the change of location; and when she expects to come to a decision on the matter. [33553]

Mrs. Gillan: The Secretary of State's approval is required for all proposals published under section 13 of the Education Act 1980 to transfer a school to a new site. The governing body of St. Mary's school published proposals on 12 January 1995, and we hope to reach a decision shortly.

DEFENCE

Health and Safety

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in each of the past five years health and safety problems in his Department and its agencies have been reported via internal monitoring; and on how many occasions the Health and Safety Commission has become involved. [33472]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost in each of the past five years of rectifying working conditions that were the responsibility of his Department and it agencies, to bring them up to acceptable health and safety standards, detailing incidents involving information technology and those involving expenditure of more than £5,000. [33475]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Information is not held in a way which would enable this question to be answered. Rectification of working conditions could cover a wide range of measures, including for example re-arrangement of office furniture, changes in working practices and major structural changes to buildings. Not all of these would be recorded and not all of them could be costed.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) minor, (b) major and (c) fatal injuries have been suffered by staff in his Department and its agencies in work-related incidents in each of the past five years, showing in each year how many were related to information technology and giving details of all incidents involving fatalities. [33473]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, a MOD-wide accident and incident reporting system is being developed and should be supplemented by April 1997. The system will enable information about accidents occurring from April 1997. The system will enable information about accidents occurring from April 1997 onwards to be recorded centrally.

Civil Servants (Duties Abroad)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 on sending civil servants accompanying Ministers from his Department on official duties abroad. [32419]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Statistics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which statistics his Department has discontinued (a) the collection and (b) the publication of since 1989. [32864]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Analytical Services Agency, DASA, under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Paul Altobell to Mr. Mark Fisher, dated 19 June 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence Procurement about the collection and publication of statistics since 1989 as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Analytical Services Agency (DASA).

The main vehicle for the publication of statistics about Defence is "United Kingdom Defence Statistics", formerly "Statement on the Defence Estimates Volume 2". Changes are made to the contents of the publication as the Department's structure and the issues facing Defence evolve. Changes to tables between the 1989 edition and the last published edition, for 1995, are as follows:

"2.3 Analysis of the Defence budget by programme" replaced by "1.3 The Defence budget by budgetary area".

"3.7 Directorate General Ship Refitting" discontinued following Departmental re-organisation and the abolition of the directorate.

"4.1 Total MoD strength by area" replaced by "2.1 Regular Service and Civilian strengths".

"4.2 Analysis of Service personnel by programme" replaced by "2.2 UK Regular Forces by budgetary area".

"4.3 Analysis of Civilian staff by programme" replaced by "2.3 UK based Civilian personnel by budgetary area".

"4.4 Strengths of UK Regular Forces" and "4.5 Strengths of trained UK Regular Forces" replaced by "2.7 Strengths of UK Regular Forces: training and untrained".

"4.9 Strengths of Civilian staff employed in the Ministry of Defence; by type" and "4.10 Strengths of Occupational groups" replaced by "2.17 Permanent UK based Civilian personnel by grade equivalence".

"4.11 Civilian apprentices: type of establishment" and "4.12 Civilian apprentices: location" discontinued as numbers covered continued to decline.

"4.15 Recruitment of UK Regular Forces: by Service" and "4.16 Recruitment of male UK Regular Forces: by Category" replaced by "2.9 Intake from civil life of UK Regular Forces; by service and category".

"4.19 Recruitment and losses of UK based Civilian non-industrial staff by Occupational group" replaced by "2.18 Recruitment and losses of UK based Civilian personnel".

"4.20 Outflow of trained Service personnel: major skill or trade groups" discontinued.

"5.1 Social Expenditure in the Defence Budget" discontinued.

"5.2 Strengths of uniformed medical staff of the UK Regular Forces" discontinued and replaced by separate publication (TSP24).

"5.3 Service hospitals", "5.4 Sickness episodes of UK Regular Forces personnel: selected diagnoses", "5.5 Medical discharges of UK Regular Forces personnel" and "5.6 Deaths of UK Regular Forces personnel" replaced by "3.15 Health of the UK Regular Forces".

"5.7 Selected qualifications obtained under Service sponsorship" discontinued.

"5.10 Strengths of male UK Regular Forces and numbers married: by age" and "5.11 Strengths of male UK Regular Forces and numbers married: by rank" replaced by "2.8 Strengths of UK Regular Forces: by age and rank".

"5.14 Service entertainment and welfare" discontinued.

"5.15 SSVC Broadcasting division (BFBS)" discontinued.

"5.16 Service pensioners" discontinued.

"6.4 Expenditure on offshore tasks included in the Defence budget" discontinued.

"6.6 Meteorological Office" discontinued.

"6.7 Hydrographic services" discontinued.

"7.1 Ethnic origins of applicants for entry to UK Regular Forces: summary" and "7.2 Ethnic origins of applicants for entry to UK Regular Forces: Regional analysis" replaced by "2.15 Ethnic origins of applicants and entrants to UK Regular Forces",

"2.16 Ethnic composition of serving members of the UK Regular Forces" added.

"2.19 Strength of casual Civilian personnel" added.

"2.20 Defence Agencies: personnel numbers and operating costs" added.

The Department collects and analyses significant amounts of data from its own administrative system for its own internal purposes. Changes to such collections and analyses arising from Departmental re-organisations since 1989 cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Postage Costs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on postage in the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96; and how many items were posted during these periods. [32846]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the Defence Postal and Courier Services Agency, DPCS under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from T. McG. Brown to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 19 June 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Defence Postal and Courier Services Agency, I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence, the Rt. Hon. Michael Portillo MP, regarding postal costs.

As well as those costs borne by this Agency many Individual units and establishments are responsible for their own postal expenditure. The costs in 1994/95 and 1995/96 was as follows:

£ million

	1994–95	1995–96
DPCS Agency costs	0.744	1.441
Costs in other MOD areas	7.288	6.363
Total	8.062	7.804

I am sorry but MOD does not record separately the number of items posted. Indeed in the interests of economy we try to make the maximum use of contract postal arrangements, which do not necessarily depend on the number of items posted.

I hope this information is helpful.

METOP Satellite Project

Sir Michael Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies he has evaluated in respect of his Department's involvement in the polar orbiting meteorological—METOP—satellite project; and what assessment he has made of the benefits of the project for United Kingdom industry. [33252]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department is evaluating reports prepared internally and by European Meteorological Satellite—EUMETSAT—and the European Space Agency—ESA—in respect of its involvement in, and requirements for, the METOP satellite project. The benefits to UK industry is a matter for my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Armed Forces

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's forecast of the total manpower strength of the United Kingdom armed forces on 1 April 1999. [33187]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 25 March, Official Report, column 443.

Future Large Aircraft

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with his German counterpart concerning the future large aircraft programme. [33188]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has not recently discussed the future large aircraft programme with his German counterpart. However, when I met State Secretary Simon on Monday 11 March, the future large aircraft programme was among the subjects we discussed.

Nuclear Weapons (Soviet Union)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance he has given to countries of the former Soviet Union to assist with the dismantling of their nuclear weapon stocks. [33190]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The UK has supplied the Russian Government with 250 armoured supercontainers, 20 heavy-duty vehicles and spares to assist with the safe and secure dismantlement of their surplus nuclear warheads. The cost of this programme to the UK has been approximately £35 million.

Bed-and-breakfast Accommodation

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the estimated annual cost to his Department of providing bed-and-breakfast accommodation for service personnel and their families in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1994–95, (c) 1993–94, (d) 1992–93, (e) 1991–92 and (f) 1978–79. [33335]

Mr. Soames: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Judicial Review

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in each Session since 1991–92 legislation has been introduced into Parliament by his Department, with the purpose of (a) removing the effects of a judicial review decision or (b) implementing a judicial review decision; and if he will list the relevant legislative provisions. [33583]

Mr. Soames: None.

TRANSPORT

Runway Overshoots

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of overshoots at Gatwick and Heathrow airports for each of the last five years. [32786]

Mr. Norris: Statistics for runway overshoots for the whole of the period requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, figures are available for 1994 and 1995 and are as follows:

	Gatwick	Heathrow
1994	332	406
1995	355	446

Regional Airports (EU Funding)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what programmes he is putting in place to ensure that all UK regional airports can benefit from EU public service obligation funding. [32804]

Mr. Norris: EC legislation allows member states to impose a public service obligation on a scheduled air service to an airport serving a peripheral or development region in its territory or on a thin route to any regional airport in its territory, where the route is considered vital for the economic development of the region and the availability of other forms of transport is limited. A subsidy may be paid where no operator is able to provide a commercial service which complies with the terms of the PSO.

In the UK, certain routes serving the western and northern islands of Scotland are regarded as lifeline routes. The operator of air services on these routes receives subsidy from the Scottish Office or local government. PSOs are progressively being imposed on the routes in line with EC legislation, and any subsidies required will continue to be provided by the Scottish Office and the islands councils. At present, no PSOs have been imposed on mainland services.

A249

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the expected date for the opening of the A249 Iwade bypass (M2 to Kingsferry Bridge); what is the latest estimated cost of the project; and what factors underlay the delay in the completion of the scheme. [33249]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Sir Roger Moate, dated 19 June 1996:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State about the expected opening date and the latest estimated cost for the A249 between the M2 and Iwade.

Following earlier delays, construction is now entering its final phase which should see substantial completion by September. I will let you know the exact date when it is known.

When I wrote to you on 29 November 1995 I described the reasons for the delays and I enclose a copy of the letter for you case of reference.

The tender price of the project is £35,721,035. We are unable to give an estimate of the final cost without the risk of prejudicing discussions on the costs which are taking place.

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the studies that have been undertaken by his Department in connection with the preparation of the draft orders for the A249 Iwade to Queensborough corner improvement scheme including the second crossing of the Swale; what is the estimated cost of consultation and planning work leading to the publication of the draft orders; and what is the latest estimated cost of the project. [33248]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Sir Roger Moate, dated 19 June 1996:

As you know, John Watts, the Minister for the Railways and Roads, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the A249 Iwade-Queensborough Improvement scheme.

All the base ecological studies required for draft Order purposes have been completed. The Topographical Survey is due for completion later this month and the contract for the relevant Ground Investigation Survey will be awarded soon. Traffic surveys have also been undertaken.

The latest estimated cost of the planning work leading to the preparation of the draft Orders is £1.85m. The latest estimated cost of building the scheme is £97m (this includes works, preparation and supervision and land).

Traffic Area Offices

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by traffic area office, the constituencies within each traffic area boundary. [33296]

Mr. Norris: I have placed the information the Library of the House.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the total running costs for the traffic area co-ordination division within his Department. [33295]

Mr. Norris: The total running costs budget for 1996–97 for the traffic area co-ordination division—now the traffic area network unit—is £629,428.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of (a) heavy goods vehicles and (b) public service vehicles authorised to operate in each traffic office area. [33294]

Mr. Norris: The number of heavy goods vehicles and public service vehicles authorised to operate in each traffic office area as at March 1996 is as follows:

TAO	HGVs	PSVs
NETA	64,189	13,104
NWTA	66,864	12,853
WMTA	43,454	7,203

TAO	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
North Eastern	9	5	5	6	4
North Western	1	0	1	2	2
West Midlands	0	0	0	0	0
Eastern	2	33	22	29	29
South Wales	0	0	0	0	0
Western	6	12	6	7	2
South Eastern and Metropolitan	38	36	26	10	10
Scottish	0	1	1	0	2

Next Step Agencies

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the areas of policy which have been devolved to next steps agencies since April 1992. [33362]

Mr. Norris: Ministers retain overall responsibility for policy and would be consulted on any major decisions. Officials of the Department's agencies prepare policy advice for Ministers where they are in the best position to do so. Two agencies have specific day-to-day policy development responsibilities within a framework determined by Ministers.

The Marine Safety Agency, established in April 1994, has responsibility for developing and reviewing marine safety and pollution prevention policies and standards and to represent the Department's interests in those areas nationally and internationally.

The Highways Agency, established in April 1994, has responsibility for developing and co-ordination land and compensation policy issues across the whole Department.

Vehicle Insurance

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the number of motorists who currently drive without vehicle insurance. [33556]

Mr. Norris: None.

Uninsured Drivers

Mr. French: To ask the secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has come forward with to tackle the problem of uninsured drivers; following his Department's consultation with the Association of British Insurers. [33557]

Mr. Norris: I am expecting a formal report from the Association of British Insurers soon. We will be deciding on the way forward after we have seen that report.

Charter Flights

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has completed his review of policy on fifth freedom passenger charter flights. [33701]

Sir George Young: On 10 January this year, my noble friend the Minister for Aviation and Shipping announced a package of measures relating to the safety of foreign-registered aircraft, one of which was a review of policy on charter flights from the UK by airlines from countries other than those they are serving, known as fifth freedom charters. We have now completed the review of passenger charter flights, following consultation with UK airlines, tour operators and brokers and other interested bodies. We intend to make a number of changes aimed at ensuring that fifth freedom charter services continue to be the exception to the normal rule that UK holidaymakers travelling by charter airline should be carried either on UK carriers or on carriers from the country of destination. The changed procedures will give UK airlines more opportunity to offer services, while continuing to allow some flexibility, in the interests of passengers, where they are not able to do so.

The changes are as follows:-

(a) the number of fifth freedom flights which any one foreign carrier can operate from the UK in any one season—apart from flights which are permitted under EC legislation or other international agreements will be limited to 10 return flights;

(b) applications for permission to operate fifth freedom flights must normally be made at least six weeks in advance of the flight. Late applications will in certain circumstances be permitted provided they are made at least five working days in advance of the flight;

(c) applications will be published in the Civil Aviation Authority's official record in order that any UK airline may object if it has a suitable aircraft available. Late applications will be circulated to airlines by telex for objections. All decisions on applications will be published subsequently.

Fifth freedom flights will be permitted only where no UK airline is able to offer a suitable aircraft, and provided that the authorities of the foreign airline are prepared to offer similar opportunities to UK carriers and that the necessary certificates are presented to my Department.

The changes to the timetable for applications and the introduction of the published procedure will come into effect from the beginning of the winter season. The limit to the numbers of flights will be applied from 1 August this year. Applications received before this date will not count towards the limit for the current season.

Road Tax

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to transfer the responsibility for the enforcement of road tax to local authorities. [33552]

Mr. Norris: None.

London Airports

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to promote competition and consumer choice between the principal London airports. [32128]

Mr. Norris: The Government's response to the report of the runway capacity in the south east group stated that they wished to provide the opportunity for the less busy airports in the south-east to develop. Greater choice for consumers is also promoted by the Government's policies for liberalisation of air services. The RUCATSE response highlighted the opening up of Stansted and Luton for transatlantic flights.

The Transport Select Committee report on UK airport capacity, published on 21 May, included a recommendation that, during the present quinquennial review of BAA, the Civil Aviation Authority and Monopolies and Mergers Commission re-examine whether BAA should remain the provider of services to the three main south-east airports, or whether Gatwick and Stansted should be owned and operated separately from Heathrow. The Government will be responding to the TSC report in due course.

Mr. Heald: Information on entitlement to widowers' pensions in the European Union countries is contained in "Social Protection in the Member States of the European Union", published by the European Commission, a copy of which is in the Library.

Judicial Review

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on how many occasions in each Session since 1991–92 legislation has been introduced into Parliament by his Department, with the purpose of (a) removing the effects of a judicial review decision or (b) implementing a judicial review decision; and if he will list the relevant legislative provisions. [33593]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. The legislation listed below has been introduced to restore the original policy intention following judicial review decisions:

1994–95

The Income-related Benefits Schemes (Miscellaneous Amendments) (No. 6) Regulations 1994

Income Support

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans his Department has to review the current rules on the payment of mortgage interest to income support claimants in cases where it is aware that the home was obtained through illegal means; and if he will make a statement. [31893]

Mr. Roger Evans [holding answer 12 June 1996]: The issue of alleged illegality is a matter for the mortgage lenders to take such action as they deem to be appropriate in the circumstances. It is not a matter for this Department. If the mortgage lender obtains, having proved fraud in court, an order for possession or foreclosure, income support mortgage interest payments cease to be payable.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated number of families on income support receiving mortgage interest payments in respect of properties which his Department is aware were obtained through illegal means. [31892]

Mr. Evans [holding answer 12 June 1996]: The information is not available.

HEALTH

General Practitioners

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been commissioned by his Department into work-related stress facing general practitioners; and if he will make a statement. [32480]

Mr. Malone: The Department commissioned a study on stress in doctors which began in 1983 and is on-going. The aim of the study is to assess the levels and causes of stress in doctors, to explore ways to identify as early as possible those at risk, and to make recommendations on combatting stress. In addition, the Department has funded the Royal College of General Practitioners to support its work in this area.

Acute Hospital Beds

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of acute hospital beds per head of population in each European country. [32559]

Mr. Malone: Comparable data on acute beds in European countries are not available because of variations in national definitions of acute care.

Operation Waiting Times (Smokers)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has evaluated in the last five years into waiting times for operations for smokers relative to those for non-smokers. [32563]

Mr. Horam: None.

Arachis Oil

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department is carrying out into arachis oil; what guidance his Department issues in respect of preparations for breast-feeding mothers containing arachis oil; and if he will make statement. [32755]

Mr. Malone: The Department is carrying out no research into arachis oil. There is no evidence to exclude the use of arachis oil in lactating mothers. Guidance regarding use of medicinal products containing arachis oil is given in the manufacturers' product information for doctors and patients, which is authorised by the Licensing Authority, and in the British National Formulary which is sent free of charge to all doctors by the Department of Health.

Statistics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which statistics his Department has discontinued (a) the collection and (b) the publication of since 1989. [32865]

Mr. Horam: Changes in the basis of compilation, presentation and publication of statistical series are made from time to time in response to the requirements of Government and other users of statistics. Other changes reflect changes in administrative systems on which some series are based and technological developments affecting the compilation and dissemination of statistical data. The statistical material sought by the Department from the national health service, family health services practitioners and local authorities is kept under review to ensure that the burden on respondents is fully justified by the uses to which the data are put.

Since 1989, many changes have taken place as a result of the reforms in the health service and changes in legislation. Collections which have been discontinued have been announced in speeches, parliamentary questions, in guidance to the health service and local authorities and in relevant statistical publications. As well as discontinuing series which are no longer justified, the Department has introduced some new collections, for example to monitor outpatient waiting times and to support the patients charter.

Private Patients

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 June, Official Report, columns 109–10, if he will list the number of private patients in NHS pay beds in 1994–95 whose treatment is recorded in the hospital episode system under each of the five most frequently used (a) operation and (b) diagnosis codes in relation to conditions of (i) the nervous system, (ii) the eye, (iii) the upper digestive tract, (iv) the other abdominal organs, (v) the heart, (vi) the arteries and veins, (vii) the urinary system, (viii) the bones and joints of the skull and spines and (ix) miscellaneous. [33304]

Mr. Horam: The information available centrally relates to finished consultant episodes. A table will be placed in the Library showing the number of completed first order episodes, by selected main operation and principal diagnosis.

Elective Surgery

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many elective operations were performed in the private sector privately as a percentage of NHS elective surgery (a) by region and (b) nationally in the last five years; [33604]

(2) how many elective operations have been performed in the private sector (a) by region and (b) nationally in the last five years. [33605]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 13 May, column 322.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were waiting for in-patient admission in the NHS by region at the latest date for which figures were available. [33545]

Mr. Horam: Information on waiting times for in-patient admission is not available separately. Information on the number of people waiting for in-patient and day case admissions in all regions for the month ended 31 March 1996 is shown in the table.

Provisional waiting time figure as at 31 March 1996

St. George's Hospital NHS Trust

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members of the St. George's hospital NHS trust; indicating their qualifications and their outside interests. [33102]

Mr. Malone: A list of those appointed by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health to national health service authorities and trusts as at 1 April 1996, together with their occupation category, will be published later this summer and copies placed in the Library.

Board members' relevant private interests are declared and entered in a register of interests. These registers are made available by NHS authorities and trusts for public inspection on request.

Gelatine

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the name of the expert from the Medicines Control Agency who advised the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee concerning the use of gelatine produced from non-specified bovine offal material; and what are that person's qualifications and experience concerning the study of bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [33137]

Mr. Horam: It is not the custom or practice to give details of individual civil servants.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what new information was available to the

Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee by 25 March, concerning potential contamination of gelatine by BSE infectivity to result in the alteration of existing advice outlined in the British Medical Journal of 20 April, page 988, issued by the Committee on Safety of Medicines in 1989 and adopted by the European Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products; and if he will make a statement. [33138]

Mr. Horam: The article in the British Medical Journal of 20 April, page 988, reviewed the history and content of the 1989 United Kingdom bovine spongiform encephalopathy guidelines and the later 1992 Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products guideline, "Minimizing the risk of transmitting agents causing spongiform encephalopathy via medicinal products", and concluded the guidelines were effective.

The CPMP guideline states:

"Given assurances of adequate collection and processing, certain materials and their derivatives are unlikely to present any risk of contamination. These include ... skin and its derivatives, for example gelatin".

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has accepted the advice of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee, issued on 25 March, in respect of the safety of gelatine from non-specified bovine material in pharmaceutical and medical devices; and if he will make a statement. [33139]

Mr. Horam: The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee is the expert committee set up to advise my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health and my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on all matters to do with spongiform encephalopathies. Ministers have always accepted their advice and take account of it when implementing measures to protect public health.

SCOTLAND

Court of Session Judges

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the role of the Lord Advocate in the appointment of a Court of Session judge; with whom he consults, and to whom he makes the recommendation. [32286]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Judges are appointed by the Queen on the recommendation of the Secretary of State for Scotland. Because the Secretary of State does not normally have personal knowledge of suitable nominees, he relies on the Lord Advocate, who submits names to him for his consideration. The current practice is for the Lord Advocate always to consult the Lord President of the Court of Session and the Dean of the Faculty of Advocates, before putting forward any nomination. On occasion, other senior members of the legal profession and judiciary are also consulted by the Lord Advocate.

Electoral Registers

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, per constituency (1) the number of electors registered for a postal or proxy vote; [33064]

(2) the number of women on the current Scottish electoral registers. [33062]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not held centrally.

Postage Costs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department spent on postage in the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96; and how many items were posted during these periods. [32850]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The expenditure on postage and the number of items posted in the financial years 1994–95, and 1995–96 are as shown:

Year	Cost £	Items
1994–95	1,243,098	3,400,000

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of households in each Scottish constituency. [33063]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is contained in table H of the General Register Office (Scotland) publication "The 1991 Census: Monitoring for Parliamentary Constituencies in Scotland", copies of which are in the Library.

Motorways

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by parliamentary constituency the location of the sections of motorway in Scotland that have overhead lighting; and if he will plot this information on a map and place a copy in the Library. [33039]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The following table lists the locations of overhead lighting on motorways in Scotland. This information is not readily available by parliamentary constituency and a map could be made available only at disproportionate cost.

[32821]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Six applications have been received from Caithness: three were approved with grants totalling £539,589. Sutherland also produced six applications, of which five obtained grants totalling £199,844.

Pharmacies

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of pharmacies in Scotland by year since 1979. [33083]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table:

Shotgun and Firearm Licences

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many semi-automatic and pump action shotguns have been certified as shotguns after being modified from section 1 firearms classification under the terms of the Firearms Act 1988 in each year since the Act came into operation. [32881]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given yesterday, Official Report, column 383, by my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State, Home Department.

Judicial Review

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) on how many occasions in each Session since 1991–92 legislation has been introduced into Parliament by his Department, with the purpose of (a) removing the effects of a judicial review decision or (b) implementing a judicial review decision; and if he will list the relevant legislative provisions; [33592]

(2) how many decisions by his Department were challenged by way of judicial review in each session since 1991–92; and if he will list in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld by the court, (b) the court found for the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgment and (d) the Department appealled successfully against the judicial review decision. [33574]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library transcripts of the evidence given to the Cullen inquiry. [33836]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In response to expressions of interest, I have arranged for transcripts of the evidence prepared for the tribunal to date to be placed in the House Library. Further transcripts will be sent to the Library on a daily basis.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Rabies

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which recommendations of the Scientific Veterinary Committee in paper VI/1533/92–EN–REK1 formed the basis of the derogations in the Balai directive which establish a different system for the UK and Ireland from that in the remainder of the European Community. [32194]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 June 1996]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to him on 24 April, Official Report, columns 211–12.

The Scientific Veterinary Committee report confined itself to evaluating the risks of spreading rabies through the movement of rabies susceptible animals within the European Community and providing an opinion on how these risks might be reduced or eliminated. It did not discuss the detail of how to apply new rules on the movement of traded dogs and cats. The provisions in the Balai directive on the movement of traded dogs and cats into the UK and Ireland from elsewhere within the European Union are therefore not identical to any specific recommendations within the report. These provisions represent the safeguards which the Council of Ministers believed were necessary in the light of the risks which the report identified.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will provide 10 positive and 10 negative BSE urine samples to Mr. Harash Narang for research into BSE and Creutzfeldt-Jacob disease. [32911]

Mrs. Browning: We are in discussion with Dr. Narang on the supply of samples for validation of his urine test. One of the difficulties is establishing a baseline of BSE negative cattle for validating a test. This is not so easy as might appear at first sight and we are in discussions with Dr. Narang about arrangements for collecting urine from cattle in countries which have never had a case of BSE, so as to be absolutely certain that they are truly negative and that there can be no doubt about interpretation if any of the samples deemed to be negative test positive in his hands.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if grade 2 laboratories have the facilities to carry out cattle urine testing for BSE and Creutzfeldt-Jacob disease research. [32912]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

Containment level 2 laboratories, as defined in the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1994, are suitable for work with material infected with or potentially infected with the agents of BSE and CJD, subject to certain specific additional precautions. In the case of CJD, these are a requirement of the COSHH regulations. In the case of BSE, guidance from the Advisory Committee on Dangerous Pathogens advises that additional precautions be adopted where work is undertaken with material infected with or potentially infected with the BSE agent.

Beef Exports Ban

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when (a) the USA, (b) Australia, (c) Canada and (d) New Zealand applied bans to United Kingdom beef exports; how many representations have been made by Her Majesty's Government about these bans to each of these countries in each year since the ban was imposed until 20 March; how many representations MAFF received from United Kingdom farmers and the United Kingdom beef industry about these bans before 20 March; and what was the total value of United Kingdom beef exports to each of these countries in each of three years before the ban was imposed. [32531]

Mrs. Browning: The United Kingdom had not received any formal notification of a ban on British beef exports from any of these countries before 20 March 1996. The total value of United Kingdom beef exports—which includes all bovine material fit for human consumption—to the countries in question, for the years 1993 to 1995 inclusive, is provided in the table.

Exports of Bovine material fit for human consumption

	Value £ thousand
	1993	[1]1994	[1]1995
Australia	7	7	41
Canada	208	60	109
New Zealand	0	7	70
USA	1	105	257

Business and Trade Statistics Limited.

Notes:

1. The table gives data for the export of carcass meat of bovine origin and all other products fit for human consumption, including offals and fully cooked beef products.

2. Figures given are for total recorded trade in the Overseas Trade Statistics. Beef origination from outside the UK is not separately identifiable.

Calf Slaughter Scheme

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many calves have been slaughtered to date under the calf slaughter scheme; and if he will make a statement. [32451]

Mr. Baldry: By 14 June 1996, 32,017 calves had been slaughtered in the United Kingdom under the calf processing aid scheme.

Bovine Immune Deficiency Virus

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the breeds of livestock in which cases of bovine immune deficiency virus have been diagnosed; and if he will make a statement; [32906]

(2) if he will list for each of the last four years, and for this year to date, the number of cases of bovine immune deficiency virus that have been diagnosed in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other European Union countries. [32905]

Mrs. Browning: Bovine immune deficiency-like virus has not been confirmed in the United Kingdom this year or during the preceding four years.

BIV is not a notifiable disease under EU legislation and it is not a condition that is included in either list A or B of the Office International des Epizooties code list. We do not therefore have information on the number of BIV cases that have been diagnosed in other European countries. The results of the first surveys carried out in France and Germany for BIV have been published in the last two years and they indicated that BIV was present in both countries.

Civil Servants (Companies)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 21 May, Official Report, column 168, on how many occasions each of the companies cited has been found guilty of civil or criminal offences in each of the last eight years. [32934]

Mr. Boswell: I have no information as to whether any of these companies has or has not been found guilty of any criminal offence. I will write to the hon. Member to set out the general position on offences committed by companies.

Organo-pesticides

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on possible links between bovine spongiform encephalopathy, Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease and cancer and the use of organo-pesticides in agriculture in the United Kingdom. [33537]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 June 1996]: Epidemiological studies at the beginning of the BSE outbreak have revealed no correlation between the incidence of BSE in cattle and the use of chemicals in agriculture. Government is also aware that its independent advisory committee, the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee, has considered a number of possible theories about the origins of BSE including one that it relates to the use of organophosphates in cattle treatment but has not recommended that the Government undertake any research in furtherance of this theory. The Government are also aware of experiments conducted by staff from the Medical Research Council toxicology unit which showed that there was no significant binding between an organophosphate molecule and the PrP protein thought to be involved in the disease BSE as predicated in the theory.

Under statutory procedures for the approval of pesticides, data on the carcinogenic potential of all pesticides, including OPs, are required and evaluated by the regulatory authorities.

WALES

Cattle Farming and Processing

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are employed in (a) beef farming, (b) dairy farming and (c) the rendering industry in (i) Wales and (ii) each parliamentary constituency in Wales. [31847]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The available information on the number of employees, excluding the self-employed, by industry, from the 1993 census of employment, is on the NOMIS database which can be accessed by the staff at the Library of the House. This source does not provide figures for beef and dairy farming separately.

The table provides data for specialist dairy and specialist beef farming, including self-employment, from the June agricultural census. Figures for parliamentary constituencies are not available.

Numbers of people employed in specialist dairy and specialist beef farming

Wales:	1993	1995
Specialist dairy	9,408	10,105
Specialist beef	1,012	1,110

There are no rendering facilities in Wales.

Figures are for main holdings.

Steelworks (Ministerial Visits)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the steelworks he has visited in his official capacity. [32898]

Mr. Hague: I have visited British Steel's Port Talbot works and ASW's Cardiff rod and reinforcement plant.

Statistics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which statistics his Department has discontinued (a) the collection and (b) the publication of since 1989. [32859]

Mr. Hague: Changes to the basis of collection, presentation and publication of statistical series are made in response to the requirements of users of official statistics. All statistical returns are subject to regular review and a number have been changed or discontinued in recent years to reduce the burden on respondents or because data were no longer required in the same form. In some cases, responsibility for data collection has transferred from the Welsh Office to another body, or vice versa. However, key statistics continue to be published in all subject areas. Changes to the range of statistics available are documented in the relevant statistical publications.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what further measures he proposes to assist beef farmers affected by BSE outbreaks. [32891]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: We have introduced a number of measures designed to help beef farmers, including prompt payment of beef special and suckler cow premiums and a compensation scheme related to market prices for beef cattle over 30 months of age which must be removed from the food chain. The Council of Ministers is considering a proposal to top up beef special and suckler cow premiums and to provide additional support to beef farmers who have been most directly affected by the crisis.

House Building

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the latest figures for (a) housing associations, (b) private and (c) council house building; and what were the figures for 1979. [32893]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Completions by sector are given in the table. The numbers shown for housing association completions are based on local authority returns which may underestimate the level of activity.

	Housing association	Private sector	Local authority
1979	1,016	6,980	3,010
1995	2,258	6,518	176

Source:
Local authority and National House-Building Council returns.

Schools (Parental Choice)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) appeals and (b) letters have been made by parents on the grounds of non-admission of their child to the school of their choice for each of the last five years by each of the former counties of Wales. [33159]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is not held centrally.

Welsh Language

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what provision is made for teaching through the medium of Welsh in A-level courses in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [32543]

Mr. Hague: The medium of instruction in A-level courses in Wales is, as in other courses, a matter for individual schools. There were 1,300 entries for Welsh Joint Education Committee examinations at A-level through the medium of Welsh in 25 subjects in 1995, compared with 903 entries in 24 subjects in 1990.

Judicial Review

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many decisions by his Department were challenged by way of judicial review in each session since 1991–92; and if he will list in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld by the court, (b) the court found for the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgment and (d) the Department appealled successfully against the judicial review decision. [33580]

Mr. Hague: The number of decisions made solely by the Welsh Office and challenged by way of judicial review in the sessions since 1991–92 are as follows:

1991–92: 2
1992–93: 4
1993–94: 4
1994–95: 5
1995–96: 2

The information that I have obtained thus far shows that the Department's decision was upheld in nine cases; the court found for the applicant in no cases; the Department submitted to judgment in eight cases and the Department appealed successfully against the judicial review it no cases.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions in each session since 1991–92 legislation has been introduced into Parliament by his Department, with the purpose of (a) removing the effects of a judicial review decision or (b) implementing a judicial review decision; and if he will list the relevant legislative provisions. [33597]

Mr. Hague: None.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Child Labour

22. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what restrictions are placed on the importing of goods produced by child labour. [32132]

Mr. Nelson: None. The Government deplore any exploitation of children and we press all countries which have signed labour conventions to meet their obligations. However, we believe improvements in labour standards are more likely to result from economic growth through trade than from unilateral trade restrictions which would simply damage those countries they seek to help.

Objective 1 Funding

23. Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the impact of European objective 1 funding on the United Kingdom economy; and if he will make a statement. [32133]

Mr. Eggar: The only UK objective 1 programme that is already completed covered Northern Ireland. It is estimated to have contributed an additional 3.6 per cent. to Northern Ireland gross domestic product and created an additional 10,000 jobs by 1993.

Interim evaluations of the three objective 1 programmes which began in 1994, including that for the Scottish highlands and islands, are under way.

Post Office

24. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on his proposals for the future of the Post Office. [32134]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Government's plans for the future of the Post Office remain as set out in an oral statement on 11 May 1995, Official Report, columns 885–94 by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, then the President of the Board of Trade.

Manufacturing Exports

25. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what contribution manufacturing industry is currently making to export levels. [32135]

Mr. Nelson: In 1995, the value of the United Kingdom's manufacturing exports was £127 billion, which represented 83 per cent. of our exports for that year. This is the highest percentage contribution of manufactures to exports for 23 years.

Electricity and Water Companies

26. Mr. Hanson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received regarding the ownership of the electricity and water companies. [32136]

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice).

European Space Agency

27. Mr. David Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to increase the United Kingdom's contributions to the European Space Agency. [32137]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I am at present reviewing space policy, including priorities and expenditure. We are holding a second UK space policy forum at Queen Mary and Westfield college on 25 June and plan to issue a UK space policy forward plan following it.

I hope to make a further statement to the House around the time of the forum.

Cyberspace Technology

28. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to promote British companies active in cyberspace technologies. [32138]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My Department is both encouraging British companies to use the Internet and helping companies to supply products and services for the Internet. The information society initiative is the main vehicle, with a range of initiatives encouraging electronic commerce, multi-media demonstrators and product innovation in the creative industries. My Department is also encouraging industry to produce sector trade directories on the Internet so that customers across the world can be led, via cyberspace, to UK suppliers.

Steel Industry

29. Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the initiatives he has undertaken to promote the United Kingdom steel industry in 1996. [32139]

Mr. Eggar: My Department, through BISPA, the British Iron and Steel Producers Association, is working on several initiatives aimed at enhancing the industry's competitiveness. These are as follows.

- Dust recycling benchmarking study;
- Electronic data interchange development project;
- Customer perception survey and best practice benchmarking project (phase I);
- Logistics/transit time performance study;
- Future competitiveness of the narrow strip sector;
- Productivity in the wire drawing sector;
- Steel training benchmarking club—phase II;
- Raw materials supply chains for the automotive components sector;
- Promotion of national vocational qualifications—NVQ—to steel industry small and medium enterprises;
- Health and safety NVQ module.
- Steel in the 21st century conference in July 1996.

In addition, we have run two successful workshops aimed at transferring best practice in benchmarking and electronic commerce across the steel sectors.

University Research Equipment

30. Mr. Galbraith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the equipment needs of United Kingdom universities for carrying out research. [32140]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Research equipment and other needs of the science budget portfolio are assessed with advice from the Director General of Research Councils.

The research councils are currently administering an equipment fund with the higher education funding councils.

Manufacturing Industry (Wakefield)

31. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action his Department is taking to encourage manufacturing industries into the Wakefield area; and if he will make a statement. [32141]

Mr. Page: Through the work of the Invest in Britain Bureau, my Department promotes the UK as a location for inward investment generally. In the Yorkshire and Humberside region, the DTI provides most of the revenue for the Yorkshire and Humberside development agency, the specific job of which is the regional co-ordination of promotion work and the encouragement of inward investment to the region, including, of course, the Wakefield area.

Wakefield is already strategically placed on the road and rail network, and my Department has enhanced its attractiveness to investors by granting the city DTI intermediate area status in 1993. Since January 1994, regional selective assistance of more than £2.4 million has been awarded to businesses, and almost 900 jobs have been created or safeguarded.

Through the Government office for Yorkshire and Humberside, my Department is also involved in administering European funding under the objective 2 programme. So far, £4.4 million has been allocated to Wakefield for a range of projects, including the development of a channel tunnel railfreight terminal, which will assist manufacturing directly or indirectly. Wakefield will also benefit from the RETEX and RECHAR initiatives, which provide funds for regenerating former textile and coal mining areas.

Competitiveness

32. Mr. Eastham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the importance of research and development to the United Kingdom's competitiveness. [32142]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Harnessing the excellence of our science, engineering and technology and promoting innovation, including research and development, are essential to improving our competitive performance and are reviewed fully in the Government's competitiveness White Paper.

Export Orders (South-west)

33. Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what support his Department is giving to businesses in the south-west seeking to win export orders. [32143]

Mr. Nelson: The full range of the Government's overseas trade services is available to south-west businesses. The services can be accessed from any of the 23 business links outlets in the region.

Offshore Oil and Gas

34. Dr. Godman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he last discussed with the representatives of Scottish fishermen the implications of the regulations governing the dismantlement programmes for redundant offshore oil and gas structures and pipeline networks. [32144]

Mr. Eggar: My officials regularly meet representatives of the Scottish fishing industry to discuss a wide range of issues, including decommissioning offshore oil and gas installations.

Small Firms and Higher Education

35. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures he is taking to encourage links between small firms and higher education departments. [32145]

Mr. Page: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has responsibility for ensuring adequate links between higher education establishments and all sectors of industry, including small firms. The focus of recent work has included assisting enterprises in recruitment and the use of graduate skills.

For example, the higher education business partnership programme will help build on continuing employer-led partnership between higher education and the small business sector to support a more effective graduate labour market. Using graduate skills will develop strategies and tools to increase graduate recruitment by small businesses, and assist them in making better use of the graduates they recruit.

My Department has links with higher education departments through a number of initiatives aimed at businesses of all sizes, to encourage innovation and expertise.

The focus technology programme run in association with business links, aims to help research and technology organisations and higher education institutions improve the contact they have with small firms and the technological services they provide to them.

In March 1996, my Department's innovation unit published a survey of university-industry research links. This is primarily aimed at encouraging universities to benchmark their own performance in the area. However, it records the presence of services relevant to small and medium enterprises—SMEs—and whether databases of expertise are available.

The unit has also facilitated the production of a guide to issues for companies to consider when undertaking collaborative projects with universities. This was drafted by the Association for University Research and Industry Links, AURIL, and the Intercompany Academic Research Group, ICARG. It is a useful guide for SMEs considering entering such projects.

Manufacturing Output

36. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on forecast trends with respect to manufacturing output. [32146]

Mr. Lang: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer will set out his latest estimate of manufacturing output in the summer economic forecast, which will be published on 9 July.

Export Promotion

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to improve the promotion of exports; and if he will make a statement. [32116]

Mr. Nelson: Through the overseas trade services organisation, my Department provides the best ever package of information, advice and practical assistance to British companies.

Civil Servants (Duties Abroad)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much his Department spent during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 on sending civil servants accompanying Ministers from his Department on official duties abroad. [32417]

Mr. Lang: The cost of overseas travel for Ministers and their private secretaries in 1994–95 was £400,508 and in 1995–96 was £457,818. The cost of sending officials other than the Minister's private secretary on such visits is met from budgets delegated to the relevant units of the Department and is not recorded centrally. Recovery of past data would incur disproportionate cost.

Post Office, Tiverton

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultations have been made by his Department regarding the future of the Crown post office in Tiverton, Devon. [32937]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 17 June 1996]: Consultations about proposals to convert individual Crown post offices to agency status are undertaken by Post Office Counters Ltd. in accordance with the procedures agreed with the Post Office Users' National Council.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his assessment of the consequences to the local economy of the proposed closure of the Crown post office in Tiverton, Devon. [32938]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 17 June 1996]: It is for the Post Office, and not for my Department, to make assessments of the consequences for the local economy of converting individual Crown post offices to agency status. I understand from the Post Office and that the full range of post office services will continue to be available in Tiverton and that Post Office Counters Ltd. employees wishing to remain with the business will be offered alternative employment.

Nuclear Privatisation

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 5 June, Official Report, column 455, what is the budget he has set for expenditure on advertising nuclear privatisation. [33268]

Mr. Eggar: The revised estimated budget for total expenditure on privatisation in 1996–97 was published in the Supply estimates on 13 June.

Business Links

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many businesses have received help and assistance from business links since their establishment. [32123]

Mr. Page: The number of different businesses using business links has more than doubled between April 1995 and March 1996 from 38,093 different businesses using business links at least once in the first quarter to 85,108 doing so in the final quarter. This means that more than 6,500 different businesses are now using business links each week. The figures for the final quarter are based on returns from 53 business link partnerships out of the 79 that are open.

Prior Options Review

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library the reports made to his Department in the prior options review. [33381]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 18 June 1996]: I shall place in the Library of the House shortly memorandums, with supporting documentation, setting out the rationale underlying the decisions announced on 22 May on:

(a) the Central Laboratory of the Research Councils;

(b) the Institute of Arable Crops Research, the Institute of Grassland and Enviornmetn Research, the John Innes Centre and the Silsoe Research Institute; and

(c) the National Weights and Measures Laboratory.

Companies House

Mr. Hayes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what targets he has set the Companies House executive agency for 1996–97. [33970]

Mr. Lang: I have set Companies House the following targets:

to continue to aim to process all documents within five working days, and specifically for 1996–97 to raise the proportion of documents processed within five working days to 95 per cent.;

to achieve an average monthly compliance rate for accounts registered of 95 per cent. and for annual returns registered of 93 per cent.

to ensure that a minimum of 90 per cent. of fiches provided to customers are error free; to ensure that the percentage of error-free work in current processing is at least 97 per cent.;

to answer 90 per cent. of incoming telephone calls within six rings (20 seconds); to reduce real unit costs by 5 per cent. in 1996–97;

to achieve a 6 per cent. average annual rate of return based on an operating surplus expressed as a percentage of average net assets employed at current values;

In addition, I expect the chief executive of the agency to continue to reply within 10 working days to all letters from Members of Parliament delegated to him for reply.

British Coal

Mr. Hayes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what change has been made to British Coal's external financing limit for 1996–97. [33971]

Mr. Lang: I have revised British Coal's external financing limit for 1996–97 from £104 million to £27 million. This reflects an overshoot of £41 million of the EFL for 1995–96, caused principally by the slippage into 1996–97 of certain asset disposals. The revised EFL also allows for higher proceeds from property sales.

Bomb Bag Firecrackers

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from West Yorkshire trading standards concerning the safety of bomb bag firecrackers produced by Lonestar, in Wetherby, Yorkshire; what steps have been taken as a consequence; and if he will make a statement. [33140]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My Department has received no representations from West Yorkshire trading standards service in connection with bomb bags supplied by Lonestar.

Health and Safety

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many (a) minor, (b) major and (c) fatal injuries have been suffered by staff in his Department and its agencies in work-related incidents in each of the past five years, showing in each year how many were related to information technology and giving details of all incidents involving fatalities; [33517]

(2) on how many occasions in each of the past five years health and safety problems in his Department and its agencies have been reported via internal monitoring; and on how many occasions the Health and Safety Commission has become involved; [33516]

(3) what was the cost in each of the past five years of rectifying working conditions that were the responsibility of his Department and its agencies, to bring them up to acceptable health and safety standards, detailing incidents involving information technology and additionally those involving expenditure of more than £5,000. [33519]

Mr. John M. Taylor: This information is not kept centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Written Answers to Questions

ENVIRONMENT

Mobile Homes

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for North-East Derbyshire (Mr. Barnes) of 4 June, Official Report, column 394, what powers he has under the Local Government Finance Act 1992 to alter the valuation list bands for dwellings; and if he will use those powers to alter the council tax liability of residents of mobile homes. [33070]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend has powers under section 5 of the Local Government Finance Act 1992 to alter the number of, the ranges of values ascribed to, and the proportion of council tax payable in respect of the existing valuation bands, by order subject to affirmative resolution of the House of Commons.

My right hon. Friend has, however, no plans to make such an order. He sees no grounds for reducing the contributions which residents of mobile homes make towards the cost of local services. This would, besides, entail increasing the liability of other council tax payers and would necessitate a massive, and expensive, re-banding exercise: there are over 5 million dwellings in band A alone.

Uniform Business Rate (Sports Clubs)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to exempt non-dividend-paying sports clubs from the uniform business rate; and if he will make a statement. [33171]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. Sports clubs which are not conducted for profit may already apply for up to 100 per cent. of discretionary relief from their business rates bill.

Building Regulations (Consultation)

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many responses his Department received to its consultation on extending part M of the Building Regulations to residential dwellings; and how many of these (a) supported and (b) opposed the extension. [33367]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: One thousand and seventy-four responses were received. The consultation posed a number of questions, the responses to which cannot be summarised simply as numbers who either supported or opposed the extension.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library copies of the responses to the consultation on the extension of part M of the Building Regulations to residential dwellings. [33368]

Mr. Jones: Copies of the responses were placed in the Library in May 1995.

Desalinated Water

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate his Department has made of (a) the cost per cubic metre of producing desalinated water and (b) the overall cost of providing desalinated water as a long-term solution to water shortages in Britain. [33536]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: In its 1992 report "Water Resources Development Strategy", the National Rivers Authority—now part of the Environment Agency—in considering options for meeting imbalances between public water supply and demand which might arise, estimated an indicative overall cost of between £4 million and £6 million for production of 1,000 cu m of water per day by means of desalination. The work which informed this report indicated water production costs generally in the order of 70p to 80p per cubic metre, although in plants featuring energy recovery—for example, from an adjacent power station—the costs might be in the range of 42p to 48p per cubic metre.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) on how many occasions in each of the past five years health and safety problems in his Department and its agencies have been reported via internal monitoring; and on how many occasions the Health and Safety Commission has become involved; [33476]

(2) how many (a) minor, (b) major and (c) fatal injuries have been suffered by staff in his Department and its agencies in work-related incidents in each of the past five years, showing in each year how many were related to information technology and giving details of all incidents involving fatalities. [33477]

Sir Paul Beresford: The numbers of accidents reported in my Department and the agencies for which it was responsible at the time are:

Year	Minor	Major	Fatal
1991–92	508	2	1
1992–93	277	1	0
1993–94	230	1	0

Data on accidents related to information technology are not collected separately.

The Department records accidents at the time of their occurrence and collects the data annually. As required by the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995, the Health and Safety Executive was notified of all major injuries and fatalities at the time they occurred. Of the two fatalities, one was as a result of a fall from a window. The second occurred while a lift was being repaired.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the cost in each of the past five years of rectifying working conditions that were the responsibility of his Department and its agencies, to bring them up to acceptable health and safety standards, detailing incidents involving information technology and those involving expenditure of more than £5,000. [33479]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department has a continuing programme of maintenance and repair to its buildings, furnishings and equipment to ensure a good working environment for its staff and visitors. Expenditure specifically related to health and safety measures is not recorded separately.

Energy Advice Centres

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of each of the local energy advice centres in providing cost-effective advice to the public and on the need for the continued provision of such services (a) in those areas with local energy advice centres and (b) elsewhere. [33365]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Government passed control of the local energy advice centre pilot study to the Energy Saving Trust at the beginning of April 1996. The trust is assessing the pilot study, which will be completed at the end of the September.

Previous market research results have demonstrated that the local energy advice centres are providing an effective and value for money service. Sixty per cent. of clients found the advice they received "very useful" and 90 per cent. of clients would recommend others to contact LEACs for advice. In 1994–95 around 57,000 clients visited LEAC offices. As a result of advice received, 21,000 tonnes of CO_2 emissions were saved; and the total savings per annum were £1.8 million.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the continued funding of local energy advice centres. [33366]

Mr. Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Cardiff, Central (Mr. Jones) on Tuesday 18 June 1996, Official Report, column 402.

Next Steps Agencies

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total number of people employed by each of the next steps agencies under his Department's control; how many of those employees are women; and at what civil service or equivalent grades they are employed. [32733]

Sir Paul Beresford: The following information covers non-industrial permanent staff in the three next steps agencies as at 13 June 1996:

Publications (Subscriptions)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all (a) periodicals, (b) magazines and (c) journals received on subscription by his Department over the last three months. [33759]

Sir Paul Beresford: Titles received on subscription in the past three months include a range of trade, technical, scientific and professional journals and magazines covering the work of the Department. To list each would involve disproportionate cost.

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department intends to complete its review of measures required to ensure compliance with copyright law. [33767]

Sir Paul Beresford: It is anticipated that the review of photocopying procedures to ensure compliance with copyright law will be completed by the end of September 1996, after which legal advice may be sought.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further action he proposes to take against those local authorities whose direct labour and direct service organisations failed to meet their statutory financial objectives in 1994–95. [34208]

Sir Paul Beresford: On 2 April this year, 26 statutory notices were served on 22 local authorities concerning the failure of their direct labour and service organisations to meet the required financial objectives in 1994–95. My right hon. Friend has now considered the response to those notices, and has decided to give 22 directions to 20 local authorities.

The directions take the following three forms:

requiring the authority to retender the work and to seek the consent of the Secretary of State if proposing to award the work in-house: Calderdale MBC (vehicle maintenance), Castle Morpeth borough council (highways and sewers), the London borough of Hammersmith and Fulham (sports and leisure management).

preventing the authority from carrying out the work if it fails to meet the financial objective in a specified year or years:

1995–96 and 1996–97: the London borough of Hackney (schools and welfare catering).

1997–98 and 1998–99: Watford borough council (building maintenance).

requiring authorities to retender the work if they fail to meet the financial objective in a specified year or years, and to seek the Secretary of State's consent where the work has to be retendered and where the authority subsequently wishes to award work in-house:

1995–96 and 1996–97: Bournemouth borough council (other cleaning), Broxbourne borough council (refuse collection, highways and sewers and grounds maintenance), Coventry city council (schools and welfare catering), Durham county council (building cleaning), Rochester upon Medway district council (grounds maintenance), Sedgefield district council (grounds maintenance), Selby district council (sports and leisure management), Southend-on-Sea borough council (grounds maintenance), South Kesteven district council (building maintenance), and Walsall MBC (grounds maintenance)

1996–97 and 1997–98: Charnwood borough council (other cleaning), Corby borough council (highways and sewers), Reigate and Banstead borough council (building maintenance), and Sevenoaks district council (refuse collection)

1996–97: North East Lincolnshire district council (refuse collection)

The Secretary of State has also decided to take no further statutory action in respect of financial failure in 1993–94 by:

Crawley borough council (building maintenance), and Rochester upon Medway district council (highways and sewers).

The Secretary of State is still considering the response from Lichfield district council—other catering and sports and leisure managements.

To date, 45 notices have been served by the Department on 30 local authorities for losses incurred by their DLOs-DSOs in 1994–95. Today's decisions follow those announced on 13 May this year. Further notices for financial failure will be issued later in the year, and we expect to have announced all our decisions by the end of October.

This action continues our drive to ensure that taxpayers receive value-for-money services from their local authorities. Where authorities' in-house teams fail to achieve their financial targets, and where they do not seem to have taken the steps necessary to improve their performance, we will not hesitate to take statutory action in the interests of local taxpayers.

Citizens Charter

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment has he made of the effectiveness of the citizens charter; and if he will make a statement. [32685]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The key criterion for evaluating the effectiveness of the citizens charter is improvement in the standards and responsiveness of public services. A full account of this is set out in last year's charter White Paper "The Citizen's Charter: The Facts and Figures", Cm 2970.

Cost Compliance Assessments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how cost compliance assessments for legislation are arrived at; and what consultation there is with (a) business organisations and (b) representatives of small businesses before they are published. [33191]

Mr. Freeman: The arrangements for preparing compliance cost assessments are set out in "Checking the Cost of Regulation: A Guide to Compliance Cost Assessment", a copy of which is in the House Library. Responsibility for preparing the CCA rests with the official responsible for the policy proposal. A preliminary CCA should be prepared as soon as possible in the policy-making process. This should be refined as the policy proposal is developed, incorporating the views of business. Departments must consult business and representative bodies on the content of the CCA, preferably on the basis of their initial assessment. Small businesses must also be consulted and the impact on them of the proposal must be separately identified.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has made to EU colleagues about consulting (a) business organisations and (b) small business representatives while drawing up cost compliance assessment for European legislation. [33192]

Mr. Freeman: The best way of calculating the costs of new regulatory proposals is to consult business and consultation with small businesses is particularly important. I take every opportunity to make this point in contacts with my EU colleagues.

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment his Department has made of the terms of the photocopying licence proposed by the Copyright Licensing Agency; and what plans it has to purchase such a licence. [33760]

Mr. Freeman: My Department is still considering the terms of the photocopying licence proposed by the agency.

Publications (Subscriptions)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list all (a) periodicals, (b) magazines and (c) academic journals received on subscription by his Department over the last three months. [33757]

Mr. Willetts: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Correspondence

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish the latest figures showing the volume of correspondence received by Ministers and agency chief executives from hon. members, the targets set for reply and the percentage of replies sent within target. [34211]

Mr. Willetts: The 1995 correspondence figures are set out in the table. The table also sets out the figures for 1994, first published on 18 April 1995, Official Report, columns 21–24. Hon. Members' attention is drawn to the footnotes which accompany the table and which provide general background information on how totals have been calculated. In particular, the entry for the Benefits Agency shows a fall in the number of letters received from 21,411 in 1994 to 2,689 in 1995. This reflects a change in the way the figures have been presented. The 1995 figure excludes 13,981 letters from Members of Parliament sent direct to district offices where local officials have replied.

The 15 day target is for all other subjects.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Next Steps Agencies

Ms Jowell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the total number of people employed by each of the next steps agencies under his Department's control; how many of those employees are women; and at what civil service or equivalent grades they are employed. [32736]

Mr. Streeter: The Lord Chancellor has responsibility for four agencies: the Court Service, the Public Trust Office, the Public Record Office and Her Majesty's Land Registry. As the question concerns a specific operational matter on which the respective chief executives are best placed to provide an answer, I have asked them to reply.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many senior (a) male and (b) female judges from an ethnic minority background sit in courts in England and Wales; and if he will state the position held by each such judge. [32913]

Mr. Streeter: The table sets out the figures for male and female holders of judicial office believed to be of ethnic minority origin as at 1 June 1996. The figures for ethnic minority office holders are believed to be correct, but as the ethnic origin of candidates for judicial appointment was not recorded prior to the autumn of 1991, the numbers may be incomplete.

Children's Evidence

Mr. Cox: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if all courts in England and Wales now have a system of providing privacy for a child who is required to give evidence in court cases. [32875]

Mr. Streeter: I have asked the chief executive of the Court Service to reply directly to the hon. Member in respect of the operational arrangements for the Crown court, county court and High Court. The magistrates' courts are a locally managed service and responsibility for putting in place privacy systems for child witnesses rests with the relevant magistrates' courts committee. My Department is always willing to advise on such systems which include the provision of screens to shield witnesses, and the use of video and television links. Courts without such equipment can make arrangements with other courts to use their facilities. Where possible, every effort is made by court staff to comply with requests for a child witness to wait separately or to arrive and depart separately.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 20 June 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your Question about facilities for children giving evidence in court cases. As Chief Executive of the Court Service I can reply in respect of the county courts, Crown Court and High Court.

It is for the judge presiding at the trial to determine whether it is appropriate for a child's evidence to be given by way of a live television link and whether to allow a video recording of an interview with a child to be allowed as the child's evidence in chief. 67 of the 92 Crown Court Centres in England and Wales have live television links to enable children to give evidence from a separate room and to play video recorded evidence. It is always open to the judge at a court centre without a live TV link to order a case to be transferred to a centre so equipped. Centres without these facilities can use screens which prevent the child and defendant seeing each other. The requirement for additional television link systems is kept constantly under review and additional systems are installed where a need is shown.

The civil courts do not have television links. However, it is very rare for children to give oral evidence in civil proceedings or to be present in court. Instead, the child is represented by a court welfare officer or guardian ad litem who gives evidence on his or her behalf. If a child does have to give evidence, screens can be used. Most civil cases are held privately in chambers so that only the parties to the case and their legal representatives are present.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 20 June. [32547]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 20 June. [32548]

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

TRANSPORT

Airport Capacity (London)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list, for each of the last three years, how many new-start airlines have been able to commence operations at (a) Heathrow and (b) Gatwick airports under the EU rule that allows 50 per cent. of any additional runway capacity to be offered to new-start airlines. [32795]

Mr. Norris: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, I refer the hon. Member to the Civil Aviation Authority document CAP 644, "Slot Allocation: A proposal for Europe's airports", which provides useful information on the proportion of slots allocated to new entrant airlines. A copy of this document will be placed in the Library.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the time allowance expresed in minutes per flight that airlines currently build into their operating schedules to allow for congestion at Heathrow and Gatwick airports. [32787]

Mr. Norris: This is a matter for individual airlines.

Runway Capacity

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the conclusion of the runway capacity in the south-east—RUCATSE—study that a new full runway would provide for the equivalent of five years' traffic growth. [32908]

Mr. Norris: The RUCATSE study did not produce any general conclusion that a new runway would provide for the eqivalent of five years' traffic growth. The speed at which a new runway is taken up would depend on which site was chosen and when it was introduced. RUCATSE showed that, with new runways at either Heathrow or Gatwick in 2010, these would be full by 2015, with traffic being drawn in from the other London airports, but that the take-up of a new runway at Stansted would be much slower.

Traffic Area Offices

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what contingency plans he has in place to amend the traffic area boundaries in the event of Parliament not approving secondary legislation; [33292]

(2) if the Government's proposals to close the traffic area offices in Manchester and Cardiff can proceed before the secondary legislation to amend the traffic area boundaries has been approved by Parliament. [33292]

Mr. Norris: There is nothing in legislation which requires the Secretary of State for Transport to provide an office in each traffic area, so the approval of new boundaries by Parliament is not necessary before the closure of offices. We would seek to make whatever arrangements for dealing with the work were most efficient. We will be consulting the Council on Tribunals.

Heathrow Terminal 5

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he estimates a fifth terminal at Heathrow would be completed in the event of the inquiry finding in favour of its construction. [33360]

Mr. Norris: Following submission of the inspector's report, the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Transport are responsible forjointly determining whether BAA plc's application for planning permission for a fifth terminal should be approved. The construction timetable thereafter would be a matter for BAA plc.

Fuel Taxation

Sir Peter Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he intends to take to protect United Kingdom coach and heavy goods vehicle operators from unfair competition resulting from lower fuel taxation in other EU countries. [33345]

Mr. Norris: Fuel duty is only one element of the costs that affect the international competitiveness of road transport operators. We have supported the introduction of minimum rates of fuel duty in the EU. The rate of duty on fuel in the UK is of course a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Satellite Navigation Services

Sir Michael Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to ensure that the European centre for future satellite navigation services is based in the United Kingdom. [33255]

Mr. Norris: My Department is involved in discussion about the need for a European centre for future satellite navigation services. The case has not been established for such a centre, but if it is we will ensure that UK interests are protected.

Aircraft Movements (Punctuality)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he collates relating to the punctuality of aircraft leaving and arriving in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement on trends over the last five years. [32109]

Mr. Norris: The information relating to the punctuality of aircraft leaving and arriving in the United Kingdom is available in the Civil Aviation Authority monthly and annual publication "Punctuality statistics". My Department issues quarterly press notices with summary tables and with comment on these statistics. The level of punctuality achieved in 1995 was higher than that for 1990 and 1991, although slightly lower than that achieved in 1994.

Excalibur Airways

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the country of registration for all aircraft operated by Excalibur Airways operating to and from the United Kingdom. [33533]

Mr. Norris: Excalibur Airways currently operates one aircraft to and from the United Kingdom, which is registered in Antigua.

Air Accidents

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he has taken with regard to safety recommendation 95–25 of the air accident investigation branch, as detailed in paragraph 2.9.1 of air accident report 1/96. [33284]

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport has accepted and implemented the recommendation to which the hon. Member refers. Permit procedures have been reviewed and changed in order to clarify permit and safety responsibilities regarding applications by foreign operators involving the use of wet-leased aircraft.

These measures were announced on 10 January by my noble Friend the Minister for Aviation and Shipping. A copy of the announcement—Department of Transport press notice No. 9—was, at that time, placed in the House of Commons Library.

Health and Safety

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the cost in each of the past five years of rectifying working conditions that were the responsibility of his Department and its agencies, to bring them to acceptable health and safety standards, detailing incidents involving information technology and those involving expenditure of more than £5,000. [33523]

Mr. Norris: This information is not available.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions in each of the past five years health and safety problems in his Department and its agencies have been reported via internal monitoring; and on how many occasions the Health and Safety Commission has become involved. [33520]

Mr. Norris: My Department has carried out a survey in each of the past five years of health and safety incidents and produced an annual report for the permanent secretary. The Health and Safety Executive has been involved five times.

London Underground (Serious Crimes)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many serious crimes were recorded on the London Underground during 1995. [33107]

Mr. Norris: Crime figures on the London Underground are not collected by calendar year, but the figures for the most serious crimes in 1995–96, and as compared with the equivalent figures for 1994–95 were:

Violent assaults: 418—down by 15.7 per cent.

Robberies: 578—down by 5.9 per cent.

Indecent assaults: 154—up by 3.2 per cent.

Small Ships Register

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what representations his Department and the Marine Safety Agency have received about the delay in the awarding of the contract to run the small ships register by the agency; [33282]

(2) what discussions he has had with the director of the Marine Safety Agency about the small ships register and the awarding of the contract for running this service; [33280]

(3) what steps he is taking to ensure interested parties have the opportunity to bid for the contract for the small ships register from the Marine Safety Agency. [33281]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Barry Field, dated 20 June 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Questions enquiring: (a) what representations have been received about the delay in awarding the contract to run the Small Ships Register; (b) what discussions have taken place with the Marine Safety Agency about the Small Ships Register and the awarding of the contract for running this service, and, (c) what steps are being taken to ensure interested parties have the opportunity to bid for the Small Ships Register from the Marine Safety Agency.

To date no representations have been received about the delay in awarding the contract for running the Small Ships Register. Nor have any discussions taken place with the Secretary of State about the Small Ships Register or the awarding of the contract as this is an operational matter which has been dealt with within the Agency.

In the event that the contract for operation of the Small Ships Register is relet there will be a full competitive tendering exercise and all parties who have expressed an interest will be invited to tender together with any other parties who may be identified as potential suppliers.

Street Works Advisory Committee Report

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish the final report of the Street Works Advisory Committee. [34209]

Mr. Norris: The committee's report is published today, with the Government's response, which is set out in joint highway authority and utilities circular No. 1/96 (Department of Transport), 25/96 (Welsh Office). Copies of the report and circular have been placed in the Library.

Next Steps Agencies

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the total number of people employed by each of the next steps agencies under his Department's control; how many of those employees are women; and at what civil service or equivalent grades they are employed. [32741]

Mr. Norris: The number of people employed by the Department of Transport in its agencies on 1 June 1996 is in the table.

Fishing Industry (Accidents)

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people have been disabled as a result of accidents in the sea fishing industry during the last four years. [32365]

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) on 25 January 1995, Official Report, column 201, and 14 February 1995, Official Report, column 525. The position has not changed.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Firearms

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of firearms-related crimes involved licensed pistols in the last available three years. [33244]

Mr. Maclean: Thirty per cent. of notifiable offences recorded by the police in which firearms were reported to have been used in England and Wales in 1992 involved pistols. The figure for 1993 was also 30 per cent. and that for 1994, 23 per cent.

Information is not collected centrally on whether these weapons are licensed. Most firearms used in crime are not covered or are untraceable because their serial numbers have been removed.

Paedophiles Register

Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he plans to introduce a public register of paedophiles. [33112]

Mr. Maclean: The Government published a consultation paper, "Sentencing and Supervision of Sex Offenders", on 17 June which proposed that convicted sex offenders should be required to notify the police of their address and any subsequent moves. This information will provide the police with a register of the current whereabouts of sex offenders.

Crime (Hemsworth)

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many recorded crimes in (a) the Hemsworth constituency and (b) the relevant police divisional area were committed by those between the ages of 18 and 25 years; what proportion of the total crimes committed in the area, in the last available year, were committed by those aged 18 to 25 years; and how many of these crimes were directly or indirectly drugs-related. [33245]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Police (Damages)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many actions for damages have been defended at trial in the civil courts by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis for the past five years and the present year to date; what were the causes of the actions; how much the Commissioner was required to pay in (a) compensatory damages and (b) exemplary damages; and what disciplinary action was taken against the police officers involved. [33330]

Mr. Maclean: The information is as follows:

	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996 as at 8 May
Actions defended at trial	N/a	N/a	N/a	34	50	18
Amounts paid (£000s)	21	203	53	84	267	839

The requested breakdown of actions for damages can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

As regards disciplinary action, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) on 8 May, Official Report, column 156. I understand that since that information was provided two cases have been recorded in 1996:

Case 1: involving three officers, formal disciplinary proceedings and dismissal of the officers concerned; and

Case 2: involving one officer, who has made subject to formal disciplinary proceedings.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases have been the subject of an internal investigation on behalf of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis where no formal complaint has been recorded for the past five years and the present year to date; how many such cases arose from actions for damages brought against the Commissioner which (a) resulted in awards being made against the Commissioner at trial and (b) were settled out of court (i) after and (ii) before proceedings were commenced; and what disciplinary action was taken against the police officers involved. [33332]

Mr. Maclean: The Commissioner informs me that information on internal investigations prior to 1994 is not readily available. This, and the other information requested, can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The following is the number of internal investigations in 1994 to 31 May 1996:

Year	Number of cases
1994	424
1995	424
1996 (to 31 May)	167

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many actions or threatened actions for damages have been settled out of court for more than £10,000 by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis for the past five years and the present year to date; what were the causes of the actions; how much the Commissioner paid out; and what disciplinary action was taken against the police officers involved. [33331]

Mr. Maclean: Information in the form requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The total number of actions and threatened actions for damages over the last five years is as follows:

	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996 (as at 8 May)
Action	74	85	140	174	140	50

Threatened Action	38	51	74	100	72	21
Amount (in £000s)	60	84	204	209	242	37

Monserrat Citizens

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision is being made for citizens of Monserrat to seek temporary refuge in the United Kingdom during the present emergency caused by the volcanic eruption. [33338]

Mr. Kirkhope: Arrangements have been announced enabling Montserratians who can be accommodated by sponsors in the United Kingdom, and who can meet their own travel costs, to be admitted to the United Kingdom on an exceptional basis outside the immigration rules. To date, 103 people have registered an interest in these arrangements, 58 of whom have left Montserrat.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the results of the latest CCTV challenge competition; and if he will make a statement about plans for future competitions. [34096]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend will be announcing the results of the 1996–97 closed circuit television challenge competition on Friday 21 June. Details of the successful bids will be placed in the Library. The Government have stated their intention of making £45 million available for CCTV. Some £15 million of this will be available in 1997–98.

Boundary Commission Review

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he proposes to take on the report of the interim review of the Boundary Commission for England. [34097]

Mr. Howard: I have today laid before Parliament the report of the interim review of the Boundary Commission for England together with a draft Order in Council for giving effect, without modification, to the recommendations contained in the report.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the policy of detaining certain asylum seekers in prisons; [32776]

(2) if he will make it his policy to have immigration officers' decisions to detain asylum seekers in prison reviewed by an independent adjudicator after they have spent seven days in detention; and if he will make a statement. [32774]

Miss Widdecombe: Detention is carried out under the powers contained in the Immigration Act 1971. The overriding consideration is whether the overseas national is likely to comply with any restrictions upon him, including any arrangements for his removal from the country.

Wherever possible, Immigration Act detainees, including asylum seekers, are held in immigration service detention centres. Prisons are used only when no places are available in an immigration service detention centre, or where the detainee is unsuitable for detention in these establishments. Immigration detainees in prisons are generally held separately or with unconvicted prisoners and are accorded the same privileges as those on remand.

Currently, any detainee who has an appeal outstanding, or who has been detained for more than seven days for further examination having sought entry to the United Kingdom, may apply to the independent appellate authorities for bail. The Asylum and Immigration Bill contains provision to extend bail rights to everyone detained under Immigration Act powers.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what occasions over the last 12 months asylum detainees have been confined to their cells continuously for 48 hours; what were the reasons for such continuous confinements; and if he will make a statement. [32775]

Miss Widdecombe: Between 1 June 1995 and 31 May 1996, 54 immigration detainees were found guilty of an offence against prison discipline and given a punishment of cellular confinement of two days or more. Prison Service records do not distinguish between those who had sought asylum and those who had not. That information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of the number of asylum seekers currently detained under Immigration Act powers by (a) nationality, (b) gender, (c) place of detention, (d) length of detention and (e) immigration status at the time of application; and if he will indicate how many of these detainees' asylum applications have (i) yet to be determined, (ii) been refused with an appeal pending and (c) been refused and the appeal been refused. [33267]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information requested is in the tables.

Stalking

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many new cases of stalking were reported to the police in (a) the Metropolitan police authority and (b) each other police force area for each year since 1990. [32585]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the issue of stalking since 13 May. [33720]

Mr. Maclean: Since 13 May, we have received representations on the issue of stalking from: the National Anti-Stalking and Harassment Campaign, NASH; the Suzy Lamplugh Trust; hon. Friends and hon. Members and noble Lords in another place; and 13 members of the public, including victims of stalking.

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what proposals he has to provide for a criminal offence of stalking; [33721]

(2) what representations he has received about the Stalking (No. 2) Bill [Lords]. [33722]

Mr. Maclean: Of the representations we have received on this subject, only early-day motion 875 made specific reference to the Stalking (No. 2) Bill.

The Government will be publishing a consultation paper shortly, which will put forward comprehensive proposals for legislation to deal with stalking.

Domestic Violence

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many separate incidents of domestic violence were reported to police in (a) the Metropolitan police authority and (b) each other police force area in each year since 1985; how many resulted in prosecutions and how many resulted in convictions. [32588]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Assaults (Women)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many physical assaults and robberies against women were reported to police in (a) the Metropolitan police authority and (b) each other police force area for each year since 1990; how many of these cases were taken to court; and how many resulted in convictions. [32589]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Police (Sexual Harassment)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many complaints of sexual harassment were made by women police officers in (a) the Metropolitan police authority and (b) each other police force for each year since 1993; [32689]

(2) what steps he is taking to monitor levels of sexual harassment in the police service. [32688]

Mr. Maclean: Records of the number of complaints of sexual harassment made by women police officers are not kept centrally. All police forces in England and Wales have an equal opportunities statement and a grievance procedure, both of which will cover sexual harassment. Individual forces monitor the implementation and effectiveness of their equal opportunities policies, including those dealing with sexual harassment, and the operation of their grievance procedures. In addition, Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary pays close attention to this area during the inspection of individual forces.

Prisons (Private Sector)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans for greater involvement of the private sector in the Prison Service and the targeting of regime activities. [33445]

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Rossendale and Darwen (Ms Anderson) on 4 June, Official Report, column 327.

Prisons (Staff)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff inquiries about the exit package in the Prison Service have been received; how many staff will be taking the package during the current financial year; and if he will make a statement. [33446]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 20 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about exit packages from the Prison Service.

Just over 3,600 staff have applied to be considered for voluntary early retirement or severance. Earlier this year, business plans produced by governors and heads of headquarters groups and units indicated a likely net loss of about 1,500 posts during 1996–97. However, some proposals are being reviewed in the light of changing circumstances. It is not yet possible to say, therefore, exactly how many staff will be offered, and will accept, the exit package during this financial year. We aim to start letting staff know the outcome of their applications shortly.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average number of days spent on training by prison staff during 1995–96; and if he will make a statement. [33440]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 20 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General, to reply to your recent Question about the average number of days spent on training by prison staff during 1995/96.

In 1995/96, the Prison Service monitored staff training for prison officer grades. For these grades, the Service achieved an average of 6.2 days training per member of staff.

In 1996/97, the Service is monitoring the training of all of its staff, and is committed through a new Key Performance Indicator to achieve an average of at least six days training per member of staff.

Prisons (Morale)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on morale, job satisfaction and security in the Prison Service. [33447]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 20 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about morale, job satisfaction and security in the Prison Service.

Prison work by its nature is difficult and demanding. Nevertheless, a staff survey in 1994 indicated that two thirds of staff were satisfied with their jobs, and over half felt proud to work for the Prison Service.

At present the service needs to lose some posts, but we are seeking as far as possible to achieve this by a mixture of natural wastage and voluntary redundancy.

The next survey is due to be carried out in 1997 and this will provide more up-to-date information.

Police (Strength)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were employed in each police force area for each year since 1980; and how many were employed as beat officers. [32587]

Mr. Maclean: Information on police strength from 1980 to 1995 can be found in the appendix to the annual reports of Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary, copies of which are in the Library. Details of police strength for each force at March 1996 are set out in table A.

Information on the number of officers specifically assigned to beat duties is not available. Information on patrol strength in each force is available from 1991 and is set out in table B.

Prisons (Programmes)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners completed (i) programmes accredited as being effective in reducing reoffending and (ii) the sex offender treatment programme in the last financial year; and if he will make a statement. [33439]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 20 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many prisoners have completed (i) programmes accredited as being effective in reducing reoffending and (ii) the sex offender treatment programme in the last financial year.

For the year ending 31 March 1996, 406 prisoners completed the core module of the sex offender treatment programme (SOTP) while a further 33 completed the SOTP booster programme (designed for men about to be released from very long sentences).

746 prisoners completed cognitive skills programmes, 115 of these being the reasoning and rehabilitation programme and 631 being the in-house thinking skills.

In order to meet the criteria set for programmes to be accredited the standards of existing programmes have had to be improved. Although this work has been completed it is too early to say how many prisoners have commenced running the enhanced programmes or provide numbers for completion.

Prisons (Disorder)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on preparation for disorder in the Prison Service; and how he will update the contingency plans. [33444]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 20 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the preparation for disorder in the Prison Service and the update of contingency plans.

The central Incident Intelligence Support unit monitors order in prisons and allows governors and area managers to identify those prisons with a rising trend of disorder in order to take corrective action.

Each prison has contingency plans, which are tested and updated annually, to assist governors in managing disorder. The command suite at headquarters is activated whenever there is a potentially serious possibility of major operational difficulty. Incidents are then managed by a senior prison governor, and additional resources allocated as required. The command suite, like establishments' contingency plans, is regularly tested to ensure that procedures are as effective as possible.

Restraint Cells

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to develop a controlled restraint cell unit; where it will be located; and if he will make a statement. [33448]

Miss Widdecombe: A Prison Service study has examined the feasibility costs and benefits of concentrating the high security risk prisoners and those posing the most severe control problems in a top security prison. Ministers are considering the findings.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for project licences have been refused under section 5(4) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 on the ground that the benefits likely to accrue as a result of the programme of research are not sufficient to outweigh the adverse effects on the animals concerned. [32812]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 17 June 1996]: Statistics are not kept.

Project proposals which cannot be justified are almost always withdrawn by the applicant when challenged by the animals (scientific procedures) inspectorate. This precedes the formal application process and refusal is, therefore, necessary on only a small number of occasions.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Next Steps Agencies

Ms Jowell: To ask the Attorney-General what is the total number of people employed by each of the next steps agencies under his Department's control; how many of those employees are women; and at what civil service or equivalent grades they are employed. [32726]

The Solicitor-General: My right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General is responsible for two next steps agencies: the Treasury Solicitor's Department and the Government Property Lawyers. As at 1 April 1996, the total number of people employed by the Treasury Solicitor's Department was 383, of whom 183 were women, and the total number of people employed by the Government Property Lawyers was 129, of whom 67 were women. The number of women employed as at 1 April 1996 within each grade is in the following table.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

United Nations Industrial Development Organisation

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of (a) the work of UNIDO and (b) the impact of the restructuring which has taken place within that organisation in terms of value for money; and what discussions he has been involved in concerning its long-term future. [33550]

Mr. Hanley: We have commissioned an external assessment of UNIDO's performance and value as a development agency. We are considering the conclusions of the review in the light of the restructuring that has taken place within UNIDO and in the context of wider UN reform.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

St. Bede's College, Manchester

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will investigate the proposal by St. Bede's college, Manchester, to introduce a fee-paying element for pupils at that school whose fees are paid by Trafford local education authority. [33551]

Mrs. Gillan: No. This is a matter for Trafford local education authority to resolve with St. Bede's college.

University Lecturers

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many university lecturers took early retirement in each year since 1975. [33559]

Mr. Forth: This information is not held centrally.

University Personnel

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many university personnel are on (a) full-time contracts and (b) part-time contracts. [33560]

Mr. Forth: According to figures to be published shortly by the Higher Education Statistics Agency, the number of academic staff employed on a full-time basis in UK higher education institutions in 1994–95 was 102,700. The number of part-time staff was 12,000.

Students (Plagiarism)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students have failed to complete their degrees or been awarded pass or third-class degrees after being accused of plagiarism in each of the last five years. [33561]

Mr. Forth: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to ensure proper appeal structures are in place for students accused of plagiarism in their university coursework. [33562]

Mr. Forth: This is a matter for universities and colleges of higher education, which, as independent and autonomous bodies, are responsible for their own academic and administrative affairs, including any arrangements for considering appeals from students about the assessment of their coursework.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the percentage of the budget of training and enterprise councils spent on the enterprise aspect of their work. [33564]

Mr. Paice: Training and enterprise councils play a central role in local economic development by co-ordinating the training and business support activity in their areas. As such, all the programmes they deliver on behalf of the Department contribute to local enterprise.

My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade also controls funds provided to TECs for a range of small business and enterprise activity including the business link initiative.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many TEC board members are women; and what steps she is taking to ensure women play a full part in TEC boards. [32691]

Mr. Paice: There are 139 female board members on English training and enterprise councils. As private companies, the appointment of board members is a matter for TECs. TECs are required to draw up and implement an equal opportunities strategy which relates to all their activities, including membership of the board.

National Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she last met with members of the National Council for Vocational Qualifications to discuss reform of the national vocational qualification system. [33737]

Mr. Paice: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment last met Sir Michael Heron, the chairman of the National Council for Vocational Qualifications, on 27 March 1996. The Secretary of State conveyed her priorities for NCVQ—including measures to further improve the quality of the national vocational qualification system—to its council via her annual guidance letter, 29 January 1996, and my hon. Friend Lord Henley, the Minister of State, Department for Education and Employment is in regular contact with the chairman of NCVQ.

Next Steps Agencies

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total number of people employed by each of the next steps agencies under her Department's control; how many of those employees are women; and at what civil service or equivalent grades they are employed. [32731]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows the number of full-time equivalent staff in the Teachers Pension Agency and in the Employment Service at 1 April 1996, broken down by gender and grade or managerial level:

Training

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) women and (b) men received employer-funded training in each of the last five years. [32690]

Mr. Paice: From the labour force survey, the estimated number of women and men employees who had received employer-funded on or off-the-job training in the four weeks prior to the interview in each of the last five years is shown in the following table:

	Women	Men
Spring 1991	1,152,000	1,470,000

Spring 1994	1,254,000	1,395,000
Spring 1995	1,131,000	1,257,000

Figures for spring 1995 are not comparable to those for earlier years because of a change in the survey questionnaire.

The information for numbers training in a year is not available in the form requested.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the proportion of (a) national vocational qualifications, (b) general national vocational qualifications and (c) modern apprenticeships currently obtained by (i) men and (ii) women by subject. [32693]

Mr. Paice: Information from the Department's national information system for vocational qualifications on the proportion of men and women achieving NVQs and GNVQs by subject area is given in the following table. Modern apprenticeships were launched in September 1995 and it is too early to present information on successfully completed modern apprenticeships.

Female Ethnic Minority Pupils

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the performance, by (a) subject and (b) ethnic minority of female ethnic minority pupils at (i) general certificate of secondary education and (ii) A-level. [32692]

Mr. Paice: The Dearing review of 16 to 19 qualifications included a recommendation for work on developing a framework for national monitoring of candidate achievement by ethnic origin, which my right hon. Friend remitted to the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority and National Council for Vocational Qualifications for further study and advice. We also intend to obtain information about the progress of minority ethnic pupils in individual schools, by means of information gathered by the Office for Standards in Education as part of its regular inspection cycle and to undertake research as necessary, to look in greater depth at particular issues.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in respect of phase 1 and phase 2 of the nursery voucher scheme, how many inspectors she is aiming to recruit for each phase; how many applications to become a nursery education inspector she has received; how many such applicants have enrolled in the relevant training course; and of these, how many have successfully completed the course, to qualify as a nursery education inspector. [33539]

Mr. Robin Squire: In phase 1, the chief inspector of schools aims to recruit, train and register 200 to 300 nursery education inspectors: to date, some 450 applications have been received and 320 have been selected to undergo a training and assessment course before the end of July. The number successfully completing will be known when all the courses have been received for phase 2 against a target of 2,000 to 4,000. This is very encouraging.

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when her Department plans to conclude its discussions with the Copyright Licensing Agency to ensure compliance with copyright law. [33764]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has been in correspondence with the Copyright Licensing Agency Ltd. but has had no reply since our last communication of 21 December 1995.

TREASURY

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new recipients of incapacity benefit paid income tax in 1995–96; how many of these had their tax deducted at source by the Benefits Agency; and what was the total tax yield for 1995–96. [32236]

Mr. Jack: It is estimated that there were about 175,000 new claimants of taxable incapacity benefit in 1995–96 who were liable to income tax. Of this number, about 25,000 had no other source of taxable income and had tax deducted from their benefit by the Benefits Agency. The estimated revenue yield for 1995–96 is about £30 million.

Construction Industry

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are currently unemployed whose last registered employment was in the construction industry. [33749]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information available from the winter—December to February—1995–96 labour force survey, shows that in Great Britain, there were 263,000 currently unemployed persons whose last reported employment was in the construction industry.

Next Steps Agencies

Ms Jowell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total number of people employed by each of the next steps agencies under his control; how many of those employees are women; and at what civil service or equivalent grades they are employed. [32742]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executives of the Royal Mint, the Office for National Statistics, the Valuation Office and Paymaster agencies. I have asked each of them to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Roger Holmes to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 20 June 1996:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply to your Question about the employment of women.

The Royal Mint currently employs a total of 1003 staff—624 Industrial and 379 Non Industrial—of whom 174 are women.

The Royal Mint no longer employs staff under Civil Service Grades. I have nevertheless drawn broad comparisons. They are tabulated below:

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 20 June 1996:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply to your Question on the total number of people, and the number by grade of women, employed by the executive agencies under the control of his department as far as it relates to the Office for National Statistics.

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) was formed on 1 April 1996 with the merger of the Central Statistical Office (CSO) with the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS). With effect from 14 June 1996 the total number of people employed by the new agency was 3,434. This includes 3,229 permanent and fixed term appointment staff and 205 casual staff.

2,045 of the staff employed by ONS are women. They are employed in all grades from Support Bands up to members of the Senior Civil Service (formerly Grade 5s). An analysis of the number of women employed by grade is attached to this letter.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Earnings

Ms Jowell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are earning less than £2.50 per hour in (a) Dulwich, (b) Luton, (c) Swindon and (d) the United Kingdom, breaking the figures down by (i) age, (ii) gender and (iii) ethnic origin. [32682]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information from the labour force survey for the number of employees in Great Britain in 1995 who earned less than £2.50 per hour is shown in the tables. The information for local areas, such as Dulwich, Luton and Swindon, is not available.

Employees earning less than £2.50 per hour by sex and ethnic origin

Unemployment

Ms Jowell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the total number of people registered unemployed in (a) Dulwich, (b) Luton and (c) Swindon, on 1 April 1996 and in each of the last five years; and what percentage this represented of the total work force; [32683]

(2) how many people are unemployed and claiming benefit in (a) Dulwich, (b) Luton and (c) Swindon; and how many of these will qualify for the new jobseeker's allowance. [32686]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The latest figures show that in May 1996, on the unadjusted basis, claimant unemployment in the Dulwich constituency, and the Swindon constituency stood at 4,539 and 4,147 respectively. The figures for Luton relate to the local authority area only and stand at 7,360.

It is not possible to determine how many of the people who are currently claimant unemployed will be entitled to jobseeker's allowance in October. If, however, their circumstances remain unchanged until October, they will transfer to JSA.

Further information on the number of people claimant unemployed in the areas requested can be obtained from the Nomis database accessed by the House of Commons Library.

Comparisons with the April 1966 figures will be affected by the changeover in January 1996 from a 1981–based ward geography to a 1991–based geography. The estimated effect of this rebasing exercise on each of these areas was the change their (January 1996) levels as follows: Dulwich, –7; Luton, –34; Swindon, +96.

Dewsbury Tax Office

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many letters his Department received in 1994 (a) objecting to and (b) supporting the proposed closure of Dewsbury tax office. [33623]

Mr. Jack: The Inland Revenue has received 60 letters objecting to the proposed closure of Dewsbury tax office and none supporting it.

Mrs. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated cost of the move of the Dewsbury tax district office from Dewsbury to Leeds. [33624]

Mr. Jack: The proposal to move Dewsbury tax office to Leeds is at an early stage and it is not possible at present to estimate the costs of this.

Mrs. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated cost of running a tax shop in Dewsbury. [33625]

Mr. Jack: The initial estimate of the annual cost of running a tax shop in Dewsbury is £90,000.

Mrs. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people whose tax is currently handled by the Dewsbury tax office will be self-assessed for taxation in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99. [33626]

Mr. Jack: Some 15,500 individuals whose tax is currently handled by Dewsbury tax office will become self-assessed for taxation in 1996–97. It is unlikely that this number will change significantly in 1997–98 and 1998–99.

Mrs. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have visited or telephoned the Dewsbury tax office, for information or advice in each of the tax years to April 1995 and April 1996. [33627]

Mr. Jack: Details of the number of people who visited or telephoned the Dewsbury tax office and tax inquiry centre in the years ended April 1995 and April 1996 are as follows:

Year to	Personal callers	Telephone inquiries
April 1995	9,132	53,074
April 1996	9,442	56,203

Judicial Review

Ms Hodge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions in each Session since 1991–92 legislation has been introduced into Parliament by his Department with the purpose of (a) removing the effects of a judicial review decision or (b) implementing a judicial review decision; and if he will list the relevant legislative provisions. [33596]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 19 June 1996]: None to date.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many decisions by his Department were challenged by way of judicial review in each Session since 1991–92; and if he will list in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld by the court, (b) the court found for the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgment and (d) the Department appealled successfully against the judicial review decision. [33567]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 19 June 1996]: Two, both dating from 1993. Since in both cases issues of European Community law were referred to the European Court of Justice, decisions of the English courts are still awaited.

Partial Birth Abortions

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many partial birth abortions have been recorded as taking place in (a) NHS hospitals and (b) licensed premises in England and Wales. [33030]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 18 June 1996]: I have been asked to reply.

We are not aware of this procedure being used in the United Kingdom.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Next Steps Agencies

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total number of people employed by each of the next steps agencies under his Department's control; how many of those employees are women; and at what civil service or equivalent grades they are employed. [32734]

Mr. Hanley: The only next steps agency under this Department's control is the Wilton House Conference Centre. A total of 33 people are employed there, five of whom work part time. The grade and gender breakdown is:

	Male	Female
Assistant Principal (HCS5)	1	—
Principal (HCS7)	3	3
Executive Officer	1	7
Administrative Officer	—	4
Senior Personal Secretary	—	1
Personal Secretary	—	1
Catering Manager 3	1	—
Chef 2	1	—
Support Grade 2	3	5
Total	12	21

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 17 June, Official Report, column 327, if the teacher referred to will be given back her job after her confinement leave if she so wishes. [33719]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The St. Helena Government have informed us that the teacher concerned will not be given her job back after her confinement because the vacancy created by her resignation has meanwhile been filled. Should a vacancy arise in the future, she will be able to apply for a job under the terms of the recently revised public service orders.

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his Department will decide whether it is obliged to purchase a licence from the Copyright Licensing Agency. [33766]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We will take the necessary action concerning a licence with the Copyright Licensing Agency when discussions with the agency have been concluded.

International Labour Organisation Conventions

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he proposes to take during discussions at the ILO and Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, and at the World Trade Organisation conference in Singapore, to promote ILO conventions on the right to freedom from slavery, servitude and forced labour with particular respect to low-income countries. [33041]

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

The promotion of International Labour Organisation conventions is a matter for the ILO, in which the UK continues to play a full part.

Miss Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to promote the International Labour Organisation conventions on freedom from discrimination, social security coverage and health and safety protection at the G7 summit in Lyons and the World Trade Organisation meeting in Singapore. [33042]

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

International Labour Organisation conventions are not on the agenda for discussion at the G7 summit in Lyon on 27 to 29 June or at the World Trade Organisation meeting in Singapore in December 1996.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list each of the grants made by each of the lottery boards in respect of which (a) projects, (b) organisations and (c) individuals in Northamptonshire may receive support. [32238]

Mr. Sproat: Information on lottery awards broken down by the areas of support requested is not available. For a full list of lottery awards in Northamptonshire, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 11 June, Official Report, columns 99–100.

Television Licences

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to widen access to the £5 concessionary television licence for retired people and those living in warden-patrolled accommodation. [33114]

Mr. Sproat: The Government have no plans to extend general availability of the concessionary television licence scheme for those living in accommodation for residential care. However, we intend to correct the situation where a whole housing scheme applies for the concession but cannot qualify solely because of the ownership circumstances of a small proportion of dwellings within its boundary.

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) how many prosecutions there have been against people for non-payment of the television licence fee for every year since 1990; and what is the average cost to the Exchequer of these prosecutions; [33317]

(2) what estimate he has made of the gender and average income of those individuals (a) prosecuted and (b) found guilty of non-payment of the television licence fee. [33316]

Mr. Sproat: According to figures provided by the BBC, the number of people prosecuted for television licence evasion in the United Kingdom for each year since 1990 was:

Year	Number of prosecutions (to nearest thousand prosecutions)
1990–91	183
1991–92	209
1992–93	232
1993–94	219
1994–95	210
1995–96	215

Information is not collected on gender or average income of those prosecuted for licence evasion, nor on the average cost to the Exchequer of prosecutions. Information on convictions for offences under the Wireless Telegraphy Acts is set out in the Home Office's annual publication "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales", supplementary table Vols. 1 and 2, which is held in the Library of the House.

Mr. Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proportion of the revenue generated by the television licence fee was absorbed by the cost of its collection in the last year for which figures are available. [33327]

Mr. Sproat: In 1995–96, the costs of collecting the television licence fee comprised 5.2 per cent. of the income generated by licence sales.

Sports Clubs

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to encourage non-dividend-paying sports clubs to increase their youth development programmes; and if she will make a statement. [33172]

Mr. Sproat: Following the publication of the sports policy statement "Sport: Raising the Game" in July 1995, the Sports Council's regional offices have made it a priority to provide advice and information to schools, sports clubs, governing bodies of sport and local authorities on how best to establish school/club links. The Sports Council itself will establish a £2 million challenge fund to help develop school/club links. It is hoped that applications will be invited from schools, sports clubs and governing bodies of sport including non-dividend-paying sports clubs this autumn.

The sportsmatch scheme, launched by the Government in 1992 to increase the amount of business sponsorship going into grass roots and sport and physical recreation, has also earmarked up to £1 million for school projects. A great number of these projects could be aimed at improving links between sports clubs, other organisations and schools.

Historic Buildings (Admission Charges)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to review admission prices to castles and historic buildings managed by English Heritage. [33641]

Mr. Sproat: This is an operational matter for English Heritage. I have no plans to intervene in its arrangements.

Next Steps Agencies

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the total number of people employed by each of the next steps agencies under her Department's control; how many of those employees are women; and at what civil service or equivalent grades they are employed. [32729]

Mr. Sproat: My Department is responsible for two agencies, the Historic Royal Palaces agency and the Royal Parks agency. HRPA employs 419 staff, of whom 183 are women. RPA employs 250 staff, of whom 68 are women. The following table shows the grades women are employed in and their respective numbers in those grades. These figures do not include casual staff.

	Number of women—HRPA	Number of women—RPA

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on what occasions her Department has signed a licence from the Copyright Licensing Agency. [33765]

Mr. Sproat: None. The Department of National Heritage is currently discussing the terms of its photocopying licence with the Copyright Licensing Agency. We expect to sign the final licence shortly.

Judicial Review

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on how many occasions in each Session since 1991–92 legislation has been introduced into Parliament by her Department with the purpose of (a) removing the effects of a judicial review decision or (b) implementing a judicial review decision; and if she will list the relevant legislative provisions. [33590]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 19 June 1996]: No such legislation has been introduced by the Department of National Heritage since its inception in 1992.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many decisions by her Department were challenged by way of judicial review in each Session since 1991–92; and if she will list in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld by the court, (b) the court found for the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgment and (d) the Department appealed successfully against the judicial review decision. [33572]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 19 June 1996]: One decision was upheld by the courts in each of the Sessions 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96. Additionally, in 1995–96 one application for judicial review against the Department was struck out. In no cases during the periods in question have the courts found for the applicant; nor has the Department ever submitted to judgment. It follows that the Department had never appealed against a judicial review decision.

HEALTH

Prescriptions (Students)

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many claims for free prescriptions have been made by students; and how many have been successful for 1995–96 and in each of the previous five years. [29039]

Mr. Malone: During 1992–93, around 248,000 low-income scheme claims were made by students of which around 52 per cent. resulted in entitlement to free prescriptions. For 1993–94, the figures were respectively around 308,000 and 60 per cent. and for 1994–95 around 333,000 and 72 per cent. Information was not collected for years before 1992–93 and is not yet available for 1995–96.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many claims for free prescriptions have been made by students; and how many have been successful for the latest year for which figures are available. [1059]

Mr. Malone [pursuant to his reply, 21 November 1995, c. 66]: I regret that my previous answer was incorrect. It should have read as follows:

"During 1994–95, around 333,000 national health service low-income scheme claims were made by students of which around 72 per cent. resulted in entitlement to free prescriptions".

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the members for the day who attended the meeting of the Committee on Safety of Medicines held on 13 October 1995; [31866]

(2) how many full members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines were present at the meeting of the committee held on 13 October 1995. [31862]

Mr. Malone: Proceedings of the committee are confidential.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) of 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1150, if he will list the factors which led to the choice of Professor Rawlins and Professor Langman to attend the meeting of the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products on 26 to 27 October. [31895]

Mr. Malone: Professor Rawlins and Professor Langman attended the meeting on the basis of their long-standing expertise in pharmacoepidemiology, and in their capacities as chairman of the Committee on Safety of Medicines and chairman of the Sub-Committee on Pharmacovigilance respectively.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral statement of 23 October 1995, Official Report, column 701, of what data the Medicines Control Agency requested an expedited analysis. [31864]

Mr. Malone: The Medicines Control Agency requested an expedited analysis of the data on venous thromboembolism from the transnational case control study. The Medicines Control Agency discussed with the investigators the availability of information on the relative risks of myocardial infarction and stroke with different oral contraceptives and understood that substantive data would not be available for one to two years.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 December 1995, Official Report, columns 521–24, if he will list the members for the day of the Committee on Safety of Medicines during the period 1 January 1995 to 31 December 1995. [31860]

Mr. Malone: The information requested will be contained in the committee's annual report which will be published in due course.

Mr. Hughes: to ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 December 1995, Official Report, columns 520–21, if all members and co-opted members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines received at 10.30 am on 12 October the papers relating to desogestrel and gestodene which had been dispatched on 11 October. [31861]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave him on 1 April, Official Report, column 53, and on 16 April, Official Report, column 487.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which individual in the World Health Organisation in July 1995 made available preliminary results from the World Health Organisation study on oral contraceptives to the Medicines Control Agency. [31911]

Mr. Malone: The preliminary results from the study were provided to the Medicines Control Agency by the World Health Organisation in confidence.

Residential Care (Mental Handicap)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many residential places for adults with mental handicap have been purchased by (a) health authorities and (b) social services departments in the past year; [33068]

(2) how many residential places for children with mental handicap have been purchased by (a) health authorities and (b) social services departments in the past year. [33067]

Mr. Bowis: The number of community occupied bed days purchased for patients with learning disabilities in England by the national health service in nursing homes, residential care homes or group homes in England in 1994–95 was reported to be 5.3 million, an average of 14,500 places on any one day. The figure is for all ages, including children; no age breakdown is available.

English social services departments supported 23,000 adult residents with learning disabilities in residential or nursing care in England at 31 March 1995. Comparable information for children is not available centrally. For Wales, this is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the effect on the funds and resources available to support people with mental handicap needing residential care of the closure of mental handicap hospitals and the sale of hospital sites; [33078]

(2) what steps he is taking to provide alternative provision for the care of those patients with mental handicap currently in mental hospitals which have already published locally their closure dates. [33065]

Mr. Bowis: It is for health and local authorities to work together to determine the best use of financial and other resources in planning the development of community based services for people with learning disabilities.

Decisions about the provision of services to meet the continuing care needs of patients with learning disabilities in long-stay hospitals are for the relevant heath authorities in consultation with social service departments and in the light of departmental guidance contained in HSG(92)42, LAC(92)15 and HSG(95)8, copies of which are available in the Library. In Wales, this is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people with mental handicap were in (a) mental handicap hospitals and (b) other residential provision, including local authority, private, or voluntary in (i) 1970, (ii) 1980, (iii) 1990 and (iv) the most recent year for which figures are available. [33069]

Mr. Bowis: Centrally available information for England is shown in the table.

Adults with learning disabilities in hospitals and residential care, England

	National health service hospitals and units[1]	Private hospitals, beds[1]	Nursing homes, beds[2]	Residential homes, places[2]
1970	55,400	—	—	[3]3,100
1980	44,400	—	—	[4]13,800

[1] The figures are not directly comparable over time because of changes in the method of data collection. The 1970 and 1980 figures are estimates of residents at 31 December derived from the mental health inquiry which covered NHS mental handicap hospitals and units. The 1990 and 1995 figures are estimates of those in hospital under the care of a learning disabilities consultant, at 31 March. They are estimates based on a combination of data from the hospital episodes system and data obtained directly from the regional health authorities.
[2] Figures for beds and places have been given, rather than for occupied beds and residents, because the latter are not available before 1994 and 1987 respectively.
[3] This figure is from 1969 and may not be the same basis as later data.
[4] Includes children with learning disabilities in voluntary and private homes (of which there were 800 in 1983).

Compensation

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost in each of the past five years of (a) sick pay and (b) compensation paid to employees of his Department or their families, or members of the public, as a result of (i) minor, (ii) major and (iii) fatal injuries related to the work of his Department, detailing incidents involving information technology and additionally those involving expenditure of more than £5,000. [33486]

Mr. Horam: The figures for sick pay in each of the past five years can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The cost of compensation paid to employees of the Department or members of the public in each of the past five years is as follows:

	Minor £	Major £
1991	7,264.53	—
1992	113.50	—
1993	900.00	7,067.38
1994	3,750.00	—
1995	6,523.00	79,834.98

There have been no fatal injuries in any of the past five years.

Two cases involved expenditure over £5,000. Both were settled out of court in the sums of £7,067.38 and £75,334.98 respectively.

There have been no compensation payments as a result on incidents involving information technology.

Health and Safety

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions in each of the past five years health and safety problems in his Department and its agencies have been reported via internal monitoring; and on how many occasions the Health and Safety Commission has become involved. [33484]

Mr. Horam: Information is not collected centrally on the regular health and safety inspections and checks in accommodation occupied by the Department of Health and its agencies. We have no record of any involvement by the Health and Safety executive in health and safety issues within buildings occupied by the Department or its agencies in the past five years.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost in each of the past five years of rectifying working conditions that were the responsibility of his Department and its agencies, to bring them up to acceptable health and safety standards, detailing incidents involving information technology and those involving expenditure of more than £5,000. [33487]

Mr. Horam: Expenditure specifically related to meeting health and safety standards is not recorded separately.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) minor, (b) major and (c) fatal injuries have been suffered by staff in his Department and its agencies in work-related incidents in each of the past five years, showing in each year how many were related to information technology and giving details of all incidents involving fatalities. [33485]

Mr. Horam: Figures are available only for the previous three years. The numbers of minor injuries are as follows:

1993–94: 85

1994–95: 91

1995–96: 76

During this period, there were no fatalities and only one major injury—1995–96. Information technology, related injuries are not separately identified.

Beta-interferon

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost to the NHS per patient for a course of treatment of the drug beta-interferon. [33372]

Mr. Malone: The length of a course of treatment with beta-interferon is for the doctor to determine, and varies from patient to patient.

Edgware Hospital

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the plans for the future provision of accident and emergency services at Edgware hospital. [33606]

Mr. Dorrell: Discussions about the future of the casualty service to be provided at Edgware have been proceeding for some months with local doctors and others. I expect these discussions to be concluded soon.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the exchange of correspondence between himself, the hon. Member for Hendon, North (Sir J. Gorst) and the hon. Member for Harrow, East (Mr. Dykes) on the future provision of accident and emergency services at Edgware hospital. [33612]

Mr. Dorrell: No.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of people employed by each of the next steps agencies under his Department's control; how many of those employees are women; and at what civil service or equivalent grades they are employed. [32735]

Mr. Horam: The information is provided in the following tables.

Now that the network is nearing completion, it will be supplemented by a national business links advertising campaign, which will begin on June 24. The small firms Ministers have been closely involved in the "Your Business Matters" consultation and in co-ordinating a response to the issues which most recently were raised.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what charges are made by the British Coal Authority in regard to the inspection and copying of records concerning the coal mining industry. [33032]

Bomb Bags

Ms Jowell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will reclassify bomb bags as fireworks. [32687]

Mr. John M. Taylor: As stated in my written reply to the hon. Member on 15 May 1996, Official Report, column 494, "bomb bags" are toys and therefore subject to the safety requirements of the Toys (Safety) Regulations 1995. I can see no advantage therefore in classifying these items to treat them as fireworks, for example for the purposes of the general product safety regulations. The items do not fall within the definition of a firework in British standard 7114:1988.

Euro 96 Merchandise

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he has taken to ensure that Euro 96 merchandise is clearly marked if produced by child labour. [33156]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 17 June 1996]: None. It is for the parties concerned to decide how to present their merchandise.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what reports he has received alleging that Euro 96 souvenir footballs have been made by child labour in Pakistan; and if he will make a statement. [33157]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 17 June 1996]: None. As the Government have made clear previously, we remain firmly opposed to the exploitation of child labour. That is why we are supporting this week, at this year's general conference of the International Labour Organisation, a resolution concerning the elimination of exploitative child labour.

Burma

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which British companies have current or planned investment in Burma of which he is aware; and what is its total value. [32359]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 18 June 1996]: It is not the practice of my Department to divulge information relating to British companies' individual investments overseas as this is considered commercially confidential. The British Government do not compile figures on the UK's total investment in Burma. However, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend Lord Fraser of Carmyllie on 19 March, Official Report, House of Lords, column 95.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to discourage tourism to Burma. [32358]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 18 June]: I have been asked to reply.

We have no current plans to discourage tourism to Burma. We do not think that this would be an effective means of achieving the principal objective of our policy towards Burma, which is to persuade the State Law and Order Restoration Council—SLORC—to introduce democracy and full respect for human rights.

WALES

Local Management of Schools (Funding)

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the deadlines, formal and informal, given to unitary authorities in Wales for production of section 42 statements of funding for local management of schools; and if he will list those authorities which (a) have complied and (b) have not complied with each deadline; [31924]

(2) if he will set out action which is available to him to take in respect of authorities which fail to comply with statutory deadlines for the production of section 42 statements of expenditure under schemes of local management of schools; and what action he has taken in respect of authorities in Wales which have failed to comply with recent deadlines. [31925]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Local education authorities are required by section 42(3) of the Education Reform Act 1988 and regulation 7 of the Education (School Financial Statements) (Prescribed Particulars) Regulations 1995 as applied in Wales by the Education (School Financial Statements) (Prescribed Particulars) (Amendment and Revocation) Regulations 1996 to publish, before the beginning of the financial year to which they relate, budget statements in respect of schools maintained by them.

Recognising the additional pressures faced by authorities in the light of local government reorganisation, including late finalisation of some local management of schools schemes, the Department indicated to LEAs that, for its own purposes, it would be prepared to wait until 30 April 1996 for submission of budget statements.

Complete section 42 statements were provided by 30 April by:

Torfaen

Blaenau Gwent

Carmarthenshire

Bridgend

Monmouth

The following authorities submitted budget details, but not complete statements:

Conwy

Cardiff

Flintshire

Vale of Glamorgan

Reminders were sent to authorities on 20 May requesting finalised budget statements by the end of May.

All authorities have now submitted budget statements to the Department, although in some cases they are incomplete. The Department is pursuing outstanding details with the authorities concerned.

My right hon. Friend has powers under section 99 of the Education Act 1944 to direct authorities to fulfil their statutory duties under education legislation if he considers it expedient to do so. He will consider using those powers in any cases where outstanding information is not provided shortly.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy on wind farms. [32887]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government's policy is to stimulate the development of renewable energy sources wherever they have prospects of being economically attractive and environmentally acceptable, in order to contribute to diverse, secure and sustainable energy supplies; a reduction in the emission of pollutants; the encouragement of internationally competitive renewable industries.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of prostate cancer have occurred in Wales in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [32895]

The amount of each school's budget depends on the resources the local authority concerned makes available to schools in its area.

DEFENCE

Next Steps Agencies

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total number of people employed by each of the next steps agencies under his Department's control; how many of those employees are women; and at what civil service or equivalent grades they are employed. [32732]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information will be placed in the Library.

Defence Codification Authority

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about defence agency status for the Defence Codification Authority. [34210]

Mr. Soames: I am pleased to report that the Defence Codification Authority became a defence agency of the Ministry of Defence on 17 June 1996. The aim of the DCA is to maximise the benefits of the NATO codification system by uniquely describing every item in the NATO inventory, thereby increasing the effectiveness and efficiency of logistics systems and operations, promoting interoperability and interchangeability, while reducing duplication and waste. The DCA currently has a staff of 161 civilians mainly based at Anderston, Glasgow with a small complement of staff at Didcot, Oxfordshire. The owner of the DCA will be Air Officer Communications and Information Systems at Headquarters Logistics Command, Brampton and its chief executive will be Mr. Ken Bradshaw.

The chief executive has been set the following key targets for the first year of operation:

1. To complete an annual policy evaluation by September 1996 and establish future policy direction to reflect strategic initiatives in NATO and the MOD.

2. To increase the rate at which the number of duplicate NATO stock numbers (NSNs) are eliminated by 0.15 per cent. of the total number of NSNs.

3. To extend the DCA's NSN database file purification service to the Army and RAF by March 1997.

4. To let a development contract for the item of supply information system ISIS2, by July 1996.

5. To install a financial management information system to meet HM Treasury accounts direction by March 1997.

6. To reduce the DCA's unit cost of NSN codification, assuming forecast levels of demand, to less than £61.

7. To reduce agency running costs by 5 per cent.

8. To reduce the number of post-codification queries to less than 14,000.

9. To define an acceptable quality level for inclusion in contracts with external suppliers by September 1996.

I am arranging for copies of the agency's framework document to be placed in the Library of the House.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those constituencies he has visited in the last three months on official business and those constituencies he intends to visit in the next three months; and if he will make a statement. [32330]

Mr. Portillo: During the last three months, I visited the following constituencies on official business:

Date	Constituency
6 March	Yeovil
8 March	Solihull
13 March	Ruislip-Northwood
19 March	Grantham
28 March	Manchester, Central
6–7 May	Birmingham, Ladywood
21 May	Mid-Norfolk

It is not my practice to give details of my future programme, but my office would normally write to hon. Members before visits to their constituencies on official business.

Publications (Subscriptions)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all (a) periodicals, (b) magazines and (c) journals received on subscription by his Department over the last three months. [33758]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department plans to conclude its discussions with the Copyright Licensing Agency to ensure compliance with copyright law. [33769]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The MOD library in conjunction with the Directorate of Intellectual Property Rights are currently considering a licence with the Copyright Licensing Agency. The MOD is awaiting a reply to correspondence sent to the agency.

SCOTLAND

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many representations he has received regarding the removal of the compulsory competitive tendering moratorium for Local Government (Planning and Land) Act 1980 work; what discussions he has held with local authorities and their representatives concerning this decision; and if he will make a statement; [32576]

(2) what factors underlay his decision to remove the moratorium on compulsory competitive tendering for Local Government (Planning and Land Act) 1980 work; and if he will make a statement. [32574]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend and I have received representations from hon. Members, private contractors and six local authorities. Contractors welcomed the decision to bring forward the reintroduction of compulsory competitive tendering to 1 January 1997, and drew my attention to the fact that, in the absence of compulsory competitive tendering, there had been a decline in the amount of work subject to competition. Some local authorities have, however, expressed concern about the practicality of the timetable and, in addition, one council has lodged a petition for judicial review of that decision.

My right hon. Friend and I remain strongly of the view that council tax payers should benefit from the introduction of competition as soon as is practicable. Nevertheless, in the light of the representations, and bearing in mind that we do not have powers to specify different dates for different authorities for the reintroduction of competition for work under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980, we have now decided not to make regulations bringing forward the date for reintroduction to 1 January. My right hon. Friend announced this in a letter to Rosemary McKenna, the president of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities on 13 June. Instead, we are consulting on that a practicable timetable for reintroduction would be, but clearly 1 January is no longer practicable.

Electoral Registers

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, per constituency (1) the number of overseas voters on the current Scottish electoral registers; [33050]

(2) the number of electors attaining the age of 18 years on the current Scottish electoral registers. [33061]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Electoral statistics collected from the 1996 electoral registers are based upon the new parliamentary constituencies which take effect at the next general election. The information on the numbers of overseas voters and of those attaining the age of 18 years is as follows:

were for (i) shotgun and (ii) firearm licences for each police force in Scotland, for each of the last five years for which figures are available; what were the reasons for such actions; how many appeals there were in each year and police force area; and how many were successful. [32955]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of shotgun and firearms licences revoked or cancelled in Scotland in each of the last five years, for which statistics are available, is set out in the table. The reasons for such actions are not recorded centrally nor is the number of appeals.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which statistics his Department has discontinued (a) the collection and (b) the publication of since 1989. [32863]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: (a) The following regular statistical surveys have been discontinued since 1989:

Survey of initial police action against children involved in crimes and offences: (discontinued from 1989).

Survey of detailed information from district courts on non-payment of police fixed penalties and non-payment of fiscal fines: (discontinued from 1990).

Survey of non-vocational further education in certain small centres: (discontinued from 1992).

Survey of foreign and Commonwealth students in teacher training colleges: (discontinued from 1993).

Survey of excesses and deficits in teacher supply: (discontinued from 1995).

Survey of applications for teaching posts: (discontinued from 1995).

Survey of number of cases dealt with by social work departments: (discontinued from 1995).

Survey of housing owned by regional authorities: (discontinued from 1996).

(b) Available information is that the publication of no other major statistical series has been discontinued since 1989: changes in the basis of publication of statistical series are made from time to time in response to requirements for information.

Offshore Installations (Solway Firth)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's role in respect of (a) consultations on the siting of the Esso exploration rig west of the Solway firth at the "Cod Hole" and (b) safeguarding the interests of commercial fishermen who currently fish there. [32373]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Esso is currently carrying out exploration drilling in block 112/15 to the west of the Solway firth which was awarded in the 14th round of offshore oil and gas licensing. This block is subject to strict conditions—agreed with, among others, the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department—to restrict the timing and scope of certain activities carried out under the licence. In accordance with these conditions, the company has kept SOAEFD fully informed in advance of each stage of its exploration work in the area. Esso also consulted a number of fishermen's associations—including the Scottish Fishermen's Federation, the Clyde Fishermen's Association and the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations—prior to deciding the location and timing of its exploration drilling.

Arrangements regarding the specific siting of drilling rigs are required by SOAEFD only when species that spawn in the sediment may be adversely affected by drilling activities. No specific arrangements of this nature were required in this case.

Next Steps Agencies

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of people employed by each of the next steps agencies under his Department's control; how many of those employees are women; and at what civil service or equivalent grades they are employed. [32738]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The numbers of males and females employed in each of the agencies, expressed in full time equivalent terms, are shown in the tables.

Health Service Estate (Revaluation)

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements are being made following the periodic revaluation of the NHS estate which was completed last year. [34099]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: One of the requirements of these valuations is to provide an independent estimate of the net current value of newly built property and for property that has become surplus to requirements since the last independent valuation exercise. This allows new property to be valued on a consistent basis with the existing NHS estate, preventing pricing distortions in the NHS internal market, and for the book value of surplus assets to be adjusted to a level that reflects likely net disposal proceeds. These adjustments require submission of trust debt to the consolidated fund and are technical in nature and involve no loss to the Exchequer. Her Majesty's Treasury has today presented a minute to the House giving particulars and the circumstances of the remission which it has approved in principle.

Local Authority Spending

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to cap Scottish local authorities in the current year. [34212]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Expenditure

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of gross domestic product is currently represented by social security expenditure. [32486]

Mr. Burt: On the basis of the latest available estimates of total expenditure in 1995–96, approximately 13 per cent.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will give a breakdown of the percentage of total incoming telephone calls to the Child Support Agency client helpline which received (a) a personal answer and (b) a recorded answer for each month since September 1994; [31920]

(2) what was the average (i) time to answer and (ii) call handling time on the Child Support Agency national client helpline in each month since September 1994; [31917]

(3) how many call handling positions are (a) staffed and (b) available on the Child Support Agency national client helpline; [31919]

(4) what percentage of calls were answered within the target time to answer on the Child Support Agency client helpline in each month since September 1994; and what was the target time to answer. [31918]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell [holding answer 12 June 1996]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Steve Heminsley to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 19 June 1996:

In the absence of Miss Chant, the Chief Executive, I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency Client Help Line.

Two of the questions refer to the "National Client Helpline". This section does not exist as such and appears to be a confusion of two titles: the Client Help Lines (CHL) which are based in the Child Support Agency Centres, and the National Enquiry Line (NEL). I have assumed that the intended reference is to the CHL.

The information requested is shown on the attached table, apart from the average time to answer a call. This information is not available.

When a client calls the CHL during opening hours they will receive a personal answer either immediately or after being held in a queue of calls. Like any other organisation where a great deal of contact with clients is by telephone, clients who do not receive an immediate answer may choose to hang up and ring at a later time, the later contact being successful.

Where, therefore, the attached figures refer to calls offered by BT, this does not represent the total number of people trying to get through. Research has shown that at peak times as many as 90% of the calls being presented can be from clients who are calling again after not getting through earlier. It follows that the figure showing the percentage of calls receiving a personal answer does not equate to the number of people who receive a personal answer. It is not possible to identify the individual number of callers trying to get through.

When the CHL is closed, clients will receive a recorded message provided by the BT National Screening Centre (NSC). Prior to February 1995 the BT NSC facility was used to provide a message for any calls that were unable to reach the CHL queue. This was withdrawn to avoid unnecessary charges incurred by the customer and the Agency. The percentage of calls shown to have received a recorded message since that date is as a consequence substantially lower.

The CHL aims to answer 80% of calls within 20 seconds. The total staffing complement for the CHL is 288.5 posts. The current staff in post figure is 264.5; 15 of whom are still receiving training. Additional staff are being recruited to fill vacancies on the CHL. Not all the Helpline positions are manned at any one time due to flexible working arrangements and leave.

The total number of calls to the client helpline offered by BT analysed by the percentage of those personally answered, the percentage of calls which received a BT national screening centre message (NSC), the number and percentage of calls that were answered within 20 seconds and the average duration of the calls answered

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what consideration has been given to the replacement of the Child Support Agency computer system; [33346]

(2) what meetings have taken place involving the chief executive of the Child Support Agency in the last three months where major changes to or replacement of the Child Support Agency computer system have been discussed. [33347]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Steve Heminsley to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 19 June 1996:

In the absence of Miss Chant, the Chief Executive, I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency Computer System (CSCS).

The Agency has recently conducted an Information Systems Strategy review, which included an analysis of any new systems that may be required and examined the likely timetable for the routine replacement or enhancement of existing systems, including CSCS. The findings are still being assessed and refined and the Agency is not yet in a position to announce a decision.

The Chief Executive of the Child Support Agency is involved in numerous meetings to discuss strategic issues for the Agency including CSCS.

Caller Service Sites (Yorkshire)

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which caller service sites in the Yorkshire area are to be lost; what are the Benefit Agency's plans for these sites; and what expenditure has been undertaken on each of these sites over the last five financial years. [33025]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jon Trickett, dated 19 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking which Caller Service sites in the Yorkshire area are to be lost; what are the Benefit Agency's plans for these sites; and what expenditure has been undertaken on each of these sites over the last five financial years.

Local managers have been reviewing the provision of caller outlets within the District network in the Yorkshire Area but no decisions have yet been made to close any individual site.

Should there be any proposals to close a particular site there would be local consultation in the usual way with customers, their MPs and customer representative groups.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Benefits Agency (Yorkshire)

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what running costs savings will be required of the management team in the Yorkshire area by the charge programme in the next three years; and what will be the change in the budget for the Hemsworth area for each of the next three years; [33023]

(2) what plans he has for staff reductions within the Benefits Agency in the Hemsworth area; and what estimate he has made of the numbers of staff who will be employed in the Wakefield district in each of the next three years. [33024]

Mr. Burt: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jon Trickett, dated 19 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking what running costs savings will be required of the management team in the Yorkshire area by the Change Programme in the next three years; what will be the change in the budget for the Hemsworth area for each of the next three years; what plans he has for staff reductions within the Benefits Agency (BA) in the Hemsworth area and what estimate he has made of the numbers of staff who will be employed at the Wakefield District in each of the next three years.

The Agency will carry out a wide-ranging review of its activities as part of the Departmental Change Programme. Such a programme of change will cover fundamental areas of the organisation's business and we are committed to achieve a 25% improvement in our productivity by 1998/99. In the first year it has been necessary to identify efficiencies and economies in excess of £200 million nationally.

The BA in the Yorkshire area is examining all aspects of BA processes and business services. Until that examination is complete the impact on running costs for the Yorkshire Area Management Team and Hemsworth cannot be assessed.

It is also too early to assess the precise impact this will have on staffing at a local level. However, there are at present no plans for any reductions of staff for the Wakefield District in this financial year.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what decisions were taken at the recent meeting of the Benefits Agency management team responsible for the Yorkshire area relating to the departmental change programme. [33022]

Mr. Burt: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jon Trickett, dated 19 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what decisions were taken at the recent meeting of the Benefits Agency (BA) management team responsible for the Yorkshire area relating to the departmental change programme.

The BA management team responsible for the Yorkshire area meet regularly to discuss all aspects of performance and service delivery in the Area they serve.

At one of their recent meetings the management team discussed the potential impact of the Departmental Change Programme and a range of other issues that could have an impact on the delivery of benefit services in Yorkshire. This is part of a normal planning process within the BA and is intended to assist managers in setting priorities and in planning the effective use of resources.

No firm decisions were taken at the meeting mentioned in relation to the Departmental Change Programme. However District Managers were asked to review their customer service provision in the light of the 1996/97 budget allocation to ensure they provide a high quality service at the lowest possible cost.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Health and Safety

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on how many occasions in each of the past five years health and safety problems in his Department and its agencies have been reported via internal monitoring; and on how many occasions the Health and Safety Commission has become involved. [33512]

Mr. Burt: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State fo Social Security what was the cost in each of the past five years of rectifying working conditions that were the responsibility of his Department and its agencies, to bring them up to acceptable health and safety standards, detailing incidents involving information technology and additionally those involving expenditure of more than £5,000. [33515]

Mr. Burt: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Child Benefit

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been (a) the number of child benefit recipients and (b) the expenditure on child benefit broken down into age bands and household income adjusted for family size for the latest year available. [33823]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is in the tables.

Estimates of expenditure include one-parent benefit; it is not possible to separately identify child benefit expenditure alone from survey data.

Benefit Deductions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many households, from data taken for the annual statistical inquiry, in 1993, 1994 and 1995, are having weekly deductions made from their supplementary benefit or income support as appropriate, for (a) electricity and (b) gas (i) of under £2 per week and (ii) in each £1 band above £2 per week up to £50 per week. [33620]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Numbers have been given, as requested, in £1 bands for deductions in excess of £2 per week, but only to a deduction level of £23 for gas and £24 for electricity. All higher amounts are banded together as numbers are too small to break down accurately.

Severe Hardship Payments

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many young people aged 16 to 19 were receiving severe hardship payments for each year since 1992. [32586]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Year	Number of directions made
1992	83,406
1993	118,528
1994	111,797
1995	111,523

1. Severe hardship payments are made only to 16 and 17-year-olds who are registered for youth training and would otherwise suffer severe hardship. Access to benefit is via a direction made by the Secretary of State, normally for a period of eight weeks. If the 16 and 17-year-old is still at risk of severe hardship when the direction ends, he or she can apply for a further direction. Information is available only on the number of directions made, not the number of individuals.
2. Since 1988, the Government have further encouraged unemployed 16 and 17-year-olds to take the more positive option of youth training in place of dependence on benefit. Young people over the age of 18 have access to unemployment benefits as adults.

Departmental Efficiency Targets

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received about the feasibility of his plans to increase the efficiency of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [34098]

Mr. Lilley: I have received a number of representations about my programme to increase the efficiency of my Department by 25 per cent. A number of projects are already under way which will contribute to the achievement of this target including the redevelopment of the Department's Newcastle estate to provide significant savings in running costs while improving the working environment for staff through the involvement of the private sector.

Following the submission of proposals from three shortlisted suppliers, I am pleased to announce that a consortium consisting of AMEC Developments Ltd. and Building Property and Facilities Management has been selected as the preferred supplier to develop the Newcastle estate. Detailed negotiations will commence immediately and I expect a major contract under the private finance initiative to be signed later this year.

The number of appointments for a term of one year is as follows:

Historic Monuments Council—the appointment of 14 members in 1995–96 was for one year as a transitional arrangement. Appointments are usually for a three-year term.

Nature Conservation and the Countryside—the appointment of 16 members in 1995–96 was for one year only as a transitional arrangement. Appointments are usually for a three-year term.

Northern Ireland Housing Executive—Three appointments are on an annual basis.

Child Support Appeal Tribunals (CSARs)

Disability Appeal Tribunals (DATs)

Medical Appeal Tribunals (MATs)

Social Security Appeal Tribunals (SSATs)

Appointments to the above tribunals are initially for one year, and thereafter renewable at three-yearly intervals, provided service is satisfactory. In 1995, 82 medical assessors were appointed for one year for SSATs. They are not members, but provide advice on medical interpretation as required by the tribunals.

Central Medical Advisory Committee—a representative from the Northern Ireland Junior Doctor's Committee of the British Medical Association is appointed annually.

Statistics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which statistics his Department has discontinued (a) the collection and (b) the publication of since 1989. [32862]

Sir John Wheeler: Changes in the basis of compilation, presentation and publication of statistical series are made from time to time in response to the requirements of the Government and international organisations for statistical information. Other changes reflect changes in administrative systems on which some series are based, the development of new statistical techniques are technological developments affecting the compilation and dissemination of statistical data.

When such changes are made, they are normally documented in the relevant statistical publications.

[1] Joint appointments.

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people of the Northern Ireland Office central list in the public appointments unit (a) currently serve on more than one non-departmental or other public body, (b) have never served on a non-departmental or other public body and currently do not and (c) have previously served on a non-departmental or other public body and no longer do so. [32917]

Sir John Wheeler: In respect of those currently appointed to public bodies, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the right hon. Member for Strangford (Mr. Taylor), Official Report, column 740. No changes have occurred since that date. The other information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

RUC Chief Constable

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the service criteria and qualifications which he and the Police Authority will be applying in selecting the next Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. [32521]

Sir John Wheeler: In accordance with the provisions of section 7 of the Police Act (Northern Ireland) 1970, the appointment of the Chief Constable of the RUC is a matter for the Police Authority for Northern Ireland, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State.

I understand that, in relation to the appointment of the next Chief Constable of the RUC, the service criteria and qualifications decided upon by the Police Authority for Northern Ireland are set out in the public advertisement. They include:

(a) to have served in the chief officer grades for at least three years;

(b) to be suitable on medical grounds for the post;

(c) to have served at chief officer level in a constabulary with a substantial complement of officers;

(d) to have successfully completed the senior command course or the strategic leadership development programme or the chief police officers' course; and

(e) to have relevant experience of operational policing, policy, planning and resource management at chief officer level and have displayed the capacity for leadership and vision essential to the demands of the post.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what different criteria apply to the appointment of the Chief Constable of the RUC from the appointment of chief constables elsewhere in the United Kingdom. [32522]

Sir John Wheeler: The criteria used for the appointment of chief constables in other parts of the United Kingdom are a matter for each individual police authority at the time of appointment. There is therefore no single comparator which could be used to identify differences in the criteria applied to the appointment of the Chief Constable of the RUC.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes in the service criteria and service qualifications in the appointment of the Chief Constable of the RUC have been made since (a) 1969 and (b) 1989. [32523]

Sir John Wheeler: The information relating to appointments in 1969 is not available as records relating to that period cannot be traced.

In 1989, candidates for appointment to the post of Chief Constable of the RUC were required to:

(a) have achieved a high level of all-round professional competence;

(b) have held a post at chief officer level in a force with a minimum of 1,000 officers;

(c) (i) have experience of a wide range of police post at command level which should desirably include operations, administration, personnel and financial management; and

(ii) policing communities with complex social problems;

(d) have proven ability to manage resources both financial and personnel;

(e) have demonstrated the ability to be a team builder and have an understanding of the type of problems experienced in Northern Ireland.

Comparison of these with the service criteria and service qualifications required today indicates no substantive changes.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what factors underlay the delay in publishing the criteria for the appointment of the Chief Constable of the RUC. [32524]

Sir John Wheeler: I an not aware of any delay in the Police Authority for Northern Ireland's publication of the criteria for the appointment of the Chief Constable of the RUC.

Mr. Deva: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he plans to lay before the House the annual report for 1995 of the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. [34077]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Copies of the Chief Constable's annual report 1995 have today been placed in the Library. It is a general report on the carrying out by the RUC of its functions during 1995, which is submitted to the Police Authority for Northern Ireland and transmitted to me for laying before Parliament in accordance with section 15 of the Police Act (Northern Ireland) 1970.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total number of people

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are currently on the central list of the Northern Ireland Office public appointments unit for appointment to non-departmental and other public bodies. [32922]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 18 June 1996]: The current number is 4,538.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Forest Enterprise (Disabled People)

9. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with Forest Enterprise regarding the continuing employment opportunities for people with disabilities in English woodlands previously owned by the Forestry Commission. [32370]

Mr. Boswell: While Forest Enterprise has no such responsibility for woodlands which it has sold, the new owners must comply with the statutory requirements for employing people with disabilities.

Food Agency

10. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to set up an agency for food. [32371]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. Issues of food safety are best dealt with by the Government Department with responsibility for the whole food chain.

Farming (Environmental Management)

11. Mr. Thomason: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what programmes the Government have introduced to promote good environmental management by farmers; and what similar programmes were in existence in 1979. [32372]

Mr. Boswell: The Government's agri-environment programme provides a wide range of voluntary incentive schemes to encourage environmentally beneficial farming practices. There was no such programme in 1979.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

12. Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next intends to pay an official visit to Harborough to meet farming representatives to discuss BSE. [32374]

Mrs. Browning: I have no immediate plans to visit Harborough, but my colleague the Minister for Rural Affairs regularly meets the National Farmers Union county branch.

13. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the costs of BSE measures. [32375]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Southend, East (Sir T. Taylor).

20. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement about the action he is taking on BSE. [32382]

Mrs. Browning: The UK Government have prepared a report setting out the detailed programme on which we are embarked to eradicate BSE in the United Kingdom. This report has been widely circulated at home and abroad and copies have been sent to all hon. Members.

Food Safety

14. Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met consumer representatives to discuss measures to ensure the safety of food in the UK. [32376]

27. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met consumer representatives to discuss measures to ensure the safety of food in the United Kingdom. [32389]

Mrs. Browning: The Minister held one of his regular meetings with the chairmen of consumer organisations on Wednesday 8 May. He also met the Consumers Association to discuss bovine spongiform encephalopathy on the same day.

I met consumer organisations on 3 April and with the consumer panel on 25 April.

Common Agricultural Policy

15. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will report progress on reforming the community agricultural policy; and what further initiatives he intends to take. [32377]

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what mechanisms are in place for taking forward proposals for fundamental reform of the common agricultural policy; when he expects there to be substantial negotiations about reform; and what is his target date for achieving such reforms. [33247]

Mr. Baldry: This Government very much welcome the Commission's acknowledgement that the CAP cannot remain as it is. At the Prime Minister's insistence, the Madrid European Council requested the Commission to come forward with more detailed ideas for reform and I expect to see these during the course of the year. Meanwhile, the Agriculture Council next week will address reform of the fruit and vegetables regimes.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

16. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to expand the countryside stewardship scheme. [32378]

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

17. Mr. Touhig: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action is being taken to address the problem of discrimination against disabled people in agriculture where the employer is not covered by the provisions of the Disability Discrimination act 1995. [32379]

Mr. Boswell: Employers not covered by the employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 will be encouraged to follow the guidance in the employment code of practice.

25. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action is being taken in respect of discrimination against disabled people in agriculture where the employer is not covered by the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. [32387]

Mr. Boswell: Employers, including agricultural employers, who employ fewer than 20 employees are not covered by the employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. Such employers will be encouraged to follow the guidance in the employment code of practice. My noble Friend the Minister of State, Department for Education and Employment will be deciding when and how to promote this in due course.

Mr. Baldry: The scheme is under continuous review.

Live Animal Exports

21. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new plans he has to safeguard the welfare of live animals exported from the United Kingdom. [32383]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food gave to the hon. Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Mr. Forman) on 22 May 1996, Official Report, column 211.

Mr. Baldry: I most recently discussed fishing matters with Mrs. Bonino at the Fisheries Council on 10 June. No date has yet been fixed for our next discussion.

26. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies (a) he and (b) the Council of Agricultural and Fisheries Ministers of the European Community have commissioned in respect of the propagation and conservation policies adopted by Norway within their national territorial waters, and their possible adaptation for use by the European Community. [32388]

Mr. Baldry: UK and other EU fisheries experts maintain close contact with their Norwegian counterparts and the measures applied by Norway: discussions take place on both a formal and an informal basis in various forums. No studies have been commissioned by the UK; nor, so far as we are aware, by the EU. However, Norway and the EU share concerns on the state of North sea stocks. Joint working groups are studying the issues with a view to improving management arrangements for jointly managed stocks. Equally, there are common interests in the production of salmon on which there are continuing contacts.

Beef Ban

24. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his proposed timetable and procedure for the removal of the EU beef ban. [32386]

Mrs. Browning: We have already succeeded in removing any restrictions on the export of semen and on agreeing conditions for the export of gelatin and tallow. This is an important first step.

Our policy on the next steps is to agree a framework which sets out clear and agreed conditions which have to be met to lift elements of the export ban and indicates the dates by which we expect to meet these criteria. Negotiations with our Community partners on this are proceeding and I will keep the House informed of progress.

Fishing Fleet

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current tonnage of the United Kingdom fishing fleet; how far this is from its targets under the multi-annual guidance programme; and if he will make a statement. [34076]

Mr. Baldry: Latest available figures from the UK register show the current nominal tonnage of the UK fishing fleet as 207,000 tonnes. This figures, which represents some vessels measured in gross registered tonnes and others measured in gross tonnes, compares with an overall target for the end of 1996 in our existing multi-annual guidance programme of 176,981 GRT. Figures published recently by the European Commission, ostensibly using GT units, show us at 247,198 tonnes as against a target of 209,370 tonnes.

For a number of reasons, none of these figures give a correct picture of the actual position.

The first reservation relates to the end 1996 target itself. This was set using provisional data for the size of the UK fleet as at the end of 1991. We now know that this failed to include a significant number of vessels, the effect of which is to overstate the degree of reduction which we need to achieve.

The second reservation relates to the units of measurement used. Vessel tonnage is a volumetric measure which depends critically on the exact methodology. A valid comparison of fleet tonnage requires a consistent standard for the period in question. Consistency is, however, not readily achievable because the European Community is progressively altering the methodology used for the fishing fleet from the various national and international standards, previously collectively called GRT, to a common standard based on the international tonnage convention 1969 and known as GT. A phased programme of conversion was introduced by Council regulation (EEC) 2930/86, amended in particular by Council regulation (EEC) 3259/94, using technical provisions laid down in Commission decision 95/84/EC. Copies of these instruments are available in the House library. This process is not due to be completed until 2003.

There is no simple mathematical relationship between GRT and GT for any given vessel establishment of a GT figure can be done only by physical measurement or, in the case of smaller vessels, by the application of formulae designed to give an approximation. Moreover, although GT figures are often higher than GRT figures for the same vessel, the range of outcomes can be as low as 50 per cent. or as high as 300 per cent. of the original tonnage according to the individual vessel characteristics. It is therefore impossible to use general assumptions to convert either the end 1996 target, or the current nominal tonnage of our fleet, to a GT basis, since the true result will depend on the actual relationship between GRT and GT for each of the particular vessels included on each occasion. Thus conversion requires consideration of each individual vessel.

The Commission's attempted conversion in their recent published figures noted above, does not allow for this and does not use procedures agreed by member states or laid down in EU law. Their figures cannot therefore be properly described as GT, nor can the relationship between them be assumed to be proportional to actual progress in reducing our fleet.

Detailed work is being carried out to arrive at an accurate assessment of the UK position—similar uncertainties arise in relation to the figures for other member states. But, because records relating to vessels already removed from the fleet are not always sufficient to enable GT equivalents to be determined, there will necessarily be a degree of imprecision. Similarly, some newer vessels will be measured only in GT and would need to be remeasured to arrive at a GRT figure. As things stand, it is not therefore possible to give a valid comparison of performance against target on either basis.

These and other technical issues such as discrepancies between UK and Commission records of the number of vessels in our fleet, are being discussed bilaterally with the Commission. We are also passing full details of our calculations to it so that agreement can be reached on appropriate adjustments. The total impact of this technical review is quite substantial. Once completed and agreed, I anticipate we shall be within a handful of percentage points of our tonnage target.

Dietary Supplements

Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food at which Council of the European Union he expects the forthcoming draft directive on dietary supplements to be considered; and who will represent the United Kingdom at that Council. [33178]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer on 17 June 1996]: If the EU Commission tables a draft directive on dietary supplements, we would expect it to be considered at the Internal Market Council. The UK is normally represented at such meetings by the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs, but other Ministers may attend if necessary.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Local Authority (Property)

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his recent meeting with the Coal Authority and English Partnerships in relation to the disposal of the Coal Authority's property portfolio. [33828]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have had no such meeting.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits Agency

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if a decision has been reached on the future of the Benefits Agency freeline telephone advice service; and if he will make a statement. [34398]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Benefits Agency is committed to providing a more responsive service to customers and to getting benefit payments right first time. The agency has therefore been reviewing all of its activities to ensure that its activities are properly focused on delivery of such a service at the lowest possible cost. As part of this review, it has been decided that the agency's freeline service should close from 12 July 1996. The review has concluded that many of the customers who contact the freeline service subsequently have to make contact with their local office to pursue their inquiry. This is because the freeline service has no direct access to customer records and cannot therefore give advice about a specific benefit inquiry. The closure of freeline will enable BA to refocus its resources to ensure that customers are put directly in contact with those dealing with their claims or who can link the benefits available to customer's own personal circumstances and thus reduce duplication of effort both for the customer and our staff. The very substantial investment made by BA in its telephone equipment in recent years means that customers will find it much easier to contact their own local office direct. However the benefit inquiry line service will be retained for people with disabilities, their carers and representatives because of their special requirements for advice and information.

All staff currently employed on freeline duties will be redeployed elsewhere in the agency where their considerable skills will be put to good use.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Biffen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the monthly receipts to the Child Support Agency since April 1993. [32577]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to my right hon. Friend.

Letter from Steve Heminsley to Mr. John Biffen, dated 20 June 1996:

In the absence of Miss Chant, the Chief Executive, I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency receipts.

The information requested is shown in the attached table and is an extract from the monthly analyses of the flow of funds through the Agency's Client Fund Bank Account. The figures represent the receipts paid into the Client Funds Bank Account. They do not include those contributions to maintenance which are deducted from absent parents on Income Support and offset against the parent with care on Income Support. The Agency is advised of these contributions on a regular basis by the Benefits Agency.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the current (a) backlog and (b) waiting time in respect of cases to be dealt with by the Child Support Agency, Dudley office; and what plans he has to appoint extra staff. [32575]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Steve Heminsley to Ms Joan Walley, dated 20 June 1996:

In the absence of Miss Chant, the Chief Executive, I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Dudley Child Support Agency Centre.

The Agency estimates that its normal head of work would be around 250,000 cases in the process of a maintenance assessment. As of 30 April 1996 the Agency was dealing with 422,454 cases in which action had not been fully completed. The Dudley Child Support Agency Centre had 66,097 cases awaiting action.

Information on waiting times is not available in the format requested. The Agency does collect figures on the Secretary of State target to clear 60 per cent. of new maintenance assessments within 26 weeks. In April 1996, 53 per cent. of maintenance assessments had been cleared within 26 weeks.

The Dudley Child Support Agency Centre, in line with all the Centres, recruits new staff on an ongoing basis to maintain staffing levels.

I hope this is helpful.

Compensation Recovery Unit

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will state the 10 highest sums recovered by the compensation recovery unit from the victims of illness, accident or disease in 1995–96 and the nature of their illness or disability; [33359]

(2) what was the amount recovered by the compensation recovery unit in 1995–96; [33357]

(3) what projection he has made of the amount of money likely to be recovered by the compensation recovery unit in the present financial year; [33336]

(4) how much money was recovered from sufferers from asbestos-related diseases by the compensation recovery unit in 1995–96. [33358]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Tony Worthington, dated 20 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking if he will state the 10 highest sums recovered by the Compensation Recovery Unit (CRU) from the victims of illness, accident or disease in 1995–96 and the nature of their illness or disability; what was the amount recovered by the CRU in 1995–96; what projection he has made of the amount of money likely to be recovered by the CRU in the present financial year and how much money was recovered from sufferers from asbestos related diseases by the CRU in 1995–96.

The 10 highest sums recovered from individual victims of illness and the nature of the injury/disease they relate to is provided in the table below.

Amount £	Injury/disease
93,950.05	Neck injury
91,601.46	Multiple injuries
84,630.01	Back/spinal injury
79,186.77	Multiple injuries
73,217.08	Head/facial injury
72,337.38	Arm injury
70,756.37	[1]Miscellaneous
70,522.25	Head/facial injury
70,014.03	[1]Miscellaneous
69,945.16	Multiple injuries

[1] —miscellaneous injury is defined as lacerations, cuts, bruising or any combinatin whre no specific part of the body is mentioned.

The total amount recovered during 1995/96 was £135.1M. If the current trend continues it is envisaged that the amount recovered during the present financial year will be in the region of £145M.

Information relating to asbestos related diseases is not available. The system is not designed to identify these cases however, the amount recovered from asbestosis sufferers during 1995/96 was £1,507,320.58.

Data is provisional and subject to change.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in the Benefits Agency districts serving the London borough of Wandsworth are receiving housing benefit. [33712]

Mr. Roger Evans: On 30 November 1995, the latest date for which information is available, there were 30,500 recipients of housing benefit in the London borough of Wandsworth.

Notes:

1. Housing benefit is administered by local authorities, consequently these data are not collected on a Benefits Agency district basis.

Severe Disability Allowance

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what circumstances the Department reclaims overpayments from the estates of deceased severe disability allowance beneficiaries; and what duty it has to make payments to estates in cases of underpayment. [33329]

Mr. Roger Evans: There are general principles governing the recovery of overpayments of benefit and the payment of arrears in cases where the claimant had died. Income support and the severe disability premium are covered by these principles.

If an overpayment is caused by misrepresentation or failure to disclose a material fact, recovery is sought in appropriate cases. Recovery from the estate of a deceased claimant is considered only if a recoverable overpayment is outstanding or an overpayment is discovered due to non-disclosure of assets, after death.

Where arrears of benefit are identified as being due to a claimant but that claimant is deceased, provision exists for the arrears to be paid to the person who, in the opinion of the Secretary of State, is entitled to the payment.

Family Expenditure Survey

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he has taken in the forthcoming 1996 report on households below average income to issue adjusted and unadjusted results to take account of the lack of representation of the homeless and the under-representation of (a) those aged 75 years and over, (b) those unemployed for six months and more and (c) the chronically sick and disabled, in the annual reports of the family expenditure survey. [33554]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The statistical series households below average income has been based on data from the family expenditure survey, which collects information on income only from people living in private households. The annual reports of the FES have not sought to correct for under or over-representation of various groups in the FES sample. However, HBAI statistics have always grossed the sample estimates to correct for variations in FES response rates and thereby to make the results more representative of the population living in private households. The Department's statisticians have reviewed the grossing of survey data and chosen a new grossing regime which will be adopted when HBAI switches to using data from the family resources survey. Details can be found in the HBAI methodological review report, a copy of which is in the Library.

There are no current plans to extend the coverage of the FES or family resources survey or to set up a new survey to collect information from people who are homeless or who live in institutions. There would be considerable methodological difficulties in collecting representative income data for these people. The Department's statisticians judge that, in general, the picture presented by HBAI statistics would not be greatly altered by the inclusion of such groups.

War Pensions

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are currently in receipt of (a) war widows pensions and (b) war pensions; and what were the equivalent figures (i) five years ago, (ii) 10 years and (iii) 15 years ago. [34043]

Mr. Heald: This information is in the table.

As at 31 March 1996 a total of 57,497 war widows' pensions and 265,375 war disablement pensions were in payment.

	31 December 1980	31 December 1985	31 December 1990	31 December 1995
War Widows' Pension	76,500	64,859	54,124	49,726
War Disablement Pension	266,478	220,256	191,870	264,597

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received from which organisations with regard to allowing (a) partial and (b) total disregard of war pensions and war widows' pension, in the calculation of housing and other benefit entitlements. [34042]

Mr. Heald: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 23 January 1996, Official Report, column 221.

Since January 1996, this Department has received a further 71 letters from hon. Members, and 69 letters from members of the public, local authorities and other interested parties.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Mr. Brian Parsons

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Devon and Cornwall police as to when they completed their inquiry into the case of Mr. Brian Parsons arising from the recent submissions made by his solicitors to the Home Secretary; what further inquiries they have made; and when he expects to complete his consideration of the case. [32750]

Mr. Kirkhope: We received from Devon and Cornwall police in November 1995 a final report into certain matters raised in the representations which have been made on behalf of Mr. Parsons. Our provisional conclusion is that grounds have not emerged for referring the case to the Court of Appeal. I am writing today to the hon. Member and to others setting out the basis on which these provisional conclusions have been reached.

Prisons (Computer Software)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if computer software equipment operated by prisons under private management has to be approved by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [33547]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 21 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about what approval is required for computer software equipment operated by prisons under private management.

The contractual agreements for prisons under private management have no requirement for commercial software to be approved before installation and use.

As with prisons in the public sector, privately managed prisons are provided with the local inmate data system (LIDS). This system is run from a central processor in each prison. No prison management is authorised to load any other software onto this central processor.

Prisons (Education)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money was spent on prison education in (a) cash and (b) real terms in 1978–79 and 1994–95; how much time was made available in each of these years; how many prisoners attended courses; and what was the cost per prisoner receiving education and the cost per prisoner whether or not receiving education in (i) Wales and (ii) the regions of England. [30709]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 4 June 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Win Griffiths, dated 21 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about spending on education in 1978–79 and 1994–95.

The requested information is not available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost: prisons are operated on a national basis and separate statistics for England and Wales are therefore not available. The table below shows expenditure on education and cost per prisoner in cash and real terms for 1978–79 and 1994–95.

Prisons (Cells)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in gaols in England and Wales are currently doubling up in cells designed for one; what was the equivalent figure 12 months ago; and if he will make a statement. [33437]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 20 June 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 21 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners currently doubling up in cells designed for one.

At the end of May 1996, there were 8,430 prisoners doubling up in cells designed for one. This represents 15.5. per cent of the total prison population. At the end of May 1995, there were 8,362 prisoners sharing accommodation designed for one. This represented 16.5 per cent of the total prison population.

Prisons (Costs)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the methodology and research used to compare the cost of public and private gaols during 1993–94; and if he will make a statement. [33441]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 20 June 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 21 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking if he will publish the methodology and research used to compare the cost of public and private jails during 1993–94.

It is not possible to publish the study carried out by LEK Partnership comparing costs of private and public sector prisons using 1993–94 data, as it contains a considerable amount of commercially confidential information. This is because cost information was drawn from tender documents, as actual operating costs were not then available for the full year.

Summary results: LEK study of private and public sector performance

Prisons (Staff)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of staff employed in the Prison Service headquarters and central services on 1 January; what is the estimated change in staff numbers over the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [33442]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 20 June 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 21 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of staff employed at Prison Service headquarters.

At the end of October 1995 (the latest date on which detailed figures are available) there were 2130 full time equivalent staff in post in Prison Service headquarters. The Service aims to reduce the number of staff in headquarters to around 1800 full time equivalents by October 1996 and to around 1450 by April 1999.

Prisoners (Privileges)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have achieved (a) basic, (b) standard and (c) enhanced privilege status; and if he will make a statement. [33443]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 20 June 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 21 June 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners who have achieved (a) basic, (b) standard and (c) enhanced privilege status.

Information on the number of prisoners on the privilege levels of incentives schemes is not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Companies

Mr. Batiste: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the external financing requirements of the nuclear companies have been adjusted for 1996–97; and what impact this has had on public expenditure. [34399]

Mr. Lang: The external financing requirements have been adjusted to Electricity (England and Wales) £-42 million, Electricity (Scotland) £0 million and British Nuclear Fuels £-29 million to take account of the restructuring of the nuclear generating industry on 31 March 1996, agreed changes to provision of Nirex payments and the outcome of contractual negotiations between Nuclear Electric plc and British Nuclear Fuels. These changes have no impact on overall public expenditure.

ENVIRONMENT

Satellite-derived Data

Sir Michael Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list the level of his Department's funding in current and future years for the purchase of satellite-derived data; [33254]

(2) what current use is made of satellites to provide environmental data for his Department; and if he will make a statement. [33253]

Mr. Clappison: The Department uses Earth observation data from satellites directly and also indirectly through commissioned research. The advanced along track scanning radiometer, to be flown in 1999 to test for the onset of human-induced climate changes, is an unique example of instrument purchase. Funding will be £15 million between 1991 and 1999. Satellite-derived data contribute to commissioned research including the climate change predictions of the Hadley centre, the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology land cover map of Great Britain and the planned countryside survey 2000, north-east Atlantic rainfall and sea state climatology, and North sea plankton growth. Specific costs for the satellite data are not kept centrally. The Environment Agency uses satellite-derived data for water catchment management, diffuse pollution assessment and oil spill monitoring, and for research on flood defence. Specific future funding has yet to be identified. The Department keeps under review the further potential of satellite-derived data to provide information at an appropriate cost.

Air Pollution (West Midlands)

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which areas have been identified in the west midlands as registering a level of air pollution deemed detrimental to human health. [33341]

Mr. Clappison: A summary of exceedences of national and international guidelines and standards for air pollution levels across the United Kingdom, including the west midlands, is included in the Department of the Environment's "Digest of Environmental Statistics No. 18, 1996" and "Air Pollution in the United Kingdom: 1994", published on behalf of the Department by the National Environmental Technology Centre. Copies of both reports have been placed in the Library of the House of Commons.

Noise Pollution

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the level of complaints received by the statutory authorities in respect of noise pollution by (a) metropolitan district and (b) region in each of the last five years. [33343]

Mr. Clappison: This information is not collected by my Department. However, the Chartered Institute of Environmental Health carries out an annual survey of statistics of environmental noise complaints made to local authorities in England and Wales. I shall write to the hon. Member with further details

Road Traffic (West Midlands)

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning the level of road traffic and its effects on health in the west midlands. [33340]

Mr. Clappison: I have received a number of letters from Members of Parliament and the public concerning air quality, but I am not aware of any correspondence on this specific subject.

Heavy Traffic (Health Problems)

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviroment what estimate has been made of the number of people suffering health problems caused by heavy traffic near their homes by (a) metropolitan district, (b) county council and (c) London borough. [33342]

Mr. Clappison: The scientific and technical basis for making such specific estimates is not available. However, the independent Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollution and the Advisory Group on Medical Aspects of Air Pollution Episodes, which advise the Goverment on such matters, have published several reports on the impact on public health of emissions from road traffic and other sources in the United Kingdom as a whole.

Copies of the reports have been placed in the Library of the House.

TREASURY

Prompt Payment Code

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Government Departments to date have not signed up to the Confederation of British Industry's prompt payment code; and if he will make a statement. [31431]

Mrs. Angela Knight: None.

Unemployment Statistics (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to improve the collection of statistics relating to unemployment in respect of black and other ethnic minority communities. [33602]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The collection and publication of unemployment and other labour market statistics relating to black and other ethnic minority groups were improved in 1992 with the introduction of the quarterly labour force survey. To obtain reliable figures for smaller sub-groups of the population surveyed, such as ethnic minority groups, the Office for National Statistics averages the data over several quarters. The ONS published a description of the methodology used and statistics produced in the June 1996 issue of "Labour Market Trends". ONS will publish further guidance for users in the autumn.

Construction Industry

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people there are currently employed in the construction industry in the United Kingdom; and what were the corresponding figures five and 10 years previously. [33801]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information from the labour force survey is as follows:

Employment[1] in construction: United Kingdom (thousands), not seasonally adjusted

Winter 1995–96 1,819

Spring 1995 1,835

Spring 1990 2,141

Spring 1985 1,804

[1] Includes employees, self-employed, Government-supported training and employment programmes and, since 1992, unpaid family workers.

Tax Offices (Yorkshire)

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list, in ranked order, those tax offices in Yorkshire that have achieved the targets set by the taxpayers charter. [33622]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 20 June 1996]: The taxpayers charter sets out the general principles by which the Inland Revenue operates. To meet commitments under the charter, individual areas of work are targeted. The targets are published and included in the operating plan of each regional executive office. In order to achieve the performance set out in the operating plans, targets are set for each tax office. As these vary depending on the individual circumstances in each office, it is not possible to draw any comparison between the performance of individual offices.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Public Appointments

Mr. Walden: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what measures she intends to take to encourage applications from members of the public to take up appointments on her Department's public bodies. [34464]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I believe that it is very important to encourage a wide range of people with the right skills and experience to consider public service. I have commissioned advertisements in the national press, the first of which will appear in The Sunday Times on 23 June, inviting applications from members of the public willing to serve on one of the bodies sponsored by my Department when suitable vacancies arise.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Departmental Personnel

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of the personnel employed by her Department work on the employment aspects of her responsibilities. [33549]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table gives staff numbers in the Department and its agencies on 1 April 1996. Policies and programmes for education, vocational training and employment are increasingly integrated following the merger of the old Education and Employment Departments. Except in the agencies, the duties of officials reflect this and in many cases it is not possible to make the distinction that the hon. Member seeks.

Judicial Review

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on how many occasions in each Session since 1991–92 legislation has been introduced into Parliament by her Department, with the purpose of (a) removing the effects of a judicial review decision or (b) implementing a judicial review decision; and if she will list the relevant legislative provisions. [33584]

Mr. Robin Squire: No central record of this is retained, but the Department is not aware of any such in respect of either the DFEE or the former Departments in relation to current functions.

School Funding

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what additional resources her Department has made available under the headings of school improvement and school effectiveness in recent years to (a) local education authorities and (b) grant-maintained schools; and, in each case, under what headings resources have been reduced to meet the additional costs. [33747]

Mr. Robin Squire: Support for school improvement and effectiveness is available to LEA-maintained schools through the grant for education support and training programme. With this programme, total expenditure on school effectiveness grants supported in 1995–96 was £121.5 million; this has risen to £134 million in the current financial year.

Support for the same purposes is available to grant-maintained schools through special purpose grants (development). It is for the schools themselves, as self-governing institutions, to decide how best to target these and other resources. The grants are paid by the Funding Agency for Schools, and I have asked the chairman of the Funding Agency for Schools to write to the hon. Member.

Resources for school effectiveness and improvement for publicly funded schools are provided within the totals provided by Parliament for education, and not at the expense of other headings.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what funding is provided by her Department specifically for governor training and support to enhance school effectiveness in (a) local education authority schools and (b) grant-maintained schools. [33745]

Mr. Squire: As regards local education authority schools, the school effectiveness grant within the grant for education support and training programme includes governor training and support to enhance effectiveness. It is for individual local education authorities and schools to determine how to apportion expenditure between the eligible categories defined in regulations (No. 734) and described in the Department's circular 8/95, in the light of local priorities.

As regards grant-maintained schools, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier. These schools may use special purpose grants (development) to support governor training as well as school effectiveness.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to improve the targeting of resources to assist the (a) black and (b) other ethnic minority unemployed. [33600]

Mrs. Gillan: The targeting of all the Department's programmes and services, including those delivered by training and enterprise councils and the Employment Service, is kept under regular review.

Student Drop-out Rates

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the latest available statistics for student drop-out rates from higher education. [33718]

Mr. Forth: Our latest estimate of the drop-out rate of students from full-time and sandwich first degree courses is 17 to 18 per cent. in the academic year 1993–94. A range is given because the introduction of a new data source has made it difficult to measure drop-out accurately. Drop-out covers all those leaving degree courses because of exam failure, ill health, personal and other reasons. It includes those switching to a lower level course, but excludes students transferring between degree courses or subjects at the same university. The rate reflects the progression of students through the whole length of the course.

National Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the advantages of reducing the priority accorded to workplace competence assessments in the design and delivery of national vocational qualifications. [33739]

Mr. Paice: Demonstration of competence in the workplace will remain a key feature of national vocational qualifications. As stated in our action plan in response to the Beaumont report, published on 27 March, the Government believe that a combination of assessment methods is desirable.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the progress of reform of the system of vocational qualifications. [33738]

Mr. Paice: Following the Government's action plan in response to the Beaumont review, the National Council on Vocational Qualifications has been asked to undertake a review of each NVQ in line with its 1995 criteria and guidance and the points in the action plan. That review has now started and NVQs will be reviewed on a rolling basis until April 1998.

Class Sizes

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average class size for the most recent year for which information is available at (a) key stage 3, (b) key stage 4 and (c) sixth forms in city technology colleges. [33919]

Mr. Robin Squire: The available information is shown in the following list:

Average size of one teacher classes in city technology colleges in England—January 1995

Pupils aged mainly under 14: 23.0

Pupils aged mainly 14 and 15: 20.0

Pupils aged mainly 16 and over: 10.5

TRANSPORT

Aviation Standards

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, columns 443–44, (1) on what basis the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and Bulgaria were selected for an inspection by the Civil Aviation Authority, [33291]

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of the results of the inspections carried out in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and Bulgaria. [33290]

Mr. Norris: The disruption in the former Yugoslavia raised doubts as to that state's ability to comply with International Civil Aviation Organisation safety standards. In the case of Bulgaria, the assessment of compliance with ICAO standards was undertaken following a number of safety-related complaints received from passengers travelling on Bulgarian registered aircraft.

In both cases, the Department of Transport felt that an independent assessment was necessary to ensure that ICAO standards were being adhered to. The reports of such inspections are commercially confidential and could be released only with the consent of the country involved.

Satellite Navigation

Sir Michael Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies his Department has made of the potential benefits for the United Kingdom in the transition to the future global navigation satellite system. [33257]

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport has not carried out any studies of the potential benefits to the UK in the transition to the future global navigation satellite system. However, officials from the Department and the Civil Aviation Authority are participating in various European and international forums, including the International Civil Aviation Organisation, Eurocontrol, the European Space Agency, the International Maritime Organisation and the European Union. One of the main issues currently being examined in these forums is the benefits of future GNSS.

Sir Michael Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will indicate the levels of his Department's funding allocated in current and future years to support United Kingdom participation in the European Space Agency satellite navigation development programme. [33256]

Mr. Norris: My Department has allocated £1.043 million per year for 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99 for satellite navigation development work. The proportion of this to be allocated to UK participation in the European Space Agency's satellite navigation development programme has yet to be decided.

Train Arrivals and Departures

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he collates relating to trains leaving and arriving at domestic destinations; and if he will make a statement on trends over the last five years. [33110]

Mr. Watts: My Department receives summary information concerning passenger train punctuality and reliability, collated by British Rail for the services under its overall control and by the franchising director for franchised services. The present arrangements were introduced with the British Rail passengers charter in 1992; annual results are therefore available only from 1992–93 onwards The data show that while there was deterioration during 1994, in part due to the National Union of Rail, Maritime and Transport Workers strike, overall there has been a slight improvement in both punctuality and reliability.

Transport Supplementary Grant

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out for each local authority in England the value of the bids made in their 1995 transport policies and programmes submissions for the award of transport supplementary grant for 1996–97 and the value of transport supplementary grant awarded by his Department for (a) major highway schemes eligible for transport supplementary grant, (b) major highway schemes not eligible for transport supplementary grant, (c) structural maintenance on carriageways, (d) structural maintenance on bridges, (e) major public transport projects, (f) minor works: highways, (g) minor works: public transport, and (h) minor works: local safety schemes and (i) parking. [33301]

Mr. Norris: Department of Transport support for local authority capital expenditure on transport infrastructure may be given as transport supplementary grant, TSG, grant under section 56 of the Transport Act 1968, or credit approvals.

TSG is given for major highway scheme on roads of more than local importance, structural maintenance on the carriageways of principal roads and assessment, strengthening and other structural maintenance of bridges and highway structures. It is payable at a rate of 50 per cent. of accepted expenditure. Section 56 grant is given to major public transport schemes only. Credit approvals are given to match TSG and section 56 payments and for any worthwhile expenditure ineligible for grant.

The introduction of the package approach means that resources allocated for minor works may be used flexibly for either highway or public transport infrastructure works. No allocations were made specifically for parking.

Tables showing the bids from, and allocations of grants and credit approvals to, the local authorities in England for 1996–97 have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many package bids for transport supplementary grant have been submitted to his department since their introduction; how many of these bids have been successful; and what is the total level of package-based funding awarded to date. [33302]

Mr. Norris: The figures are given in the table.

Settlement Year	Number of package bids submitted	Number of package bids accepted	Funding for package minor works (£ million)
1994–95	46	13	13
1995–96	82	39	64
1996–97	83	53	79

In addition to the funding for package minor works, we expect all new major schemes in package areas to be justified in the context of the package. Total package funding—including new major schemes—comes to £79 million in 1995–96 and £119 million in 1996–97.

Air Operations International

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what applications have been made by Air Operations International to operate flights in and out of the United Kingdom. [33283]

Mr. Norris: No applications to operate flights to the UK have been made to the Department of Transport by Air Operations International, which does not possess an operating licence or an air operator's certificate. I understand that the Swedish aeronautical authorities are currently considering an application for an air operator's certificate by Air Operations International. The Department has asked for a copy of the operating licence if and when one is issued.

The terms of EC regulations 2407/92 and 2408/92 on, respectively, the licensing of air carriers and access for Community carriers to intra-Community air routes mean that carriers with a valid operating licence granted by a country in the European Economic Area are not required to apply for permission to operate services from the UK to a destination inside the EEA.

Air Operations International would, however, need to apply to the Department for permission to operate flights from the UK to destinations outside the EEA.

Air Operations of Europe

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the occasions when permits to operate to and from the United Kingdom were issued by (i) the Civil Aviation Authority and (ii) his Department to Air Operations of Europe after 10 October 1994. [33531]

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport is the responsible body for issuing permits to operate to and from the UK. Since 10 October 1994 the Department has granted permission to Air Operations of Europe to operate in its own right to and from the UK on the following dates: 26 May 1995, 10 August 1995, 22 September 1995 and on 17 April.

Red Routes

Mr. Forman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the impact of red routes on small retail businesses along such routes. [33616]

Mr. Norris: I am determined that the needs of local businesses are considered fully before red routes are introduced. The Traffic Director for London, who is responsible for co-ordinating the introduction of the red route network, gives full consideration to how these needs can best be met. The traffic director monitors the effects of red routes on businesses and his executive summary of the first study, "Red Routes and Retailing", published in October 1995, has been placed in the Library.

Driving Theory Test Centre, Doncaster

Sir Harold Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will review the application of the service specification in order to institute a driving theory test centre for Doncaster. [33638]

Mr. Norris: Proposals for theory test centres in the Doncaster area comply with the service specification for the theory test service delivery contract. I believe that the announced plans reflect a realistic balance between cost, the travelling distances to centres for candidates, and the frequency at which test sessions would be available.

For an additional test centre to be sited in the Doncaster area, a robust case would need to demonstrate that special circumstances or difficulties applied in the case of this area.

Sir Harold Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what population figures and densities he has used for the towns of (a) Doncaster, (b) Southport and (c) Scunthorpe in deciding that Doncaster should be treated differently from (b) and (c) in respect of driving theory tests. [33637]

Mr. Norris: The population figures used in determining the network of driving theory test centres were taken from table 15.1 of a Central Statistical Office publication "Regional Trends—1994" published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office. The figures for the districts in which the following towns are located are:

(a) Doncaster—population density 505 persons per sq. km. Candidates should be within a 20-mile radius of the nearest theory test centre;

(b) Southport—population density 1,929 persons per sq. km. Candidates should be within a five-mile radius of the nearest theory test centre; and

(c) Scunthorpe—population density 1,836 persons per sq. km. Candidates should be within a five-mile radius of the nearest theory test centre.

The criteria used for located driving theory test centres are set out in my reply today to the right hon. Member, Ref. 33639.

Sir Harold Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what criteria he used to determine that residents of Doncaster, Central should travel to Scunthorpe or Sheffield for driving theory tests; [33639]

(2) what distances he has used between Doncaster and Scunthorpe and Doncaster and Sheffield to determine that Doncaster should not have a driving theory test centre. [33640]

Mr. Norris: The criteria for locating theory test centres across Great Britain were determined in order to give a balance between costs, the travelling distances to centres for candidates and the frequency with which test sessions would be available.

Theory tests will be available:

within five miles in districts—usually towns or cities—with population density of greater than or equal to 1,250 persons per sq. km; within 40 miles in sparsely populated districts with a population density of less than 100 person per sq. km; within 20 miles in other districts where population density lies between these limits.

Doncaster lies in a district in the third category and within a 20-mile radius of both Sheffield and Scunthorpe driving theory test centre.

Asbestos

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the advantages of banning the use of asbestos in vehicle brakes and clutches; and if he will make a statement. [33631]

Mr. Norris: In 1994, a survey of companies producing asbestos products found that 4,5000 tonnes of chrysotile asbestos was used in friction materials, such as brakes and clutches, mainly for heavy goods vehicles. There is good evidence that, under conditions of use in brakes and clutches, chrysotile asbestos breaks down to less harmful products.

The Health and Safety Executive participated in a 1988 study by the International Programme on Chemical Safety—which comes under the auspices of the UN Environment Programme, the International Labour Organisation and the World Health Organisation—which found the following:

(a) production workers who make the brakes and clutches, have since the 1940s had generally low exposure and low risk compared to other asbestos workers;

(b) mechanics who maintain/replace brake linings have low exposure and risk, particularly if HSE's advice is followed;

(c) ambient exposure levels in areas where increased braking of vehicles occur, generally show either no increase, or only a very small increase, in the background level of asbestos fibres in the air. Any risk from environmental brake emission is therefore very small.

Nevertheless agreement has been reached within the United Nationals Economic Commission for Europe to prohibit the use of asbestos in the brake linings of vehicles first used on or after 1 October 1998. Discussions to align EU braking requirements with those of the UNECE are schedule for later this year.

School Transport

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will discuss with the Secretary of State for the Environment dispensation in respect of capping limits on expenditure to end the practice of seating three children to two seats in school transport. [33716]

Mr. Norris: The costs of ending the practice of seating three children to two seats in school transport were taken into account in deciding the education standard spending assessments. Increases in those assessments were taken into account in the capping guidelines for 1996–97. All local authority budgets for 1996–97 are now set.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the costs to local education authorities and schools of ending the practice of seating three children to two seats in school transport. [33717]

Mr. Norris: The costs associated with changes to the construction and use regulations to require seat belts in coaches and minibuses specifically used for the transport of children were given in the compliance cost assessment which accompanied the amended regulations in February. The costs associated with the consequential amendments to the Public Service Vehicle (Carrying Capacity) Regulations to remove the three for two concession where seat belts are fitted were included in the assessment.

My Department has not considered the costs of further changes to remove the three for two concession completely, as there is no safety justification for doing so, and this is therefore a matter for local authorities to consider in relation to their specific school transport provisions.

London Transport Buses

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the grant to London Transport Buses in 1995–96, and how it was spent. [33609]

Mr. Norris: In 1995–96 London Transport Buses received grant from London Transport amounting to £44.3 million. This comprised £30.4 million in support of bus operations, £8.9 million on investment and £5 million working capital.

Office of Passenger Rail Franchising

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the annual running costs of Opraf. [33813]

Mr. Watts: The annual running costs of Opraf for 1996–97 are £7.6 million for which the Government have sought approval in the Supply estimates laid before Parliament.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what total costs, including external costs and external costs for advice, have been incurred by the Rail Regulator to date in respect of rail privatisation; and what are the estimates for the current financial year. [33797]

Mr. Watts: I am advised by the Office of the rail regulator that its expenditure from the time of its establishment in 1993–94 has been as set out in the following table, which includes a column showing planned expenditure in the current year. The 1995–96 figures are provisional.

A64

Mr. Alison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will publish the draft orders under the Highways Act 1980 for the Highways Agency's proposals for improving the A64 at its junction with Top lane, Copmanthorpe. [33888]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Michael Alison, dated 21 June 1996:

As you know, the Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking when he will publish the draft Orders under the Highways Act 1980 for the Highways Agency's proposals for improving the A64 at its junction with Top Lane, Copmanthorpe.

You are aware that we held a public exhibition into the proposals in December 1995 and that we intended to publish draft Orders later this year. However, the Highways Agency Business Plan for 1996/97 has been agreed with Ministers and unfortunately we have no programme of local safety or small improvement schemes this year. The position for 1997/98 and beyond is of course unclear, and I am afraid that I cannot give any assurances about precisely when funds may be available to progress this scheme.

I know that you and your constituents will be very disappointed with this news, but our programmes have to reflect the current constraints on public expenditure.

[34491]

Mr. Watts: I have today placed a copy of the report in the Library. The total sale proceeds of £29.69 million, subject to final post completion adjustments, are divided as follows:

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Bosnia

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements the Government are making to ensure that refugees from Bosnia-Herzegovina are able to vote in the forthcoming elections for the new Mostar local authorities and in the planned nationwide elections in September. [33777]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: For the Mostar municipal elections due to be held on 30 June, the European Union has undertaken to designate one refugee voting centre in each of the four countries outside former Yugoslavia where the majority of Mostar refugees live, and to support financially bus transport to Mostar for refugees who wish to participate in the elections.

The Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe and the International Organisation of Migration will organise registration and voting for the nationwide elections for Bosnians resident in third countries. As a voluntary contribution to this process, Her Majesty's Government have made available office facilities for a registration and voting centre to be run under IOM supervision and have helped with the distribution of information to refugee populations.

Mr. Ancram: No research into the earlier school starting age in Northern Ireland has been specifically commissioned. However, there is a range of research providing evidence of the long-term benefits of an early start in education.

Health and Safety

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the cost in each of the past five years of rectifying working conditions that were the responsibility of his Department and its agencies, to bring them up to acceptable health and safety standards, detailing incidents involving information technology and those involving expenditure of more than £5,000. [33507]

[32820]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

WALES

Health and Safety

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost in each of the past five years of (a) sick pay and (b) compensation paid to employees of his Department or their families, or members of the public, as a result of (i) minor, (ii) major and (iii) fatal injuries related to the work of his Department, detailing incidents involving information technology and those involving expenditure of more than £5,000. [33526]

Mr. Hague: (a) Expenditure on sick pay as a result of injuries related to work is not separately recorded and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

(b) Compensation paid as a result of injuries related to work was as follows:

Financial year	Minor injury	Major injury[1] £	Fatal injury
1995–96	nil	nil	nil
1994–95	nil	3,650	nil

[33524]

Mr. Hague: Internal health and safety monitoring and reporting is a continuous process within the Department. Many minor matters are reported in the course of a year and action taken. The Health and Safety Commission, through the Health and Safety Executive, has become involved on one occasion in the last five years.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost in each of the past five years of rectifying working conditions that were the responsibility of his Department and its agencies, to bring them up to acceptable health and safety standards, detailing incidents involving information technology and those involving expenditure of more than £5,000. [33527]

Mr. Hague: The information requested is not available. Prior to 1 April 1996, responsibilities for accommodation matters were divided between Property Holdings and the Department. Health and safety costs related to accommodation are not kept separately, but are subsumed within the cost of maintaining the Department's premises generally.

Gwent Health Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what consultations he has had with the chairman of Gwent health authority concerning the provision of (a) a draft and (b) a final report of the investigation by the authority's board into the appointment in January

1996 of a senior manager who was made redundant in December 1995 from Gwent Community Healthcare NHS trust; [34058]

(2) if he will place a copy in the Library of the report of the board of Gwent health authority into its investigation into the appointment of a senior manager in January 1996; [34051]

Mr. Hague: These are operational matters for the Welsh Development Agency. I will arrange for the chief executive to write to the hon. Member and for a copy of his letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what benefits he expects will accrue in respect of the creation of jobs from the recent sale of land owned by the Welsh Development Agency. [33885]

Mr. Hague: I have set the agency a target for 1996–97 of creating or safeguarding 12,500 jobs in Wales. This will be achieved through a variety of programmes which are to be funded by some £80 million in receipts—excluding receipts from European programmes—and £40 million in grant in aid; the property disposal programme will contribute towards the receipts total.

HEALTH

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on whose authority the special meeting of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on 11 October 1995 was called. [31897]

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Committee on Safety of Medicines has issued a letter relating to desogestrel and gestodene in terms of paragraph 6(1)(c) of schedule 2 to the Medicines for Human Use (Marketing Authorisations Etc.) Regulations 1994 since 18 April. [31858]

Mr. Malone: Communications between the committee and licence holders are confidential.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) of 19 December 1995, Official Report, columns 1150–51, if the United Kingdom representatives on the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products communicated to Ministers the results of the CPMP deliberations on 18 October prior to the issuing of the "dear doctor" letter of the same date. [31894]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 30 April, Official Report, column 499.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) of 19 December 1995, Official Report, columns 1151–52, what factors have prevented the Licensing Authority from reinforcing the advice of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on desogestrel and gestodene. [31863]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1149.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis the special meeting of the Committee on Safety of Medicines held on 13 October was called. [31859]

Mr. Malone: The meeting of 13 October was called because there was an urgent need to obtain independent expert advice on important new evidence concerning the safety of oral contraceptives.

Heart Surgery

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many persons over the age of 65 years received major heart surgery at hospitals covering the Greater London area during 1995. [33705]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available.

St. George's Hospital, Tooting

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private hospital beds there are currently at St. George's hospital, Tooting. [33707]

Mr. Malone: This information is not held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Dr. Elizabeth Vallance, chairman of St. George's Healthcare national health service trust, for details.

Unique Patient Numbers

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what procedure a hospital will be able to access the unique number for an NHS patient; if all hospitals will have such a procedure in place before the launch date of the project; and if he will make a statement. [33989]

Mr. Horam: An acute hospital will obtain the new national health service number for a patient from one of three possible sources: the number will be included in the general practitioner's referral letter; the number will already be present on the hospital's database if this is not the first referral; or the number will be accessed via a tracing service.

It is planned for all acute hospitals to have access to these facilities by April 1997.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number and proportion of hospitals, and the number and proportion of general practitioner practices, which now have systems in place to handle the unique NHS patient number. [33990]

Mr. Horam: No detailed estimates have been prepared of the number of hospitals which have systems in place to handle the new national health service number. It will not be possible to produce reliable estimates until suppliers of hospital patient administration systems have been able to respond to the statement of requirements which will be issued shortly.

All general practitioner practices that have been linked electronically to their health authorities now have systems in place which handle the new NHS number. At the end of May 1996, the number of practices with this capability was 5,700, which is 67 per cent. of all practices.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many parliamentary questions to his Department were referred for answer to the chief executive or other senior official of a non-departmental agency for which he has responsibility for the 1994–95 parliamentary Session. [34331]

Mr. Horam: Following a search of the parliamentary on-line information service database, we have identified a total of 56 such parliamentary questions which were answered during the 1994–95 parliamentary Session. This represents around 1 per cent. of the total.

Children (Employment)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of young people in the United Kingdom (a) under 15 years working (i) less than and (ii) more than 10 hours per week, and (b) under 13 years in paid employment. [33862]

Mr. Bowis: Such information as is available centrally was published in the April 1995 edition of the Employment Gazette, copies of which are available in the Library.

Osteopathy

Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to make osteopathy services available on the national health service. [33809]

Mr. Horam: It is for local purchasers to decide, in the light of available resources and competing priorities, on the purchase of the most appropriate forms of treatment to meet the assessed health needs of their population. The reforms we have introduced in the national health service have made it easier for those doctors who would like to provide osteopathy services for their patients to do so.

In April, a two-year pilot project commenced to assess whether osteopathy and chiropractic should be added to the standard list of goods and services which general practice fundholders can purchase on behalf of their patients.

Smoking

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his most recent estimate of the number of deaths in the United Kingdom per annum caused by secondary smoking. [34045]

Mr. Horam: In its fourth report, published in 1988, the Independent Scientific Committee on Smoking and Health estimated the number of lung cancer deaths in non-smokers exposed to environmental tobacco smoke over most of their lives as "several hundred deaths per year".

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the total annual cost to the NHS arising from illnesses caused by tobacco smoking. [34046]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Clwyd, South-West (Mr. Jones) on 12 June, Official Report, columns 187–88.

Childhood Cancer

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the conclusions of (a) the fourth report by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment and (b) the National Radiological Protection Board R-276 report, in respect of childhood leukaemia and domestic radon; and what estimate he has made of the reduction in incidence of childhood leukaemia if the radon action limit were reduced to 200 bq per cubic metre. [34056]

Mr. Horam: The Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment's fourth report concluded that there was a continuing excess of leukaemia and other cancers in Seascale ward over four decades. This excess is unlikely to be due to chance alone. A number of possible factors which might have caused the excess have been considered but none of them, alone, could account for the increase. COMARE advised against further work specifically addressing the Seascale cluster until research indicates a new hypothesis to test. The Government accepted these conclusions.

The National Radiological Protection Board report R-276 was designed to provide input for COMARE. Its main conclusions were that the total number of fatal radiation induced leukaemias and non-Hodgkin's lymphomas in the period 1945 to 1992 was 0.36, of which most—78 per cent.—were caused by natural radiation.

The United Kingdom action level for radon is already at 200 bq per cubic metre.

Electro-magnetic Fields

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the findings of the national control case study of childhood cancer with regard to the effect of radon and electro-magnetic fields; and what recommendations the National Radiological Protection Board has made arising therefrom. [34053]

Mr. Horam: The United Kingdom childhood cancer study organised by the United Kingdom Co-ordinating Committee on Cancer Research commenced in April 1992, following preliminary studies from 1 January 1992 to 31 March 1992.

Field work and the collection of data are expected to be completed by the end of 1997 with subsequent analysis of the data.

The findings of the whole report will be submitted for publication in peer reviewed scientific journals. The UKCCCR will also disseminate the results more widely after publication.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what studies the National Radiological Protection Board has undertaken relating to the effects of electric railway conductors; and what were its findings; [34067]

(2) what studies of the effects of exposure to electric fields have been undertaken by the National Radiological Protection Board; and with what results; [34055]

(3) if he will make a statement on the current assessment of the National Radiological Protection Board advisory group in respect of non-ionising radiation and the epidemiological evidence of a link between exposure to electro-magnetic fields and the incidence of leukaemia; what recent studies it has undertaken; and what were its findings. [34504]

Mr. Horam: The National Radiological Protection Board undertakes research into the effects of electro-magnetic fields on human health to support its advice to the Government and the publication of guidance. It has not carried out any specific studies relating to the effects of fields from electrified railway lines, although a review of magnetic fields associated with electrical transport has been published by NRPB which indicated that such exposure would not result in exceeding NRPB guidelines.

Of two studies on rodents exposed to electric fields, one found no significant effects on two indices of central nervous system arousal and the other found that mains frequency fields had no effect on electrical activity in the rat brain. Further studies on high-level electric fields did not have a mutagenic effect on male germ cells.

The Advisory Group on Non-ionising Radiation concluded in its 1992 report that human health—epidemiological—findings provided no firm evidence of the existence of a cancer hazard from exposure to power frequency EMF that may be associated with residence near major sources of electricity supply.

Following a review of subsequent findings, the group concluded that, although the studies did not establish that exposure to power frequency EMF is a cause of cancer, they provided weak evidence to suggest that the possibility exists. Recommendations for further research were made and the advisory group is currently carrying out a further assessment taking into account studies which have been published since its last report.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the attraction of radon decay product aerosols to electro-magnetic field sources. [34057]

Mr. Horam: A study has recently been commissioned to investigate the concentration and transport of radon daughter nuclei near sources of power frequency electro-magnetic fields. This is being carried out under the Department's radiation protection research programme.

Judicial Review

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many decisions by his Department were challenged by way of judicial review in each Session since 1991–92; and if he will list in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld by the court, (b) the court found for the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgement and (d) the Department appealed successfully against the judicial review decision; [33570]

(2) on how many occasions in each Session since 1991–92 legislation has been introduced into Parliament by his Department, with the purpose of (a) removing the effects of a judicial review decision or (b) implementing a judicial review decision; and if he will list the relevant legislative provisions. [33587]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 19 June 1996]: Information in the form requested is not available. Since April 1994, 23 decisions have been challenged by way of judicial review. In 11 cases, the Department's decision was upheld by the court; in four cases, the court found for the applicant, and in none of those cases did the Department appeal against the judicial review decision. Four cases were settled out of court; and four cases are on-going. In that time, one piece of legislation—the NHS (Charges for Drugs and Appliances) Amendment (No. 2) Regulations 1995—has been introduced in order to implement a judicial review decision.

Information for any period before April 1994 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Lenient Sentences

Mr. Cox: To ask the Attorney-General how many sentences were referred to the Court of Appeal as being too lenient in 1995; and in how many cases the sentence was increased. [33715]

The Attorney-General: In 1995, 77 cases were referred to the Court of Appeal in England and Wales and four in Northern Ireland. Three were subsequently withdrawn in England and Wales. To date, 64 of those cases have been heard by the Court of Appeal. Sentence was increased in 58 cases out of 64 or 91 per cent.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 279

SESSION 1995–96

10th June—21st June 1996

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
